ARE a safe and reliable remedy for all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary people but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer exactly their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical profession. They do not profess to be a cure all, but for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession, over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:

Poetry.

WOMAN'S HEART.

Say, what is woman's heart? A thing
Where all the deepest feelings spring;
A harp, whose tender chords reply
Unto the touch in harmony;
A world whose fairy scenes are fraught
With all the coloured dreams of thought;
A barque that still will blindly move
Upon the treacherous seas of love.

What is its love? A ceaseless,
A changeless star, an endless dream;
A smiling flower that will not die—
A beauty and a mystery;
Its storms as light as April showers,
Its joys as bright as April flowers,
Its hopes as sweet as summer air,
And dark as winter its despair.

What are its hopes? Rainbows that throw
A radiant light where'er they go,
Smiling when heaven is overcast,
Yet melting into storms at last;
Bright cheats that come with siren words
Beguiling it, like summer birds,
That stay while nature round them blooms,
But flee away when winter comes.

What is hate? A passing frown,
A single weed mid blossoms sown,
That cannot flourish there for long;
A harsh note in an angel's song;
A summer cloud that all the while
Is lightened by a sunbeam's smile;
A passion that scarce hath a part
Amidst the gems of a woman's heart.

And what is its despair? A deep
Fever, that leaves no tears to weep;
A woe that works with silent power,
As canker worms destroy a flower;
A viper that shows not its wakes
Until the heart it preys on breaks;
A mist that robs a star of light.

Then what is woman's heart? A thing
Where all the deepest feelings spring;
A harp whose tender chords reply
Unto the touch in harmony;
A world whose fairy scenes are fraught
With all the coloured dreams of thought;
A barque that still will blindly move
Upon the treacherous seas of love.

Selections.

ONLY A COUNTRY GIRL.

'You're mistaken; I would sooner die than marry a country girl.'

'But, Fred, suppose her intelligent, moral, full of natural poetry, tender hearted, graceful, unspoiled by admiration, a guileless, simple loving creature.'

'Oh!' said Fred, laughing, 'choice collection of virtue and grace. Country beauties are always sweet, and so are country cows. No, I tell you, if she were as lovely as an angel, with the best sense in the world, still if unskilled in music and literature, with no soul above churns and knitting needles, I would not marry her for a fortune.'

'Ha! ha!' laughed Helen Irvine, but it was a very piano-forte laugh, away down in the very corner of her heart.

Hidden by the trunk of a large tree, she sat reading within a few feet of the egotist.

In another moment the young lady came in sight. Fred's face crimsoned, and he whispered with visible trepidation—

'Do you think she heard me?'

'No,' rejoined the other, audibly, 'she shows no resentment, she has not even looked up from her book; you are safe; she could not have heard you, but what an angel she is.'

Yes, Helen was an angel as far as outward beauty might merit the encomium.—She sat half reclining on a rustic seat, striving to smooth out the dimples in her cheeks as she laid her book aside her and began to twine an unfinished wreath of wild roses.

Leaning on one white arm, the gnarled white oak tree a background, flowers strewed around her, peeping from her white dress, she sat quite at ease, apparently unconscious that two handsome young gentleman were so near her.

Approaching with a low bow, upon which his mirror had met the seal of faultless elegance. Frederick Lane took the liberty of asking if the young lady would inform him where Mr. Irvine lived.

With an innocent smile the beauty looked up.

'Mr. Irvine, the only one living in the village is my father,' said she rising in a graceful and charming manner.

'The large house on a high ground, half hidden by trees and thick shrubbery, that's where we live. I believe it was an academy once; that's a sort of a select school isn't it?' with the most natural simplicity turning to Fred.

'Tell your father,' said he, that I shall do myself the honor to call upon him to-morrow. He will remember me, Frederick Lane, at your service.'

'Yes, sir, I will tell him for you,' said Helen, tucking her sleeve around her pretty arm, and making a rather formal curtsey.

Then, catching up her books and gathering some flowers, she hurried home.

'Now, father, mother, rust and ink,' exclaimed the merry girl, bounding into the room where the family were at supper, 'so sure as you and I live, that Mr. Lane you talk so much about, is in the village.—He will call here to-morrow—the first specimen of a city beau (as of course he is) all sentiment, refinement, faultless in kids and spotless in dickey, important and self-assured as one of that kind can possibly be. Promise me all of you, that you'll not lisp one word about music, reading, and writing in his presence, because I have a plan. Father will not, I know; but of you, sir, will keep quiet and ask no questions. I will give you that workbox you have coveted so long.

'Helen, you are not quite respectful,' said her father.

'Forgive me, dear father,' and her arms were around his neck. 'I always mean well, but I am thoughtless. There all is right now,' she added, kissing him lovingly on the temple.

'Come, sis, what say you?'

'Why, on that condition, I'll be as still as a mouse, but what a poor reason!'

'Ah! that's my own business,' said Helen, dancing out of the room.

* * * * * *

Helen sat at an open window, through which rose bushes thrust their blushing buds, making both a sweet shade and fragrance. The canary overhead burst forth every moment in wild snatches of glorious music. Helen was at work on long blue stockings, nearly finished, and her beautiful fingers flew like snow birds.

'You knit most admirably. Are you very fond of it?'

'Yes, quite. I like it better than anything else—that is I mean that I can chat well.'

'And do you read much?'

Fred's glance had travelled from the corners of his eyes to every corner, in search of some books or papers, but not a page or a leaf, yellow or rare, repaid his search.

'Oh, yes, sir!' said Helen with a mortified air.

'What books?' permit me to ask.

'I read the Bible a good deal,' she said gravely.

'Is that all?'

'Ah, of course not, and what do we not find in the Bible? History, poetry, eloquence, romance—the most thrilling pathos—'blushing and recollecting herself, she added in a manner as childish as it before had been dignified, 'as for the other books, let me see, I've got in my library; there's the primmer (counting on her fingers). Second Reader, Robinson Crusoe, Nursery Tales, Fairy Stories, two or three elements of something Biography of some persons or other, Mother's Magazine, and King William III. There, now, isn't that a very good assortment?'

Fred smiled.

'Perhaps I don't know as much as those who have went to school more,' she added as if disappointed at the mute rejoinder, 'but in making bread and butter and keeping house I am not to be outdone.'

The young man felt more pity than in love, but his visits did always so result.—

He began to feel a magnetic attraction, and he attributed it to Helen's beauty; but the truth is, her sweetness and artlessness of character, engaging manners and disposition, quite won the city-bred aristocrat Fred Lane. There was a freshness about everything she said or did. She perplexed as well as delighted him.

Often, as he was wondering how some homely expression of hers would be received in good society, some beautiful sentiment would suddenly drop like a pearl from her lips, more remarkable for originality than brilliancy.

'If I should fall into the snare,' thought he, 'I could educate her. It would be worth trying.'

It was useless to try to combat his passion; so at last he fell at Helen's feet, figuratively speaking, and confessed his love for her.

'I care not, Helen, only be mine,' was his invariable answer to her exclamation of unworthiness, 'how she would appear in society.'

* * * * * *

They were married, and had returned from their wedding tour; yet, the expression of the honeymoon, Fred was more in love than ever. At a grand entertainment given by the relatives of the bridegroom, Helen looked more beautiful than ever. Her husband did not insist that she should depart from simplicity, and indeed, without jewels or laces, with that fresh white robe, simple sash of blue, and ornaments of fir moss rose-es, she was by far the loveliest creature in the room.

As she entered the great saloon, blazing with light, her heart fainted her.

'Shall I love him as dearly?' she asked herself, 'if I find he is ashamed of me? I cannot bear the thought; but should he overcome all conventional notions, then I have a husband to be honored, and then he shall be proud of his wife.'

How she watched him as he presented her to one and another.

'Simple,' whispered a pretty girl, resplendent with diamonds, as she curled her lips and passed by.

The observation escaped neither Helen nor her husband. She looked at him,—He smiled a lover's smile and drew her closely to his side. Many in that brilliant gathering pitied poor Fred, and wondered why he had martyred himself on the shrine of ignorant rusticity.

But he! oh joy! he seemed to love her the more as she clung to his arm so timidly, his noble face expressed the pride he truly felt, he to lead as if he would have swept back the scorners with one motion of his hand, had they ventured too high on the shore of his pride. He seemed to excuse every look, every word, not in strict conformity to etiquettee; and Helen's heart beat high and tears came to her eyes, when she felt how noble a heart she had won.

The young bride stood near her husband talking in a low tone, when a new-comer appeared. She was a beautiful formed creature, with haughty features. Ill concealed scorn lurked in the brilliant eyes, whenever she glanced towards Helen. Once she hid away over the heart of Fred, and hearing whom he had married, she fancied her time had come.

'Do you suppose she knows anything?' whispered a low voice near her.

Helen's eyes sparkled, her face flushed indignantly. She turned to her husband. He was gone, speaking at a little distance with a friend.

'Do you play, Mrs. Lane?' she asked. There was a little mockery in the voice.

'A little,' answered Helen, blushing.

'And sing?'

'A little,' was the half reply.

'Then do us a favor,' exclaimed Miss Somers, looking askance at her companions

'Come, I myself will lead you to the instrument.

Hark! whose masterly touch! Instantly was the half spoken word arrested, the cold ear and haughty head were turned in listening surprise. Such melody. Such correct intonations. Such breadth, depth and vigorous touch. Who is she? She plays like an angel.'

And again hark! A voice rolls; a flood of melody, clear, powerful and passing sweet Astonishment gives many a faint cheek a deep scarlet. There is a deep silence unbroken, and the silver strains float up.

> Ay! care I not for cold neglect,
> Though tears unbidden start,
> And scorn is but a bitter word
> Save when it breaks the heart,
> If one be true,
> If one be true,
> The world may careless be,
> Since I may only keep my love,
> And tell my grief to thee.

The words were suddenly arrested on his lips. She turned from the piano and the unknown was his wife!

'I congratulate you, Fred,' said the young man at his side.

But he spoke to marble. The color had left his cheek as he walked slowly towards her.

If he was speechless with amazement so was not she. A rich bloom mantled her cheek, triumph made her eyes sparkle as they never did before; they flashed like diamonds. A crowd gathered to compliment her. In a graceful acknowledgement she blended wit and humour.

'How well she talks; who would have thought it? He has found a treasure,' was whispered all around the room.

Meanwhile, Frederick Lane stood like one enchanted, while his little rustic wife quoted books with perfect abandon, admired this one, condemned that.

A sedate-looking student lost himself in a Latin quotation; Helen smilingly finished it, and she received a look of eloquent thanks. Bonmots, repartee, language rich with fancy and imagery fell from her beautiful lips, as if they had received a touch from some fairy hand.

Still, Frederick was by her side like one in a dream, and pressed his hands over his bewildered eyes to be sure of his senses, when he saw her bending, a breathing vision of loveliness over the harp, her full arm leaning on its golden strings, heard again that rich voice now plaintive with some tender memory, rise and fall in sweet and sorrowful cadence.

'Tell me,' he said when alone, 'what does this mean? I feel like one awakened from a dream.'

'Only a country girl.'

'And then Helen, falling into her husband's arms exclaimed,—

'Forgive me, I am that little rustic you would sooner die than wed. Are you sorry you married me?'

'Sorry, my glorious wife. But, Helen, you could not deceive. Did I not understand you had never—'

'Been at an academy,' she broke in, 'never took a music lesson, never was taught to sing all very true, and yet I am all you see me here to night, myself my own teacher; with labor and diligence, I hope I am worthy to be the wife of one so good and exalted as I find my husband to be.'

Reader, wouldn't you and I like to be there just now, and hear her story, and see the bright smiles between her pretty face and dimples, as she tells how she banished the piano, books, harp, portfolio, music, all in an empty room by themselves, and, locking the door, left them to seclusion and dust, while the country girl, without any scheme, succeeded in convincing the well bred city gentleman that he could marry a charming rustic, if her fingers were more familiar with the churn and knitting needles, than they were with the piano and books.

How Many Would be Left?

When the following classes are taken out of our churches how many will be left?

All who will not pay their just debts.
All who are hypocritical.
All who are deceitful, and talk about others behind their backs.
All who go in deb without a prospect of paying the same.
All who are proud and scornful, holding themselves above their fellow men, and shunning those less fortunate than themselves.
All who worship money more than they do their Creator.
All who speculate on the ignorance of others.
All who are tattlers.
All who sell intoxicating liquors to make money.
All who think more of a wicked rich man than they do of a pious poor one.
All who oppress the poor.
All who make long prayers for the sake of being seen and heard by men.
All who are vain and self-conceited.

When these and a good many others that could be mentioned, are taken out, the church will be left almost without members. The religion of Jesus does not have any of the foregoing effects. It makes the true convert cheerful, hopeful, and charitable; disposed to visit the widow and orphan, and to keep unspotted from the world. It does not make one proud and scornful, but on the contrary, makes one desirous to do good—to be meek and humble and to be kind to all, as opportunity may offer. Oh! that we had less pretension in our churches and more genuine Christianity.

Death of the Intemperate.

It is a sad death—there is no comfort on that dying pillow, no repose, no voice of friendship bidding adieu, no lightning up of joy in the departing spirit. It is a frequent death—four every hour go through its gates in our land. It is an early death—few drunkards live out half their days. It is an unlamentable death—"I am glad he is gone," is the common saying when the bell announces the solemn event; even his family look for comfort now he is no more.—

Let it be soberly contemplated. First, by the moderate drinker, it may be his turn. Second, by the vender, he has filled the bottle and done the deed. Third, by the magistrate, he signed the license.—Fourth, by the needle-a parent, it may be the death of his own son. Fifth, if not too late by the drunkard himself, and let him escape as for his life. Habit hurries him onward, sickness hurries him onward. But oh! his end! Yes, his awful end! Oh! reader, how can you remain idle and see your brother man approaching to that awful end every day? By and by these things will stare you in the face. If you have done your duty and warned your fellow man of his danger, it may be well with you; otherwise, depend upon it, you stand on slippery ground and may have to share the same fate that awaits the drunkard.—Oh, professing Christians, how can you remain idle for one moment, and see your fellow man dropping into a drunkard's grave and perhaps a drunkard's hell, without raising your voice to warn him of the awful danger and the final fate of the drunkard's.

A sailor's wife at Portpatrick had just received intelligence that her husband had perished at sea. She was visited by a neighbour, who sympathized with her in her loss, and expressed a fear that she would be poorly off. "Dread I will," said the widow; "but he did all he could for me—he's saved me the expense of his burying."

LOVE AND RASCALITY.

(From the Hamilton Times.)

The city police last evening took into custody a spruce looking individual, a jeweller at one of the principal hotels, named Henry M. Bragg and hailing from Haverhill, Mass., who is charged with a multiplicity of swindling transactions perpetrated in the United States, among the rest being included the crime of forgery, for which his extradition is sought by the officer at whose instance the arrest was made, Mr. H. M. Hunter, of the Boston detective force. This party represents Bragg to be the most accomplished and enterprising rascal abroad; that numerous indictments are standing against him for large swindling transactions in various places, his operations being conducted on a large scale, and various parties have been done out of thousands of dollars. The alleged crime for which his extradition is demanded is forging the names of a firm in New Hampshire, and securing the delivery of quantities of leather from a manufactory by the fraud, realizing a profit of several thousand dollars. Bragg arrived in this city about a month since, and has been looking about for a place to open business in some branch not stated, and has also advertised for a dwelling. The most interesting circumstances in the case is that immediately preceding the arrival of the detective an attractive young woman reached the city, and entered on terms of intimacy with Bragg. The detective states that her name is Miss Tilton, and that she belongs to a wealthy and leading family of Haverhill, Mass. She has deserted respectable relatives and luxurious home through an infatuated attachment for Bragg, who has a wife and two children living at Haverhill. Her parents endeavored to break up the unhallowed attachment and save their daughter from a fate worse than death, and on condition that she should relinquish the association, her father made over $40,000 in her own right. She started off after Bragg immediately on obtaining possession of the money, and joined him in this city a day or two since. Her parents have been apprised of her whereabouts, and are on their way hither. Mr. Bragg is accompanied by another polished individual who gives the name of A. Sargent, from Boston. The detective represents him to be an accomplice of Bragg's in general villany and also in the present scheme to get possession of the young woman's forty thousand dollars. The pair are well supplied with means, and the case excites more than the ordinary amount of interest.

Mr. Bragg and his friend Sargent, on the other hand, declare that the case is a conspiracy on the part of the parties in the States, who have employed the detective to get Bragg across the lines by fair means or foul; that Miss Tilton is merely on a pleasure tour on her own responsibility, and incidentally came across old acquaintances in this city, &c., &c.

The case was appointed to be investigated before the police magistrate, at four o'clock this afternoon. J. E. Start, Esq., has been engaged as counsel for Bragg. It is understood that there is little probability that he will be committed for extradition, for the reason the alleged forgery was committed in a manner that will go clear of the treaty. So Mr Bragg will probably succeed in his enterprise, if reports concerning him are correct and Miss Tilton will ultimately enjoy the felicity of a sweet repentance, as many a foolish young woman has done before.

(From the Spectator of Tuesday)

Miss Tilton didn't keep her promise to go home with Detective Hunter, yesterday She seems complet ly wrapped up in Bragg and declares that life would be unendurable without his "engaging (!) society." How an accomplished and wealthy young lady could become so infatuated with a low-bred, black-hearted villain, such as Bragg evidently is, is wholly incomprehensible. She is at present under the wing of Sargent, the silent partner in the firm of Bragg & Co., and is domiciled in a cottage on James Street. Poor foolish girl, she will learn too late, the frightful abyss that yawns beneath her feet. She is said to have brought with her about $7,000, the most of which has already fallen into the clutches of those vampyres Bragg & Co. The types yesterday morning made us say of Sargent, that, in dress, he was "really genteel;" we meant and said something quite the contrary and much more so. Detective Hunter deserves credit for the admirable manner in which he has worked up the case and traced the fugitives to this city, upon the very vague clue that was obtained of their whereabouts.

How to Avoid a Bad Husband.

The following rules will teach young ladies how to avoid the catching of a bad husband:

1. Never marry for wealth. A woman's life consisteth not in those things that she possesseth.

2. Never marry a fop, or one who struts about dandy-like, in kid gloves, cane and rings on his fingers. Beware! there is a trap!

3. Never marry a niggard or close-fisted, mean, sordid man, who saves every penny, or spends it grudgingly. Take care lest he stint you to death.

4. Never marry a stranger, or one whose character is not known or tested.—Some women jump right into the fire with their eyes wide open.

5. Never marry a mope or drone, or one who drawls and draggles through life, one foot after another and lets things take their chances.

6. Never marry a man who treats his mother and sisters unkindly or indifferently. Such treatment is a sure indication of meanness and wickedness.

7. Never on any account marry a gambler, a profane person, one who in the least ape ks light of God or religion. Such a man never can make a good husband.

8. Never marry a slovea, a man who is neglient of his person or dress, and is filthy in his habits. The external appearance is an index of the heart.

9. Shun the rake as a snake, a viper, a very demon.

10 Finally, never marry a man who is addicted to the use of ardent spirits. Depend upon it, you are better off alone than you would be were you tied to a man whose breath is polluted and whose vitals are being gnawed out by alchol.

(From the Nor-Wester, Feb 12.)

In reply to some questions from John S. Wallace, of Cobourg, respecting the climate, soil, crops, markets, etc., of the Red River country, the editor of the Nor'-Wester publishes the following replies:—

We take pleasure in answering the inquiries of our correspondent, and can assure our Canadian readers that we shall always be ready to give every possible information to any inquirer relative to this country. At the same time we may be permitted to state that the very best way to get information concerning this territory will be to de-crib- in the Nor'-Wester, the only paper published between Lake Superior and the Rocky Mountains. We shall endeavor to answer correspondent's inquiries seriatim, in the order as they are numbered in this letter:—

1st. The tenure of land is precisely the same with a new settler as it is with the Hudson's Bay Company—you hold as much as you occupy, and no more. Under present conditions, unoccupied land is free to any person to take up, and you pay no price for it. The H. B. Company never have given a quit claim deed, neither can they do so. There will be little difficulty at present in obtaining farms somewhat improved, and the price will depend upon situation. The best farming lands are situated between a point 40 miles above this place on the Assiniboine river, another point 60 miles beyond. There is good land all along that river, but it will not be advisable to push out too far until the Dominion Government treats with the Indians for the cession of their rights.

2ndly. The country all along the Assiniboine is especially suited to the raising of stock. It would not be advisable, in our opinion, to adopt the Australian system of ranges in this country. That system caused trouble there, and so it would here. What we want is population, and it would never do for any man or a company to possess themselves of an unreasonable large tract of country to the exclusion of others. Besides, it would be of no object in stock raising, as your cattle can range and feed over the limitless prairies back of the farms.

3rdly. Hay would require to be cut in the summer for winter use. None other but the natural grasses are used in this country. And thousands of acres of unoccupied prairies are in waiting for the mower or the industrious farmer.

4thly. Cattle are fed and housed for between five and six months in the year.

5thly. Stock farming can be carried on in as large a scale as you wish. You can feed as many cattle as you can cut hay for. Of course you will have more trouble than in Texas, but then their relative value per head would more than compensate you.

7thly. Good, trustworthy stock-keepers can be hired, at from £2 10s to £3 sterling per month with board.

8thly. Judging by a rough estimate, it would be safe to say that about 30,000 brls. of flour are consumed yearly in this territory, and it is all raised here in ordinary seasons; of course, this year of famine is an exception. Last year's crops were entirely destroyed by grasshoppers, and so it was in 1818, just fifty years ago. But this trouble arises from our isolation, and because all of the country around the infested district was unoccupied by civilized men, had this country been settled like Ontario, the disaster would not have been felt. Any party putting up a flouring mill in the proper place will get plenty of wheat to grind, always providing that he makes good flour and gives an adequate return to the bushel. The chances of a market are good. The extent of this territory is immense, and our internal commerce will furnish a market for years to come. Flour is sent into the interior in constantly increasing quantities; it is becoming an article of great demand among the Indians.

10thly. Women servants can be had in Red River, and some are good enough, but we must confess that we wish some Canadian Miss Rye would introduce a few from the East, just to teach those we have how to cook and keep house.

Five or six shillings sterling is the average price of wheat in Red River, and flour from ten to twelve shillings per 100 lbs.

Spring wheat is the kind generally raised here, and often weighs 65 lbs to the bushel.

11thly. Sheep would be in danger from wolves if raised 150 or 200 miles from here. There are no settlements so far off just yet.

13thly. Merchandize of all sorts are considerably dearer than they should be, and it needs competition to bring them down to the proper level. We expect that good communication with the outside world, and an influx of population, will rapidly cheapen such things. Tea is as cheap as in Canada. Sug

Poetry.

WOMAN'S HEART.

Say, what is woman's heart? A thing
Where all the deepest feelings spring;
A harp, whose tender chords reply
Unto the touch in harmony;
A world whose fairy scenes are fraught
With all the coloured dreams of thought;
A barque that still will blindly move
Upon the treacherous seas of love.

What is its love? A ceaseless,
A changeless star, an endless dream;
A smiling flower that will not die—
A beauty and a mystery;
Its storms as light as April showers,
Its joys as bright as April flowers,
Its hopes as sweet as summer air,
And dark as winter its despair.

What are its hopes? Rainbows that throw
A radiant light where'er they go,
Smiling when heaven is overcast,
Yet melting into storms at last;
Bright chants that come with siren words
Beguiling it, like summer birds,
That stay while nature round them blooms,
But flee away when winter comes.

What is hate? A passing frown,
A single weed mid blossoms sown,
That cannot flourish there for long;
A harsh note in an angel's song;
A summer cloud that all the while
Is lightened by a sunbeam's smile;
A passion that scarce hath a part
Amidst the gems of a woman's heart.

And what is its despair? A deep
Fever, that leaves no tears to weep;
A woe that works with silent power,
As canker worms destroy a flower;
A viper that shows not its wakes
Until the heart it preys on breaks;
A mist that robs a star of light.

Then what is woman's heart? A thing
Where all the deepest feelings spring;
A harp whose tender chords reply
Unto the touch in harmony;
A world whose fairy scenes are fraught
With all the coloured dreams of thought;
A barque that still will blindly move
Upon the treacherous seas of love.

Selections.

ONLY A COUNTRY GIRL.

'You're mistaken; I would sooner die than marry a country girl.'

'But, Fred, suppose her intelligent, moral, full of natural poetry, tender hearted, graceful, unspoiled by admiration, a guileless, simple loving creature.'

'Oh!' said Fred, laughing, 'choice collection of virtue and grace. Country beauties are always sweet, and so are country cows. No, I tell you, if she were as lovely as an angel with the best sense in the world, still if un-killed in music and literature, with no soul above churns and knitting needles, I would not marry her for a fortune.'

'Ha! ha!' laughed Helen Irvine, but it was a very pianissimo laugh, away down in the very corner of her heart.

Hidden by the trunk of a large tree, she sat reading within a few feet of the egotist.

In another moment the young lady came in sight. Fred's face crimsoned, and he whispered with visible trepidation—

'Do you think she heard me?'

'No,' rejoined the other, audibly, 'she shows no resentment, she has not even looked up from her book; you are safe; she could not have heard you, but what an angel she is.'

Yes, Helen was an angel as far as outward beauty might merit the encomium.—She sat half reclining on a rustic seat, striving to smooth out the dimples in her cheeks as she laid her book aside her and began to twine an unfinished wreath of wild roses.

Leaning on one white arm, the gnarled white oak tree a background, flowers strewed around her, peeping from her white dress, she sat quite at ease, apparently unconscious that two handsome young gentleman were so near her.

Approaching with a low bow, upon which his mirror had set the seal of faultless elegance. Frederick Lane took the liberty of asking if the young lady would inform him where Mr. Irvine lived.

With an innocent smile the beauty looked up.

'Mr. Irvine, the only one living in the village is my father," said she rising in a graceful and charming manner.

'The large house on a high ground, half hidden by trees and thick shrubbery, that's where we live. I believe it was an academy once; that's a sort of a select school isn't it?' with the most natural simplicity turning to Fred.

'Tell your father,' said he, that I shall do myself the honor to call upon him to-morrow. He will remember me, Frederick Lane, at your service.'

'Yes, sir, I will tell him for you,' said Helen, tucking her sleeve around her pretty arm, and making a rather formal curtsey.

Then, catching up her books and gathering some flowers, she hurried home.

'Now, father, mother, aunt and sis,' exclaimed the merry girl, bounding into the room where the family were at supper, 'so sure as you and I live, that Mr. Lane you talk so much about, is in the village.—He will call here to-morrow—the first specimen of a city beau (as of course he is) all sentiment, refinement, faultless in kids and spotless in dickey, important and self-assured as one of that kind can possibly be. Promise me all of you, that you'll not hop one word about music, reading, and writing in his presence, because I have a plan. Father will not, I know; but if you, sis, will keep quiet and ask no questions, I will give you that workbox you have coveted so long.

'Helen, you are not quite respectful,' said her father.

'Forgive me, dear father,' and her arms were around his neck. 'I always mean well, but I am thoughtless. There all is right now,' she added, kissing him lovingly on the temple.

'Come, sis, what say you?'

'Why, on that condition, I'll be as still as a mouse, but what a your reason?'

'Ah! that's my own business,' said Helen, dancing out of the room.

* * * * * *

Helen sat at an open window, through which rose bushes thrust their blushing buds, making both a sweet shade and fragrance. The canary overhead burst forth every moment in wild snatches of glorious music. Helen was at work on long blue stockings, nearly finished, and her beautiful fingers flew like snow birds.

'You knit most admirably. Are you very fond of it?'

'Yes, quite. I like it better than anything else—that is I mean that I can chat well.'

'And do you read much?'

Fred's glance had travelled from the corners of his eyes to every corner, in search of some books or papers, but not a page or a leaf, yellow or rare, repaid his search.

'Oh, yes, sir!' said Helen with a mortified air.

'What books?' permit me to ask.

'I read the Bible a good deal,' she said gravely.

'Is that all?'

'AH, of course not, and what do we not find in the Bible? History, poetry, eloquence, romance—the most thrilling pathos —'blushing and recollecting herself, she added in a manner as childish as it before had been dignified, 'as for the other books, let me see, I've got in my library; there's the primer (counting on her fingers). Second Reader, Robinson Crusoe, Nursery Tales, Fairy Stories, two or three elements of something Biography of some persons or other, Mother's Magazine, and King William III. There, now, isn't that a very good assortment?'

Fred smiled.

'Perhaps I don't know as much as those who have went to school more,' she added as if disappointed at the mute rejoinder, 'but in making bread and butter and keeping house I am not to be outdone.'

The young man felt more in pity than in love, but his visits did always so result.—

He began to feel a magnetic attraction, and he attributed it to Helen's beauty; but the truth is, her sweetness and artlessness of character, engaging manners and disposition, quite won the city-bred aristocrat Fred Lane. There was a freshness about everything she said or did. She perplexed as well as delighted him.

Often, as he was wondering how some homely expression of hers would be received in good society, some beautiful sentiment would suddenly drop like a pearl from her lips, more remarkable for originality than brilliancy.

'If I should fall into the snare,' thought he, 'I could educate her. It would be worth trying.'

It was useless to try to combat his passion; so at last he fell at Helen's feet, figuratively speaking, and confessed his love for her.

'I care not, Helen, only be mine,' was his invariable answer to her exclamation of unworthiness, 'how she would appear in society.'

* * * * * *

They were married, and had returned from their wedding tour; yet, at the expiration of the honeymoon, Fred was more in love than ever. At a grand entertainment given by the relatives of the bridegroom, Helen looked more beautiful than ever. Her husband did not insist that she should depart from simplicity, and indeed, without jewels or laces, with that fresh white robe, simple sash of blue, and, ornaments of fair moss roses, she was by far the loveliest creature in the room.

As she entered the great saloon, blazing with light, her heart failed her.

'Shall I love him as dearly?' she asked herself, 'if I find he is ashamed of me? I cannot bear the thought; but should he overcome all conventional notions, then I have a husband to be honored, and then he shall be proud of his wife.'

How she watched him as he presented her to one and another.

'Simple,' whispered a pretty girl, resplendent with diamonds, as she curled her lips and passed by.

The observation escaped neither Helen nor her husband. She looked at him.—He smiled a lover's smile and drew her closely to his side. Many in that brilliant gathering pitied poor Fred, and wondered why he had martyred himself on the shrine of ignorant rusticity.

But he! oh joy! he seemed to love her the more as she clung to his arm so timidly, his noble face expressed the pride he truly felt, he looked as if he would have swept back the scorners with one motion of his hand, had they ventured too high on the shore of his pride. He seemed to excuse *every look, every word, not in strict con*formity to etiquettes; and Helen's heart beat high and tears came to her eyes, when she felt how noble a heart she had won.

The young bride stood near her husband talking in a low tone, when a new-comer appeared. She was a beautiful formed creature, with haughty features. Ill concealed scorn lurked in the brilliant eyes, whenever she glanced towards Helen. Once she held away over the heart of Fred, and hearing whom he had married, she fancied her time had come.

'Do you suppose she knows anything?' whispered a low voice near her.

Helen's eyes sparkled, her face flushed indignantly. She turned to her husband. He was gone, speaking at a little distance with a friend.

'Do you play, Mrs. Lane?' she asked. There was a little mockery in the voice.

'A little,' answered Helen, blushing.

'And sing?'

'A little,' was the half reply.

'Then do us a favor,' exclaimed Miss Somers, looking askance at her companions

'Come, I myself will lead you to the instrument.

Hark! whose masterly touch! Instantly was the half spoken word arrested, the cold ear and haughty hand were turned in listening surprise. Such melody. Such correct intonations. Such breadth, depth and vigorous touch. Who is she? She plays like an angel.'

And again hark! A voice rolls; a flood of melody, clear, powerful and pure, sweet. Astonishment gives many a faint cheek a deep scarlet. There is a deep silence unbroken, and the silver strains float up.

> Ay! care I not for cold neglect,
> Though tears unbidden start,
> And scorn is but a bitter word
> Save when it breaks the heart,
> If one be true,
> If one be true,
> The world may careless be,
> Since I may only keep my love,
> And tell my grief to thee.

The words were suddenly arrested on his lips. She turned from the piano and the unknown was his wife!

'I congratulate you, Fred,' said the young man at his side.

But he spoke to marble. The color had left his cheek as he walked slowly towards her.

If he was speechless with amazement so was not she. A rich bloom mantled her cheek, triumph made her eyes sparkle as they never did before; they flashed like diamonds. A crowd gathered to compliment her. In a graceful acknowledgement she blended wit and humour.

'How well she talks; who would have thought it? He has found a treasure,' was whispered all around the room.

Meanwhile, Frederick Lane stood like one enchanted, while his little rustic wife quoted books with perfect abandon, admired this one, condemned that.

A satisfied look ag a about took himself in a Latin quotation; Helen smilingly finished it, and she received a look of eloquent thanks. Bosmots, repartee, language rich with fancy and imagery fell from her beautiful lips, as if they had received a touch from some fairy land.

Still, Frederick was by her side like one in a dream, and pressed his hands over his bewildered eyes to be sure of his senses, when he saw her bending, a breathing vision of loveliness over the harp, her full arm leaning on its golden strings, heard again that rich voice now plaintive with some tender memory, rise and fall in sweet and sorrowful cadence.

'Tell me,' he said when alone, 'what does this mean? I feel like one awakened from a dream.'

'Only a country girl.'

'And then Helen, falling into her husband's arms exclaimed,—

'Forgive me, I am that little rustic you would sooner die than wed. Are you sorry you married me?'

'Sorry, my glorious wife. But, Helen, you could not deceive. Did I not understand you had never—'

'Been at an academy,' she broke in, 'never took a music lesson, never was taught to sing all very true, and yet I am all you see me here to night, myself my own teacher; with labor and diligence, I hope I am worthy to be the wife of one so good and exalted as I find my husband to be.'

Reader, wouldn't you and I like to be there just now, and hear her story, and see the bright smiles between her pretty face and dimples, as she tells how she banished the piano, books, harp, portfolio, music, all in an empty room by themselves, and, locking the door, left them to seclusion and dust, while the country girl, without any scheme, succeeded in convincing the well bred city gentleman that he could marry a charming rustic, if her fingers were more familiar with the chairs and knitting needles, than they were with the piano and books.

How Many Would be Left?

When the following classes are taken out of our churches how many will be left?

All who will not pay their just debts.

All who are hypocritical.

All who are deceitful, and talk about others behind their backs.

All who go in debt without a prospect of paying the same.

All who are proud and scornful, holding themselves above their fellow men, and shunning those less fortunate than themselves.

All who worship money more than they do their Creator.

All who speculate on the ignorance of others.

All who are tattlers.

All who sell intoxicating liquors to make money.

All who think more of a wicked rich man than they do of a pious poor one.

All who oppress the poor.

All who make long prayers for the sake of being seen and heard by men.

All who are vain and self-conceited.

When these and a good many others that could be mentioned, are taken out, the church will be left almost without members. The religion of Jesus does not have any of the foregoing effects. It makes the true convert cheerful, hopeful, and charitable; disposed to visit the widow and orphan, and to keep unspotted from the world. It does not make one proud and scornful, but on the contrary, makes one desirous to do good—to be meek and humble and to be kind to all, as opportunity may offer. Oh! that we had less pretension in our churches and more genuine Christianity.

Death of the Intemperate.

It is a sad death—there is no comfort on that dying pillow, no repose, no voice of friendship bidding adieu, no lightning up of joy in the departing spirit. It is a frequent death—four every hour go through its gates in our land. It is an early death—few drunkards live out half their days. It is an unlamentable death—"I am glad he is gone," is the common saying when the bell announces the solemn event; even his family look for comfort now he is no more.—

Let it be soberly contemplated. First, by the moderate drinker, it may be his turn. Second, by the vender, he has filled the bottle and done the deed. Third, by the magistrate, he signed the license.—Fourth, by the heedless parent, it may be the death of his own son. Fifth, if not too late by the drunkard himself, and let him escape us for his life. Habit hurries him onward, sickness hurries him onward. But oh! his end! Yes, his awful end! Oh! reader, how can you remain idle and see your brother man approaching to that awful end every day? By end by these things will stare you in the face. If you have done your duty and warned your fellow man of his danger, it may be well with you; otherwise, depend upon it, you stand on slippery ground and may have to share the same fate that awaits the drunkard.—Oh, professing Christians, how can you remain idle for one moment, and see your fellow men dropping into a drunkard's grave and perhaps a drunkard's hell, without raising your voice to warn him of the awful danger and the final fate of the drunkard's.

A settler's wife at Portpatrick had just received intelligence that her husband had perished at sea. She was visited by a neighbour, who sympathized with her in her loss, and expressed a fear that she would be poorly off. "Dead I will," said the widow; "but he did all he could for me—he's saved me the expense of his burying."

LOVE AND RASCALITY.

(From the Hamilton Times)

The city police last evening took into custody a spruce looking individual, sojourning at one of the principal hotels, named Henry M. Bragg and hailing from Haverhill, Mass., who is charged with a multiplicity of swindling transactions perpetrated in the United States, among the rest being included the crime of forgery, for which his extradition is sought by the officer at whose instance the arrest was made, Mr. H. M Hunter, of the Boston detective force. This party represents Bragg to be the most accomplished and enterprising rascal abroad; that numerous indictments are standing against him for large swindling transactions in various places, his operations being conducted on a large scale, and various parties have been done out of thousands of dollars. The alleged crime for which his extradition is demanded is forging the names of a firm in New Hampshire, and securing the delivery of quantities of leather from a manufactory by the fraud, realizing a profit of several thousand dollars. Bragg arrived in this city about a month since, and has been looking about for a place to open business in some branch not stated, and has also advertised for a dwelling. The most interesting circumstances in the case is that immediately preceding the arrival of the detective an attractive young woman reached the city, and entered on terms of intimacy with Bragg. The detective states that her name is Miss Tilton, and that she belongs to a wealthy and leading family of Haverhill, Mass. She has deserted respectable relatives and luxurious home through an infatuated attachment for Bragg, who has a wife and two children living at Haverhill. Her parents endeavored to break up the unhallowed attachment and save their daughter from a fate worse than death, and on condition that she should relinquish the association, her father made over $40,000 in her own right. She started off after Bragg immediately on obtaining possession of the money, and joined him in this city a day or two since. Her parents have been apprised of her whereabouts, and are on their way hither. Mr. Bragg is accompanied by another polished individual who gives the name of A. Sargent, from Boston. The detective represents him to be an accomplice of Bragg's in general villainy and also in the present scheme to get possession of the young woman's forty thousand dollars. The pair are well supplied with means, and the case excites more than the ordinary amount of interest.

Mr. Bragg and his friend Sargent, on the other hand, declare that the case is a conspiracy on the part of the parties in the States, who have employed the detective to get Bragg across the lines by fair means or foul; that Miss Tilton is merely on a pleasure tour on her own responsibility, and incidentally came across old acquaintances in this city, &c., &c.

The case was appointed to be investigated before the police magistrate, at four o'clock this afternoon. J. E. Start, Esq., has been engaged as counsel for Bragg. It is understood that there is little probability that he will be committed for extradition, for the reason the alleged forgery was committed in a manner that will go clear of the treaty. So Mr Bragg will probably succeed in his enterprise, if reports concerning him are correct and Miss Tilton will ultimately enjoy the felicity of a sweet repentance, as many a foolish young woman has done before.

(From the Spectator of Tuesday.)

Miss Tilton didn't keep her promise to go home with Detective Hunter, yesterday She seems completely wrapped up in Bragg and declares but life would be unendurable without his "engaging (?) society." How an ace amplished and wealthy young lady could become so infatuated with a low-bred, black-hearted villain such as Bragg evidently is, is wholly incomprehensible. She is at present under the wing of Sargent, the silent partner in the firm of Bragg & Co., and is domiciled in a cottage on James Street. Poor foolish girl, she will learn too late, the frightful abyss that yawns beneath her feet. She is said to have brought with her about $7,000, the most of which has already fallen into the clutches of those vampyres Bragg & Co. The types yesterday morning made us say of Sargent, that, in dress, he was "really genteel;" we meant and said something quite the contrary and much more so. Detective Hunter deserves credit for the admirable manner in which he has worked up the case and traced the fugitives to this city, upon the very vague clue that was obtained of their whereabouts.

How to Avoid a Bad Husband.

The following rules will teach young ladies how to avoid the catching of a bad husband:

1. Never marry for wealth. A woman's life consisteth not in those things that she possesseth.

2. Never marry a fop, or one who struts about dandy-like, in kid gloves, cane and rings on his fingers. Beware! there is a trap!

3. Never marry a niggard or close-fisted, mean, sordid man, who saves every penny, or spends it grudgingly. Take care lest he steal you to deal in.

4. Never marry a stranger, or one whose character is not known or tested.—Some women jump right into the fire with their eyes wide open.

5. Never marry a mope or drone, or one who dawdle and draggles through life, one foot after another and lets things take their chances.

6. Never marry a man who treats his mother and sisters unkindly or indifferently. Such treatment is a sure indication of meanness and wickedness.

7. Never on any account marry a gambler, a profane person, one who is the least spa ks light of God or religion. Such a man never can make a good husband.

8. Never marry a sloven, a man who is neglient of his person or dress, and is filthy in his habits. The external appearance is an index of the heart.

9. Shun the rake as a snake, a viper, a very demon.

10. Finally, never marry a man who is addicted to the use of ardent spirits. Depend upon it, you are better off alone than you would be were you tied to a man whose breath is polluted and whose vitals are being gnawed out by alcohol.

(From the Nor-Wester, Feb. 13.)

In reply to some questions from John S. Wallace, of Cobourg, respecting the climate, soil, crops, markets, etc., of the Red River country, the editor of the Nor'-Wester publishes the following replies:—

We take pleasure in answering the inquiries of our correspondent, and can assure our Canadian readers that we shall always be ready to give every possible information to any inquirer relative to this country. At the same time we may be permitted to state that the very best way to get information concerning the territory will be to describe in the Nor'-Wester, the only paper published between Lake Superior and the Rocky Mountains. We shall endeavor to answer correspondent's inquiries seriatim, in the order as they are numbered in this letter:—

1st. The tenure of land is precisely the same with a new settler as it is with the Hudson's Bay Company—you hold as much as you occupy, and no more. Under present conditions, unoccupied land is free to any person to take up, and you pay no price for it. The H. B. Company never have given a quit claim deed, neither can they do so. There will be little difficulty at present in obtaining farms somewhat improved, and the price will depend upon situation. The best farming lands are situated between a point 40 miles above this place on the Assiniaboine river, another point 60 miles beyond. There is good land all along that river, but it will not be advisable to push out too far until the Dominion Government treats with the Indians for the cession of their rights.

2ndly. The country all along the Assiniboine is especially suited to the raising of stock. It would not be advisable, in our opinion, to adopt the Australian system of ranges in this country. That system caused trouble there, and so it would here. What we want is population, and it would never do for any man or a company to possess themselves of an unreasonable large tract of country, to the exclusion of others. Besides, it would be of no object in stock raising, as your cattle can range and feed over the limitless prairies back of the farms.

3rdly. Hay would require to be cut in the summer for winter use. None other but the natural grasses are used in this country. And thousands of acres of unoccupied prairies are in waiting for the mower or the industrious farmer.

4thly. Cattle are fed and housed for between five and six months in the year.

5thly. Stock farming can be carried on in as large a scale as you wish. You can feed as many cattle as you can put by her.

Of course you will have more trouble than in Texas, but then their relative value per head would more than compensate you.

6thly. There will be no difficulty in finding a market for your stock for some time to come. Beef is now selling at from 8 to 12½ cents per lb., and cattle can be driven to various American frontier posts and sold at remunerative prices. If the country fills up rapidly, as is expected, cattle will bear a good price for a long time, as every new settler will want to buy.

7thly. Good, trustworthy stock-keepers can be hired, at from £2 10s to £3 sterling per month with board.

8thly. Judging by a rough estimate, it would be safe to say that about 30,000 brls. of flour are consumed yearly in this territory, and it is all raised here in ordinary seasons; of course, this year of famine is an exception. Last year's crops were entirely destroyed by grasshoppers, and so it was in 1861, just fifty years ago. But this trouble arises from our isolation, and because all of the country around the infested district was unoccupied by civilized men, had this country been settled like Ontario, the disaster would not have been felt. Any party putting up a flouring mill in the proper place will get plenty of wheat to grind, always providing that he makes good flour and gives an adequate return to the bushel. The chances of a market are good. The extent of this territory is immense, and our internal commerce will furnish a market for years to come. Flour is sent into the interior in constantly increasing quantities; it is becoming an article of great demand among the Indians.

9thly. As soon as this country becomes a portion of the Dominion of Canada, with a good provincial government, similar to that of Ontario, and with a good communication with the East via Lake Superior, it will fill up very rapidly. This territory offers great inducements to the thrifty settler, and we think emigrants from Great Britain and Canada would rush in in thousands. Why not?

10thly. Women servants can be had in Red River, and some are good enough, but we must confess that we wish some Canadian Miss Rye would introduce a few from the East, just to teach those we have how to cook and keep house.

Five or six shillings sterling is the average price of wheat in Red River, and flour from ten to twelve shillings per 100 lbs.

Spring wheat is the kind generally raised here, and often weighs 65 lbs to the bushel.

11thly. Sheep would be in danger from wolves if raised 150 or 200 miles from here. There are no settlements so far off just yet.

13thly. Merchandize of all sorts are considerably dearer than they should be, and it needs competition to bring them down to the proper level. We expect that good communication with the outside world, and an influx of population, will rapidly cheapen such things. Tea is as cheap as in Canada. Sugar (white coffee) is 25 cts. per pound. Men's clothing is not inordinately dear, but women's goods and general groceries are higher than they need be. It will be wise for intending settlers to bring their year's supply with them.

14thly. The Company neither can or will object to any man carrying on a stock farm, neither would she be inclined to encourage or aid him, and who should care as to whether she did or did not? The reasonable

"What is the climate?" To answer this question in a manner commensurate with its importance especially if we should take the whole territory into consideration, would necessitate the writing of a series of articles extending through a number of issues of this paper. We presume, however, that our Canadian friends will be satisfied for the present with a concise account of our climate, and we need not particularly dwell upon that of any other portion of this country other than that which might be termed the vicinity of the settlement.

Nothing is more delusive than the idea (so commonly entertained) that lines of Latitude govern the climate. The common supposition is that Latitude 45° or 50° carries the same amount of heat or cold, sunshine or rain, or depth of snow, all around the Globe. That whatever grain or fruit will not grow and ripen in one place upon a particular line east, will not flourish or bear fruit in another place to the westward on the same line. It is an error—especially as regards the climatology of the North Temperate zone. Taking the map of North America, let us illustrate this position by following the circle of 50° north Lat, across the continent, commencing in the east.

After crossing the northern peninsula of Newfoundland it touches the continent in the rockbound and extremely inhospitable coast of Labrador, a climate almost totally unfitted for the habitation of civilized men. It then crosses a portion of the Province of Quebec, where we find the climate somewhat ameliorated, still the country not adapted for agricultural pursuits. The line continuing westward crosses that portion of the Hudson's Bay Company's territory lying between the Dominion of Canada and James Bay, the summer weather constantly increasing in length, and, it is shown by the immense forests it traverses and facilities it affords for garden vegetables; a great softening of the climate when compared with that of Labrador, or even with the northeastern portion of Quebec. Lat. 50° reaches us at 97° parallel of longitude, and passes through the heart of the settlement. Here we have a climate almost exactly similar to that of Central Ontario, in fact it is the same to all intents as that through which lat. 45° passes in Canada. Anything which will flourish in that latitude in Canada, will flourish and ripen in Red River settlement. Still pursuing our journey westward we find that near the Rocky Mountains the climate resembles that of middle Pennsylvania and Ohio, and crossing the mountains the Pacific coast upon lat. 50° enjoys weather very similar to that of Maryland and northern Virginia. In New Westminster, lat. 49° 14 min., we have seen the English daisy and the pansy in blossom in February.

It is a remarkable, and in many respects an unaccountable fact that the isothermal lines tend rapidly northward as they cross the continent, and in this do we not see a remarkable provision of Providence for the future millions who are to inhabit the interior of this vast territory?

The climatic line of central Ontario after passing this settlement in lat. 50°, tends rapidly towards the north, thus softening the extremes of heat and cold, and affording delightful summer weather as far north as 56° and 58°, in the neighborhood of the Rocky Mountains. At Fort Dunvegan on the Peace river lat. 56°, we have seen as fine root crops as can be grown in any part of the Dominion. 1,000 bushels of potatoes have been raised from 30 bushels of seed. Turnips, cabbages, carrots, onions, etc., do well. Wheat and barley thrive there also. At Fort Vermilion in lat. 58°, everything that has been tried thrives and attain perfection.—All through the Saskatchewan to the south of Peace river, there seems to be little difficulty in carrying on any kind of agriculture. The natural grasses, the wild peas and vetch grow most luxuriously, and to show its unusually fine climate, our latest news assures us that there is little or no snow in that region this winter, and the prairies are on fire the same as in summer.

Taking an average of a number of our winters, it will be safe to say they set in about the 1st of December. The weather is clear and cold no doubt, but very pleasant for all that.

There are more variations in cold and heat than the thermometre indicates. We are tolerably well acquainted with Canadian weather, and for some reason 40 degs. below zero here does not appear as cold at 10 degs. above zero in Canada.

The depth of snow varies from one to two feet on the level. It is about one foot this winter, and last winter it was about eighteen inches.

The grand charm of our winter consists in its unchangeability. Winter while it is winter, and no shifting about, and humbugging one with thaws and rains and slush. Spring sets in early in April, and the genial rays of old Sol seem to absorb the greater part of the snow by evaporation. Our rivers are expected to break up, as a general thing, about the middle of April, about the same time the snow disappears from the plains, the spring birds appear in a day or two, and the prairie flowers are in blossome immediately. The quickness of the change from winter to spring is absolutely astonishing to a stranger. One week everything looks as dreary and desolate as in December, and the next finds the rivers open, the snow gone, prairie flowers in bloom ducks, geese, pigeons and other birds on hand, and the farmer with his plough in the ground. And the quickness of vegetation! It is like looking upon a magic picture, so sudden is the change from winter to summer.

Pigeons, blackbirds, etc., are seen about the middle of April; in 1863 on the 7th.

Snow is off the plains about the same date; in 1863 on the 7th.

Red River breaks up about the 18th April; in 1853 on the 7th; and has been broken up by the 1st April, though rarely so soon.

The Assiniboine breaks up two or three days later every season.

Prairie flowers are in blossom during the last week in April.

Ploughing commences about the middle of April.

Trees in leaf about the 20th of May.

Wild plum and cherry trees in blossom about the 26th May.

Wheat in ear about 6th July.

Barley harvest commences about the 9th August, and the wheat harvest a week later.

Potatoes are taken up about the 1st of October.

A transient fall of snow of two or three inches in depth, and lasting a couple of days, takes place about the 20th October, after which our Indian summer sets in, and we have the most delightful fall weather in the world, which lasts until the latter part of November, winter generally setting in about the 1st of December.

As to summer frosts, we have them occasionally, and so do you in Canada. They sometimes do harm to the crops in places, and so do they in Canada and in the Northern States. Do you remember the great frost of June 19th and 20th in 1859? We do at any rate, and have never seen anything quite so bad in the settlement.

Our paper will not permit us to dwell upon this subject much longer, and we will just state that in Red River we raise wheat (weighing 65 lbs to the bushel), barley, rye, oats, corn, buckwheat, peas, potatoes, turnips, beets, carrots, parsnips, onions, tomatoes, water and musk melons to perfection. At Emerville, a Methodist mission, some 250 miles to the direct north of this settlements, they raise very fine water melons.

Woman in the English Church—A New Idea.

Everybody witnesses, both in England and America, some new move in the enlargement of the sphere of women. Her position in the Protestant Church has of late excited much attention from Anglican divines. The Pall Mall Gazette of a recent date says:—

"The Dean of Chester (Dr. Howson) spoke last night at a meeting held in Liverpool to establish a church ministry of women, which shall be free from life vows and in harmony with the parochial system. The dean, after pointing out that there was something wanting in the Church of England beyond what it now possessed with regard to the ministry of women said that during the past few years there were indications of the progress of public opinion in favor of the providing of nurses, the most recent of which was contained in the speech of Mr. Gladstone in the House of Commons on the previous evening when he said that what was most urgently needed in Ireland was a supply of properly trained nurses for the use of paupers, and for the poor who were above the condition of paupers. He (Dr. Howson) ventured to say that twenty years ago no speech made in the House of Commons would have contained such a paragraph. What they wanted in the Church of England was not a sort of conventual sisterhood, which was not in harmony with the diocesan and was outside the Church, but they wanted educated gentlewomen devoted to the work of Christian charity and piety as the business of their lives."

CATHOLICISM IN ENGLAND.

The Catholic Register (writes a London correspondent) claims that considerably over two thousand persons in England have "returned" to the bosom of their ecclesiastical "Mother" during the past year, a large number of whom are residents of the West End and are the converts of Archbishop Manning, whose success in winning patrician souls is represented to be something alarming. I have seen and heard him. You never saw a finer head on a man, or a more spiritual face on woman or, altogether, a more august and impressive figure than in pulpit or pantheon. His intellectual ability is conceded. His sermons are grand samples of English composition and Romish sophistry. The one I heard was without dogmatism. It was on love, and was full of love. Tone, thought, temper—all were in keeping with the theme. The man with his thin white locks, his translucent complexion, his austere spirituality of expression, his mild, kind, tranquil eyes, and his paternal manner of delivery, transformed him into St. John before my eyes, and forgetting the abominable system he represents, I was lost in admiration of the beautiful old man. No wonder they set such a man to fishing for men and women. There are now 31 Catholic peers of the three kingdoms, 50 Catholic baronets, and 38 Catholic members of the House of Commons. During the past year there have been 63 priests ordained in England and Wales, the total number being 1,489. Number of churches and mission stations 1,122; monasteries for men 67; monasteries for women 214; colleges and academies, 29. In Scotland there are clergy, 201; chapels and stations, 207; convents for women, 18; colleges, 2. There are 19 Catholic chaplains in the British army.

The Leeds and Grenville Spring Assizes were opened at Brockville on Wednesday before Judge Morrison; Hon. A. N. Richards, Q. C., counsel for the crown. The civil docket was light. The criminal calendar is very large. There are several cases against members of the Leeds gang; some of these have been tried with various results. Cyrenius Palmer and one Hankins, acquitted prisoners, were defended by C. F. Fraser. George Chester Chase, tried on two charges of larceny and acquitted was defended by H. S. McDonald. There are several other charges against him. Terence McDonald, charged with larceny, was convicted. Geo. Chapman was convicted of assaulting Holliday when the Constables were attempting to arrest members of the gang. Joseph Young was convicted of larceny. There has been one conviction for stabbing, and one for passing counterfeit money. Several cases have been postponed to the next Assizes. The trial of Bolger, for the murder at Gananoque, is expected to take place on Monday. The prisoner is defended by Messrs O'Reilly, Q. C., of Kingston, and Macdonald, of Brockville.

A recent suit against an insurance company before the Supreme Court of Missouri, led to a decision of wide interest. The company resisted payment of a loss, on the ground that the application for the policy did not give accurate answers to questions concerning the character of the title to the property. The holder of the policy responded with proof that he had made a frank and full statement of the facts to the company's agent, when he was soliciting the insurance, and that after this statement the agent, saying it made no difference filled in the accurate answers in the application. The court held the company responsible for this action of its agent, and required the payment of the loss. The principle thus established is of wide application, especially in life insurance companies, whose agents are often tempted to the slur over doubtful circumstances concerning the health or antecedents of applicants, in order to secure the issue of the policies.

SUPPOSED MURDER OF COL. DUNN.—Many of our readers will remember the name of Lieut.-Col. Dunn, the gallant young Canadian, whose death during the Abyssinian expedition was so generally deplored. The following paragraph from the Court Journal intimates that his death, hitherto supposed to be accidental, was caused by foul play:

A case of an extraordinary and scandalous character, in which a near relative of persons of extreme distinction in the upper circles, is the party interested, or rather inculpated, is about to come before the courts shortly; a caveat having been entered both here and in Canada, by the legal representative of a gallant young officer, whose decease in a recent expedition, under circumstances at first deemed accidental, but now regarded as suspicious was matter of general lament at the time.

A St. Catherines paper says a married couple in that town are in the habit of selling their children as fast as they are old enough to leave their mother, and that six have been disposed of in this way.

THURSDAY, APRIL 1, 1869.

HAVE WE ANY SURPLUS FUND?

This may appear a strange question in the face of all the assurances of J. Sandfield and Treasurer Wood, that we have about $1,500,000 invested in Dominion bonds. It may also be wondered at when we consider the liberality of the Premier in offering the no small sum of $50,000 to secure quiet in South Ontario, and retain the seat for Dr. McGill; we have been told, too, that Peterboro' is to get a share of these super-abundant piles of legal tenders to construct locks at Young's Point: and every place there appears the least discontent the powerful panacea for all political discontent—money—the money bags are shaken up and the jingle quiets too many of the peevish bantlings that seek to draw their nourishment from government pap.

For our own part, we very much doubt the existence of such immense sums in store as we hear of, and some times see paraded in government organs. Mr. Joly, in the Quebec Legislature, takes somewhat this view of the matter when discussing the budget in the assembly at Quebec. He asked, where could the Dominion government get those sums that are talked of as coming to the Provinces? How could a government that was $70,000,000 in debt before confederation, get these amounts that are said to be to the credit of the Quebec and Ontario governments? And he very wisely remarked, that if the Treasurer of the Dominion pay over these sums he must first get the money from the provinces, and this, in fact is the case, and must be so. There are, of course, certain revenues collected by the government of the Dominion; but will they be sufficient to pay the interest on the debt that existed before confederation? At that time there was a yearly deficit, sometimes amounting to 3 or 4 millions of dollars, so that yearly the debt of the Province was increasing. All at once, however, this same government assumes this old debt, and also the debt of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, hands over large balances to each of the Provinces and claims to be able to pay all liabilities, and of course ask nothing from the Province; of course not! Give all, but get nothing. Now this is too good a thing to continue long, and hence we may expect that some of these increased demands will be made upon us, the tariff increased, every one will have to be taxed to the utmost to meet the just demands that will be made.—Upper Canada the great consumer will be the great payer in the shape of increased rates of duty, &c., and yet for south we will be told that we get all and pay nothing; almost nothing of course. The fact will fall upon us some day, and that ere long perhaps, that we have no surplus, that the Dominion government requires aid rather than give any, and then we will find where all this money is.

The following from the Trade Review in reference to our debt will perhaps open our eyes to the fact that the Dominion Government is too deep in debt to give away of its surplus funds for any purpose save to meet the interest due on Canadian debentures. It says:

"Our annual expenditure also swelled up to handsome proportions last year, as the Budget clearly showed. The total amount to be provided for was some $17,000,000, and after making allowance for the contributions of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, and some extraordinary items contained in the above sum, there was considerable increase manifest. Mr. Rose was sanguine he he would have revenue enough to meet all demands without increasing taxation; we hope he may, but we confess to a little anxiety to examine the balance sheet and ascertain the actual result. During last Session Parliament authorised large additions to our public debt. There was first, the sum of $15,000,000 for the Intercolonial Railway, and before it is finished, it will almost certainly take $10,000,000 more. Then there was $5,000,000 for fortifications—we suppose, at the very least, $8,000,000 will be spent if the works are gone on with. The Government were also empowered to settle the claims of the Hudson's Bay Company, and it is in every way probable that $4,000,000 will sooner or later be consumed in this way.

These votes last year, and the further outlay which must flow from them will add at least $35,000,000 to our public debt before five years, which will make the total considerably over $100,000,000! And if we remember that the North West cannot be opened up for nothing, that the early deepening of our canals is likely to be a condition of any new reciprocity treaty, and that several new public works are earnestly urged in the Maritime Provinces, it is easy to fancy our indebtedness increased to $120,000,000 before very long. Now, we are not among those who would allow the Dominion to stand still for fear of a little debt. There is no such a thing as getting into debt judiciously, at least for nations. But we would warn our public men not to run into debt too fast? Take things quietly. We know nothing which would be more injurious to Canada than to have to increase taxation. We don't want that, and with prudence and foresight, it can be avoided. Some of the expenditure we have mentioned was a question of union, and could not be avoided. That of the North-West, for instance, will be a profitable investment. There is every thing on to hope that our revenue will continue to increase, but it may be doubted if it will augment to such an extent as Mr. Rose provisional last Session. One thing is certain, it cannot bear a very heavy strain, and it would be in the last degree unfortunate if we reached a period of "shrunken dollars" such as we had a few years ago. The Government ought to give earnest heed to avoid this in every way, and they can easily do so if they act on the principle "don't run into debt too fast." The Dominion is young yet. It has great resources; but these must not be taxed too much at first. Let our Local Governments, then, continue to act as economically as possible, and if the Dominion Ministers do not increase our debt too rapidly, we doubt not Confederation will continue to be a great success, and that Canada will remain, as at present, one of the cheapest countries in the world to live in."

LOCK AT YOUNG'S POINT.

Some time ago we were informed that tenders would be advertized for in a few days. This has not been done yet. Now we hear rumours that the government of Ontario are desirous of backing out of the affair altogether. These rumours come to us, of course, through a second-hand channel. We are not in government secrets. We are too ready to expose their inconsistencies and their errors. We will not allow ourselves to be led by them for the sake of a few paltry advertisements, and hence we have to receive anything concerning them through others. The story runs now, that Mr. Carling will dig the canal for the locks if Mr. Young will give the ground for nothing, or almost nothing; and secondly, if he will bind himself to keep up the dam for all time to come. That is saying in effect, Mr. Young must be accountable for the very existence of the lock, for what use would a canal be without a dam. We have heard of the very great benefit these locks would be to the back country. They would open water communication for 31 miles, admit of communication by water with Burleigh, North Dummer and Methuen; would enable the successful working of the great marble quarries in the north of Belmont or Methuen, and bring the lithographic stone of Burleigh, and indeed all the great mineral regions of the back country, almost down to Peterboro. All this and much more was to follow the building of locks at Burleigh. But now what do we find? The Hon. Mr. Carling will build the canal and gates if Mr. Young will keep up the dam. Mr. Young may not see fit to do this, and of course then the locks will not be built. Hence the whole back country is to be left as it is, just because Mr. anybody may see that he cannot bind himself to build and keep a dam there for all time to come.

The locks are not for the public good. If for the public good, why should their existence depend on the whims or caprice of Mr. Young or anybody else. If the matter is for the advantage of Mr. Young, why spend public money for the benefit of any individual. It is now believed that Mr. Carling thinks of backing out of the Young locks affair. The secret is this: two sessions of the first parliament of Ontario are past; the third may end the career of John Sandfield and the combination. The member for the West Riding showed himself very fickle on the sectarian grants. He was found to love his grants dearer than he did John S.; indeed had gone so far as to say that these grants would be carried over the head of the combination; had boasted in town that this would be the case. Of course he went up to Toronto and voted—for the grants? No! against them; but he had to be whipped in, and thus committed the unpardonable sin of voting against his church. For this fickleness Mr. Carling is about to punish him and the back country by backing out of the locks affair, as is likely to be the case.

And then again if a test question should arise and defeat follow, who would be elected for the West Riding? That is a question, and it might be good policy to still have the locks hanging over the head of the coming man. It is true Mr. Carling was down here, and so was Mr Richards. They made speeches, went back to Burleigh, were at Young's Point, had it surveyed, and who foots the bill of all this? The people of Ontario, and yet we are told that after spending the precious time of the minister of public works, also of the ministers of Crown Lands, and worse than that, after spending the public money we are not to have these locks unless Mr. Young or somebody else will guarantee a dam there forever.

Was there ever such lack of principle, or of judgment, or of respect to their word, or to the public good, exhibited by as many spoiled children as is shown by the wiseacres that have the control of our public affairs. If the advancement of the back country demands these locks, let us have them. If they are too serve one or two only, why waste the public money for any of them? But then where are the tenders or plans? Oh! here it is, Mr. Carling can easily back out by blaming the exhorbitant demand for right of way. We have heard it on the streets that our member is soon to get an office; perhaps that's it; they want the locks matter left over for the next man. That's the price of the coming candidate, if Mr. Young does not cave in and agree to keep up the dam. But what if he should sell out and the property fall into the hands of some man too poor to keep up a dam, would not the money be wasted in the locks then? But what matter, John Sandfield has plenty of money, and it may as well be sunk there as any other place. This, however, is the first time we have heard of locks without water being provided, but so it is with the combination.

THE NEW ASSESSMENT LAW.

We observe from our exchanges that the Assessors throughout the Province are like our own, somewhat troubled with the new provisions in the Act. Like a good many of the Bills passed at the last sessions, it was hurried through, and as a consequence, some of its parts are hard to comprehend, and others have entailed difficulties not thought of by the promoters of the new measures. There is the difficulty of satisfactorily adjusting the income and personal property of mercantile men. Some claim and not without a show of reason that by taxing both you assess the property twice. Suppose A has $20,000 worth of stock and makes $5,000 from trading; he is assessed for $4,000 income and $20,000 personal property, while his income save what he spends for living has gone into his business to keep up the amount of stock. Parsonages and Minister's dwellings with the lands attached are exempt from taxation. A man may have a house and 100 or 200 acres of land attached and the whole will be claimed free. Then there are Superannuated Ministers, Local Preachers and Lay Preachers, are they to be included? Then as to dividends on Bank Stock where the Banks are located out of the Province. Income derived from other sources where the property is held out of the Province, and a number of other questions very difficult of solution.—We hear that some are turning mortgages into deeds so as to evade paying the interest.

HOW THE DEAF HEAR.

In our issue of the 25th of February last we advertised for two itenerant gentlemen, calling themselves Doctors Bentley and Andrus. The following item appeared in that advertisement:—

Messrs. Bentley & Andrus brought one John L. Ellis into their office, who has been deaf and dumb for eleven years; has never been known to hear anything since infancy, who is now fourteen years of age next month, can now hear a watch tick six inches from his ear, has been in the Hamilton Deaf and Dumb Asylum for four years, and is well educated. Residence, 134 Ternaly street Toronto. Witness to the above, Jas Ellis, grandfather of the said John C. Ellis, and Chey Martin, his uncle.—Leader, Jan. 5th, 1869.

It is well known that editors are in no way accountable for the truth or falseness of the advertisements that appear in their columns. It is purely business transactions in which they agree to give so much space for a fixed sum, and the advertiser arranges his matter, which too often, as in this case, is not to be relied on.

In reference to the above paragraph we have received the following note from J. B. McGann, Esq., Teacher of the Institute for the Deaf and Dumb, Hamilton:

To the Editor of the Peterboro Examiner.

SIR,—There appears in last week's (meaning 25th February no doubt) issue of your journal an advertisement from one of those itinerant American empirics who infest this Province, claiming the power to cure "all the ills which flesh is heir to," among which the deaf-dumbness of one of my pupils named Ellis, at present in attendance in this Institution. The Quack to whom I refer states, that the boy's hearing is so far restored as to hear the ticking of a watch at the distance of six inches from his ear. Not so. He cannot nor ever will hear the report of an Armstrong 64 pounder.

Yours,

J. B. McGANN.

Deaf and Dumb Institution,
Hamilton, 29th March, 1769.

This shows what confidence the public should place in the testimonials of interested parties who are here to-day and away to-morrow, and whose desire is to make money out of their patients.

Dr. McGann is a gentlemen well known to the Canadian public and whose statements are worthy of credence. Will the public remember that whenever too much is promised very little is performed.

Easter Show of Meat.

We may safely say that rarely if ever have the butchers of Peterborough made such a show of meat as was done on Friday and Saturday last. It would be folly to try to give any one the pre-eminence in the meat line. They had supplied themselves with some of the best animals the country could produce, and spared neither pains nor cost in doing so. Messrs. Howden, Le Plant, Heather, Wilson, Webber and Winch most assuredly deserve praise for the way in which they keep up the good name of our market. We may safely say that the show of meat on Saturday could not be surpassed in the Province. And what shall we say of the country and of the farmers who fed those animals. Do they not compare favorably with the farmers of the Dominion; and our county, we believe, is not behind any of the counties for industry, progress, contentment and the means of happiness. Our market showed no signs of hard times amongst us, nor our butchers any signs of inability or unwillingness to provide meat for our citizens.

ROWDYISM.

During Monday night the Old Country shantymen, we suppose of all nations, took it into their heads to drive the Frenchmen out of the Town, and went and smashed the doors and windows of a few French boarding houses, and report had it that one man has suffered severely from the stroke of an iron bar on the head. This is very discreditable to our Town, and should meet with severe punishment. The Frenchmen are as quiet and harmless as those of any other country in similar circumstances, and they most assuredly have equal rights to protection and immunity from abuse. To permit such conduct on the part of any of Her Majesty's subjects indicates either an unwillingness or an inability to maintain order and afford protection to every citizen, and we trust that all cowardly and unlawful acts will suffer the penalty their crime merits. All these things should be checked in the bud.

NEW BOOKS.

Frank Leslie's Lady's Magazine, for April, is before us. The colored fashion plates and all the plates of the Lady's Magazine are in the best style. The usual patterns also accompany this number. The portion on fashions will prove entertaining to all who desire to appear in the latest style, and the reading matter will be no less interesting to those who devour that kind of literature. The Lady's Book can be had at the book stores at 30 cts., or direct from the publishers at $3.50 a year.

We have received also a copy of the Annual Review of the Trade & Commerce of Toronto for 68, by J. M. Trout, commercial editor of the Daily Telegraph. The Review Proper consists of about 20 pages of closely printed matter, and is got up in very excellent style. It enters fully into the general trade of Toronto, and is well worth being laid away for future reference.

The Progress is the name of a weekly published in New York, and is devoted to Reformatory, Masonic, Educational and Literary matter. It contains much that is amusing and instructive. It is far ahead of many of the New York publications.

The Dominion Monthly, for March, is now on our table, and is filled with very interesting articles. This periodical deserves a place in every family. No parent need hesitate for a moment in placing it in the hands of their children.

The Port Hope Guide says that Donald Bethune has received the appointment of some clerkship in the Legislative Assembly to soothe him for the refusal of the Town Council of Port Hope to grant him a salary as Police Magistrate, to which he had been appointed by the Government.

PERSONAL.—We notice with pleasure that Mr. T. Burke, Sergeant-Major of the 57th Battalion, received a Second Class and also a First Class Certificate at the Kingston Military School.

The last of a series of lectures, under the auspices of the Mechanics' Institute, was delivered on Monday evening last, by J. B. Dixon, Esq., M. A. Subject—"Mind, its nature and manner." The attendance was not large, but those who were present were well pleased and amply repaid for their time.

The Lecturer commenced by stating that the Lecture would be necessarily incomplete, as it was one of tone on the subject. He remarked that mind had no seperate existence independent of matter, and that as a consequence they were so blended as to effect each other.

He referred to Matter, its properties and connections; that Matter was inert and could not produce motion of itself, and that if it had motion it received it from something outside of itself. He then dwelt on the progressive nature of matter, from the chaotic to order, from fluidity to solidity, from mineral to vegetable and to animal, &c.; and how each step in the progression was calculated to aid the next progressive movement.

He combatted the popular idea that the world is no better now than it was before man took possession of it, showing that every change from one state of existence to another tended to make it better, as for instance the progress in an agricultural point of view of Germany, England, Scotland and Ireland compared with the fens, marshes, mountains and wilderness of the times of the Romans; instancing also how the once firy state became solidified; the solid rock, until to produce anything, moulder down and bring forth vegetable life; and the vegetable in time aids in perfecting animal life, all proving a tendency to a better and higher state, until it became fit for man, the Lord of created objects.

All these changes he contended proved the existence of a controlling power—mind; and in the universe of a God. The working, relation, existence and position of this power in man were all referred to in an eloquent and novel manner, showing great research, careful reading and independent thought. We feel that any synopsis we could give of the lecture would be very deficient and fall far short of the original; suffice it to say that all who heard it were highly gratified, although, perhaps, unwilling to endorse all the theories set forth therein.—We only hope that Mr Dixon may be prevailed upon to favour the good people of the Town with the remaining three parts at some future time. At the close a vote of thanks, moved by the Rev. Mr. McDonnell, seconded by Sheriff Hall, was tendered to the Lecturer for the able, erudite and suggestive Lecture.

The following clause in the New Act respecting Tavern and Shop Licenses is worthy the attention of those concerned:—"Provided always that all Licenses shall be constantly and conspicuously exposed in the shops or in the bar rooms of taverns, inns, ale houses, beer houses, or other places of public entertainment, and in the bar Saloon or bar-Cabin of vessels under a penalty of five dollars for every day a wilful or negligent omission so to do, to be recovered with costs from the shop keeper, or tavern, inn, ale house, or beer house keeper, or keeper of any other place of public entertainment, or master, captain, or owner of the vessel so making default":—Last clause of Sec. No. 5, of the New Act.

The next meeting of the Teachers class will be held in the Union School, on the second Saturday of this month, at 10 o'clock, a. m.

SUBJECT:

Parsing, lesson on "Insects."

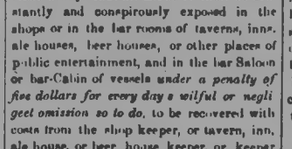
DIED IN THE LOCK-UP.—On Sunday, a man named Walsh, said to be from Douro, was found on the railway track quite exhausted. He was taken to the Lock-up and provided for, but never rallied from the weak state in which he was found. He died during Monday night and was buried on Tuesday, at the expense of the Town.—Around here he was known as Scollobag Walsh.

MASONIC.—Last week we were favored with a large congregation of the Masonic fraternity, attending the lodge of instruction here. On Friday evening the brethren from a distance were entertained by the Peterboro brethren to a dinner, in the Carnew House, at which all was good cheer and brotherly kindness. The lodge of instruction was kept up four days.



VELOCIPEDOMANIA.—This mania has at length reached our town, and we see by hand-bills that Prof. Anderson has opened a school, in the Music Hall. Almost every town in the province has its school and its professor, and, we may add, pupils, endeavoring to acquire the mystery of the art of managing this two-wheeled "hanimal."

The weather is now mild. Rain has continued for two or three days and causes the snow to disappear rapidly. The earth will soon be bare again, and ere long the cheerful whistle of the ploughman will enliven our Canadian hills.

Babcaygeon is improving fast. On the night of the 23rd of February, a "Vigilance" committee favored one Spellman with a ride on a rail, and three or four dips in the canal, for beating his better half.

The contract for the erection of the extension of the Port Hope and Lindsay Railway to Beaverton is let, and is to be completed by the first of December next.

LITERARY CLUB.—Private debate this evening, after which the election of officers for the ensuing year will take place.

Fourteen Priests in Italy have lately married, and in every case the civil law declares the act legal.

There was no meeting of the Town Council on Monday evening.

A RARE CASE.—The celebrated Dr. Ratley, who was before our police court a few days ago for practising without license, is in trouble in Ottawa. He has been charged with an attempt to commit a rape on the person of Esther Balsone, one of his patients. The Dr professed while in Peterboro, to cure by the laying on of hands, but he must have proceeded further than that in Ottawa. We thought that the people of Canada had grown out of the ignorance of expecting cures from laying on of hands, and that they knew enough to shun pretending quacks, but we are mistaken. There are some simple enough yet to try any pretender. Ratley was bailed out—himself $1,000 and two others $500 each.

A coal merchant in Toronto, named McKim, has left his lawful wife and gone off to the land of libertinism with an inmate of a house of ill-fame. Before he left he managed to strip his wife of every thing, amounting to several thousand dollars worth of her own property. He had not been married to her more than a year, but he had another wife somewhere else. Are ladies wise in casting their lot with strangers of whom they know nothing more than a few days acquaintance reveals. The near proximity of the United States affords rare opportunities for indulging in strange freaks.

On Friday last, a swell negro from the Southern States, while driving through Toronto seeing the sights, fired a pistol at some boys who threw snow balls at him.—The ball struck the foot of one boy and went through it. The boy was soon cared for, and after a chase the negro, named Winton, was taken and brought before a magistrate to answer to the charge of shooting with intent. He will learn Canada is not not down South in Dixie.

It appears from letters in the Globe that the Toronto police force have really to be paid for trying to capture forgers, burglars and robbers. An attempt was lately made to pass a forged cheque on one of the banks. The police force appeared to know all about it, but because not applied to first to ferret it out, would do nothing in the matter until a reward was offered. Truly what a noble set of fellows they must be, and how useful for protecting property!

SAD BEREAVEMENT.—Mr. Hough, editor and proprietor of the Cobourg World, has had severe bereavements in his family of late. His brother lately died at Guelph, and last week his wife and sister-in-law both died of typhoid fever. Owing to these sad bereavements he has announced that the World will not appear for some time to come. Mr. Hough has our deepest sympathies in his sad and trying bereavements.

The Leader says that certain thieves have been playing pranks on the Toronto police, by sending them word that they intended to commit a certain robbery, and then did not put in an appearance. They used a negro to communicate with the police.

NEWFOUNDLAND.—Delegates from Newfoundland are said to be on their way to Ottawa, with proposals to join the confederation. Vancouver Island and British Columbia, also seek to join us. Very soon the Dominion will stretch from the Atlantic to the Pacific Oceans.

It is said that the Redpaths, sugar refiners Montreal, will clear $300,000 out of the rise in sugar. All caused by the Cuban difficulties.

The By-law in favor of the Toronto and Nipissing road passed in Somerville, on Tuesday last, by a majority of ten votes.

MINDEN.

BIBLE SOCIETY.—A branch of this good society has been planted already in the village of Minden. The annual meeting was held on Monday evening—S. S. Peck, Esq., President, filling the chair. The proceedings were opened by prayer, offered by one of the resident ministers, and Mr. S. B. Johnson, the Society's Agent, gave several interesting and encouraging details of the Society's working and funds, and of the wonders of grace wrought by the Bible, as it circulates through this fallen world of ours. W. B. Read, Esq., the Secretary of the Branch at Roseneyon, was also present—the Collectors, Misses Peck and Burt, gave in $17 as the result of their general canvass round the village.

PROGRESS.—On Friday last the Rev. G. C. Mackenzie, just ordained and licensed to labour in the New Church of England Mission of Dysart, passed through Minden village, en route for his field of duty. With him were the teams of two settlers on their way to Guildford township; but how they fared we have not heard, for the roads east were impassable for horse or ox teams—the mail carrier having to come some 10 miles miles towards this, from Haliburton, on snow-shoes, and one trip was missed altogether. The English Land Company pays one third of the new missionary's stipend, and has deeded over a glebe at Haliburton.

HONORABLE.—About a mile above Minden village, going east, may be seen a new "slide" or pier, or dam. Be its name what it may, it cost the lumbermen six hundred dollars. This was necessitated by the peril these poor fellows are put in when running logs by Minden grist mill over an ugly chaotic mass of rock. Three poor men lost their lives in this "boiling kettle" in miniature, last year—one being the miller of the place. We look forward to the coming busy time for running timber, full of hopes for the safety of the "chantymen!" Let me add that in addition to the above $600, a further sum of $400 has been spent further up the stream to narrow the waters and so cause a deeper current over other dangerous and terrific places. Take care of the men, employers! They are rough, truly, but they have tremendously rough work to do.

APROPOS.—The men employed by A. H Campbell, Esq., have been provided with Sunday services for the last two winters past, and as the Rev. Mr. Burt, at the wish and cost of the employer, ministered to them, there was shewn marked respect to the messenger. On some occasions the service was refreshing, and to feel yourself in the midst of the dense bush, singing praises, was most striking.—COR.

U. C. COLLEGE.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—From what has been said or rather written upon Upper Canada College, he establishment appears to have been a blunder; that Sir John Colborne whether acting cheerily for the public good, or otherwise, committed a very grave mistake when he founded this ill-fated institute. It was not only an impolitic but an illegal act, as testified both by Hon. John B. Robinson, Chief Justice of Upper Canada, as well as by Dr. Strachan, the Archdeacon of York—both members of the General Board of Education—when examined before a Committee of the Legislature on Education, two years after its establishment, when asked by what authority was the District School monie part of U. C. College? the former in his reply said, "The Trustees of the Home District School, at the time the change was made, concurred in it, and thought they were doing right, though perhaps some informality might be objected if there was a desire to take exceptions." The Archdeacon in his answer to the same query says, "Both were included in Upper Canada College, and from the best motives though perhaps in a legal point of view somewhat irregular." The latter is more honest than the former in expressing his opinion; at the same time he was well aware that the cause of its being established was his pertinacity in refusing to have the Charter of King's College liberalized. The Committee referred to above, at the same sitting read and examined the Charter and agreed that several alterations were necessary to be made, and which were included in the Draft of a Bill for amending it, which they submitted with their Report to the House. In their second Report they thus refer to the Grammar Schools and U. C. College:—"It appears by your Committee from documents before them, that the original appropriation, in order to raise a fund for promoting education, consisted of 549,217 acres of land, and that by a recent order from His Majesty's Government, the University of King's College has been endowed with 225,273, which appears to be in accordance with the prayer of the Legislature in 1797, the residue consisting of 323,944, or in round numbers 324,000 acres, is at the disposal of the Provincial Parliament. In regard to any other deduction for the support of Upper Canada College, your committee entertain no doubt that on a respectful representation to His Majesty's Government, an endowment will be granted to that Seminary as a separate and royal gift, exclusive of the School Lands originally set apart for the University and District Grammar Schools."

This extract shows clearly the view entertained by the Legislature of that period of the original grant and its disposition, viz.:—about the one-half for the University and the balance for the District Grammar Schools. Anxious to secure the appropriation to these schools intact, they recommended in their third Report that no diminution for alleged per centage for survey, or for the endowment of U. C. College whatever should be allowed. They refer to the sale of a portion of the lands made on behalf of King's College, but learn from the Treasurer that the proceeds were given in loan to the Minor or U. C. College; the amount was supposed to be ten thousand pounds, which they recommend to be at once invested, and the income therefrom be divided among the several District Grammar Schools. They also express their astonishment that the members of the Council of King's College acting so illegally in misappropriating its funds, and state their disapprobation of such conduct. They consider the loans as hopelessly lost, and look upon the Minor College in somewhat the same case as Pharaoh's lean kine—bound to swallow up the greater. By referring to Mr. Principal Harris' evidence before the committee, we learn that during the first 3 years of its existence, the highest number of pupils at any time was 126; that no less than 9 teachers at a cost of twelve thousand and fifteen dollars annually as salaries and allowances for house rent, besides the tuition fees of about $13,000 annually, which sum seems to have been so smuggled that the B

Insurance Case.—A recent suit against an Insurance Company before the Supreme Court of Missouri led to a decision of wide interest. The Company resisted payment of a loss, on the ground that the application for the policy did not give accurate answers to questions concerning the character of the title to the property. The holder of the policy responded with proof, that he had made a frank and full statement of the facts to the Company's agent, when he was soliciting the insurance, saying it made no difference, filled in the application. The Court held the Company responsible for this action of its agent, and required the payment of the loss. The principle thus established is of wide application, especially in Life Insurance Companies, whose agents are often tempted to clear over doubtful circumstances concerning the health or antecedents of applicants, in order to secure the issue of policies.—*N. Death of a Noble Turfite.—The death of the Earl of Glasgow is reported. The late Earl, who had for a long series of years been one of the leading supporters of the turf, and was the senior member of the Jockey Club, was Right Hon. James Carr Boyle, Earl of Glasgow, Viscount Kilburne, and Lord Boyle of Kilburne, Stewartown, Cumbrae, Fenwick, Large, and Dalry, in the peerage of Scotland; Baron Ross, of Hawkhead, County Renfrew, in the peerage of the United Kingdom, and Lord-Lieutenant of the County of Renfrew. He was a retired Commander of the Royal Navy. He was the second son of George, fourth Earl of Glasgow, by his first wife Lady Augusta Hay, fourth daughter of James, fourteenth Earl of Erroll, and granddaughter and heir of Sir William Carr, of Etal, County Durham.

We have just received a letter from a victim of the "musical box" swindle, whose experience may be of value to intending purchasers of the cheap musical boxes advertised in some American and Canadian papers. The advertisement offers for sale "musical boxes" warranted to play eight tunes; and the price asked varies from one to three dollars. Our correspondent sent for one of these, enclosing the requisite funds, and thereof by return a five cent mouth organ, with eight holes. This advertisement, our correspondent thinks, "a sharp Yankee dodge."—Globe.

Destructive Fire.—We learn that on Wednesday evening last, the new steam saw mill, and shingle mill, in the village of Omemee, belonging to Wm. Cottingham, Esq., was totally destroyed by fire. The origin of the fire is unknown. The buildings were uninsured, and the loss will be very considerable to Mr. Cottingham, and the inhabitants of the neighbourhood will suffer a great deal of inconvenience, particularly as the building season advances. We understand that preparations are being made for the erection of a new mill.—Victoria Warder.

Port Hope, March 30.—The officers of the Corinthian Royal Arch Chapter, recently established at Peterboro, were installed here this morning by the Grand Superintendent of the Toronto and Ontario Districts, R. E. Companion, Wm. McCabe, assisted by Companions, Lieut. Colonel Fairbanks, Menet and Patterson. They are E. Comp., Dr. James Might, first Principal; E. Comp., Dr. Kincaid, second Principal; E. Comp., Daniel S. Eastwood, third Principal. The Grand Superintendent remains here today to arrange respecting another Chapter to be established here, and respecting other Masonic business of importance.

A Swindler.—Last summer, a large burly fellow of the name of Sloan, who was peddling an article which he styled "The Patent Dominion Hand Roller," and by holding out the inducement of three months' credit, succeeded in obtaining from a number of farmers in this section of the country, a number of their notes of hand as an equivalent for the article. He forgot to deliver the same to his victims, who are thus compelled to meet their engagements without any "value received." He has tried his hand in the same line last summer, in the localities of Markham and Scarboro, with similar success.

Robbery of the Hamilton Post Office.—On Monday night last, some novice in the burglarious line effected an entrance into Hamilton Post Office, through a window on the north side of the lobby, which happened to be inadvertently left open. His dexterity was rewarded by the possession of between $20 and $40, which was deposited in the delivery department. Had he been an adept in his profession, there was much larger plunder within his reach, which he could have removed with the greatest facility.

The result of the Melady murder trial which was to have come off at Goderich last week, is rather curious. The counsel for the prisoners, Mr. Harrison, of Toronto, exhausted the jury panel by challenging, and the trial is laid over until the next Assizes. It is simply a delay, however, as at the Fall Assizes the Sheriff will take care to have a sufficient number of jurors to prevent a repetition of the result in the meantime arrived at.—Spectator.

CUBA

Havanna, March 28.—Advices from Port au Prince to the 18th inst., are received. Salnave was in a precarious situation, owing to the state of his finances. There was a murmuring feeling at the capital against Salnave. The blacks were jealous of the whites, and assassinations were feared.

Havanna, March 29.—In the out-skirts of Bayamo last Saturday night a patrol was fired upon. The fire was returned and two Cubans were killed and one was taken prisoner severely wounded. President Baez of San Domingo, has refused to allow the organization of expeditions in aid of the Cuban rebels. The "Diario" publishes the following: In the Cienfuegos district, the Govern ment troops have completely surrounded the rebel forces under Gen Ballou at La Valladora. Gen. Burriel, with 3,000 regulars, left Cienfuegos yesterday, to attack the insurgents in the mountains near Sigeanea. He expects to effect a junction near that point with a column advancing from Trinidid, under Gen. Escalante.

Havanna, March 29.—A large party of insurgents were defeated on Saturday near Trinidad. Telegraphic communication with Cienfuegos was restored on Sunday. Troops were arriving there and departing for the interior. A detachment of 1,200 troops arrived at Santa Cruz on the 30th inst., from Puerto Principe, for supplies. They were to return on the next day.

Advices from Nassau to the 22nd have been received.

Admission of Girls to the Grammar Schools.

The following statement on this subject is communicated by the Educational Department of Ontario:—

"During the late session of the Legislature petitions were presented from various parties, and strong opinions were expressed by various members in favour of the admission of girls to the Grammar Schools upon the same condition as boys. The Head of the Administration, though satisfied of the correctness of his expressed legal opinion on the subject, yielded to the popular pressure, and intimated an intention to get the regulation changed so as to permit girls, at the option of the Board of Trustees, to become recognized pupils of the Grammar Schools upon the same condition as boys. We understand the regulation has been thus modified by the Council of Public Instruction; but, as the programme of studies in the Grammar Schools cannot be changed the current year, and as an amended Grammar School Act is expected to be passed on the meeting of the Legislature next autumn, by which the higher English education of girls as well as boys will be provided for in the Grammar Schools, it is suggested that parents had better keep their girls to English in the Common School in the present year, than to put them to Latin for a few months—which would be equivalent to a loss of so much time in a girl's legitimate studies for a sound English education."

The Absconding Montreal Broker.

It is singular that Mr. Canfield Dorwin whose departure for the other side of the lines so shortly followed that of Mr. Brown of this city, has been seized with similar qualms of conscience and the same anxiety to return to his old home on precisely the same terms. The Burlington Press says the liabilities of Dorwin amount to $250,000, of which sum $50,000 is due to parties in New York and Boston. He made his appearance at Hinesburg, Vermont, on the 15th instant, and seemed completely overcome by remorse for his unfortunate and criminal transactions, and expressed a desire to make the best arrangement that he could with his creditors. Two of them had the honor of an interview with the defaulter, but failed to conclude any arrangement with him. He has declared his willingn as to return to Montreal and give up all his property—worth over $30,000—to his creditors, on condition that he should not be prosecuted criminally. As the Banks are the chief creditors, it is not likely they will accede to any such proposition.

Mr. Charles Reade, who has been figuring in New York as a plaintiff seeking damages for a libellous criticism of "Griffith Gaunt,' one of his novels, has had his feelings soothed by a verdict in his favor for six cents. As the defendant is impecunious and unable to satisfy even this modest judgment, Mr. Reade will have the additional satisfaction of paying the costs, which amount to no trifle. By some it is supposed that the action was a shrewd advertising "dodge" to bring into prominence the new novel from Mr. Reade's pen which is now in course of publication.

The McGee Assassination Reward.—The City reward for the conviction of the murderers of the late Hon. Thos. D'Arcy McGee has not been distributed, but we believe that each of the policemen on special duty in ferreting it out will receive $100, and most of the balance will probably be awarded to detective O'Neil and Sergt. Davis. The matter will, it is supposed, come before the City Council at its next meeting.

Something New.—We have before us a neatly printed and very nicely gotten up Pamphlet published by the proprietors of the celebrated Pain-Killer, Messrs. Perry Davis & Son of Montreal. The book contains 32 pages and furnishes some very valuable information which every lady and house keeper ought to know, but which very few do know, viz: How to cook for the sick. The large collection of receipts for making Broths, Soups, Drinks, and other nourishing dishes for invalids make the book a very desirable one in a family. Nearly all druggists, country merchants and other medicine dealers sell the Pain killer and they all have the above publication for gratuitous circulation. It is called The Pain Killer Annual and Household Physician.

The discovery of many copies of the Holy Scriptures has established the purity of the text of the sacred law; the discovery of the laws of Motion and Gravitation has almost perfected Mechanical Philosophy; the discovery of the circulation of the blood has accomplished in Anatomy what is at last accomplished in Hygeine by the Great Shoshonees Remedy, which has so often checked the inroad of these lung diseases of the throat which imprudence and exposure have united to make so common.

At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since Ex-President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to excite the Irish or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbours, they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; an immediate outbreak was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had taught all nations. "In time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

Is not this a lesson to us to fortify our Southern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of rheumatism, coughs, colds, cholics, bowel complaints, and all other diseases incident to this climate by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," Can be had of any Medicine Dealer for 25cts per bottle

Don't Know What to Do. We sometimes hear persons say, "my horse is ready out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order; they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and testify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The Americans, on account of their troubles have not made any purchase in the Provices the past year, and being able to compete with the North of Europe we can't ship it to England, but serious as this matter is, it is gratifying to know that the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" is a great favorite among our Lumbermen, for curing coughs, sudden colds, cramps in the stomach, burns, bruises, frost-bites, chilblains, &c., and they do not depend upon a foreign market for it, it is sold by all Medicine Dealers at 25 cts per bottle.

Arabian Heave Remedy and Conditine Medicine

Is positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

STOP AND SEE!

The following remarks on Testimonials of most wonderful and extraordinary cures in Canada by the GREAT INDIAN REMEDY. They are stern, undeniable and incontestable facts, sufficient to convince the most skeptical that the Great Medicinal Compound yearned after for ages is now accessible in the summer, and then there may be a chance to rent.

Great Shoshonees Remedy.

For Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Digestive Organs, Kidneys, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurities of the Blood, we boldly state that this great remedy has NEVER BEEN EQUALLED. Where was there ever such a cure as that in the person of Wilson Stoney, of Brighton, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Peter C. V. Miller, of Ernestown, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Ambrose Wood, of Consecon, Ontario, of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or that of John Hoey, of Napanee, Ontario, of Rheumatism, who had actually been on crutches for years, in spite of all treatment heretofore, and is now well. Scores of such cases might be mentioned had we space.

17thly. It will cost you $22, American currency, from St. Cloud to Abercrombie by stage. From Abercrombie to this place it will cost from £2 to £7 in a Red River conveyance. If you will want a waggon or buggy, you had better buy in St. Cloud, and come through with your own conveyance. It will be the most comfortable, especially if you have a family.

Winter travelling is not pleasant on account of there being no line of stages from Abercrombie to here, and from it being so sparsely settled. You can start as early in the spring as you please. If you come to farm you should purchase your seed in Minnesota and bring it with you. Almost all of our seed has to be imported this unfortunate year. The journey can be made by wagon from Abercrombie or Georgetown either by steamboat or flatboat.

And now we would say to any and all of our Canadian readers, that there are good openings here for farmers; mechanics, etc. We have valuable salt springs close at hand, and they only need a little capital, coupled with enterprise, to develope them.

Sheep raising will be profitable if woollen mills are introduced. Flax and hemp thrives here, and any Canadian fruit or vegetable will undoubtedly thrive, except the peach. A soap manufactory would do well and so would vinegar making. A good dairy would pay. We hardly know what good cheese is in this country. And a few practical miners might make a strike which would astonish the world, if they would prospect the country thoroughly this side of Lake Superior. The precious metals are not far off. And lastly we would suggest that if you and your friends will subscribe to the New Wester you will be able to learn enough about this great land to pay the price of your subscription many times over.

THE ALLEGED RAPE CASE.

Yesterday afternoon, John Harvey Rutley was brought before the Police Magistrate, M. O'Gara Esq., charged with assault with intent to commit rape on the person of Esther Ralstone. Robt. Lyon, Esq., M. L. A., appeared for the defence.

The statement made by Mrs. Ralstone was to the effect that she had suffered for a long time with prolapsus uteri, and on the seventeenth of the month, by advice of her husband she visited Dr. Ruttley as a patient. He promised to effect a cure by his process of treatment, in which friction to the diseased parts is one great principle. On the first occasion of her visit she found nothing to complain of in the doctors manner, but on the second occasion he took advantage of her circumstances to take indecent liberties with her, and when remonstrated with, said what he did was necessary for her cure. He finally carried his misbehaviour so far that she could no longer be misled and displayed such determined resistance that he allowed her to go. She threatened to go and expose him, but he entreated her forgiveness, saying he had done her no real harm, and that letting out the matter would only bring disredit on herself and ruin on him. He also said he was sorry for what had passed, and promised he that he should never be again guilty of such conduct. Mrs. Ralstone left him and returned next day, when he was respectful and circumspect in his manners. During these three days she had been staying in the vicinity of the city with her sisters, and afterwards returned to her husband's house at the Gatineau, about sixteen miles from Ottawa. On her return home she told her husband what happened, but made him promise her to say nothing of the matter as she dreaded the ordeal of exposure in such a case, and of a public investigation into the affair. Such is the outline of the story told by Mrs. Ralstone. Its further details, owing to the peculiar nature of the case, are not fit for publication. Her husband was also examined, but his evidence only went to show that on hearing the story told by his wife he had come to the city and seen Ruttley, and that an effort was made to arrange the matter. At the conclusion of the evidence Mr. Lyon made a rapid speech in favor of his client, and the police magistrate said that while he did not consider that the charge alleged had been borne out, he must send the prisoner for trial on the charge of indecent assault. Dr. Ruttley applied for bail which His Worship said he would take. The prisoner in $1,000 and two sureties in $500 each.—Ottawa Citizen.

PRESBYTERY OF GUELPH.

The Presbytery of Guelph, in connection with the Canada Presbyterian Church, met in Knox's Church, Guelph, on Tuesday last, the Rev. Mr. Thomson, of Erin, Moderator, in the chair.

A report was read by the Rev. R. Torrance in relation to the present religious movement in Galt. Subsequently he did the same with the Rev. Mr. Murdoch and Smith's letters from the same place and referring to the same subject. A long discussion then ensued which terminated in a resolution being passed to the effect that the Presbytery do call the serious attention of ministers and kirk sessions to the subordinate standard of our church in regard to the question "by whom is the word of God to be preached," especially to question No. 58 of the larger Catechism in the answer to which it is stated—"The word of God is to be preached only by such as are sufficiently gifted and also duly appointed and called to that office."

Moved in amendment by Mr. Ball, seconded by Mr. Smith, That the Presbytery find so far as their judgement can go that a great and precious work of God, has taken place in Galt, and although some things undesirable, yet incident to human weakness have occured, the Presbytery rejoices in the blessed visitation of the Spirit of God upon a portion of the church and unite in the prayer that the work of revival may extend to the whole country.

The amendment was subsequently withdrawn, and another amendment moved by Mr. Davidson, seconded by Mr. Ball, that the report do lie on the table.

The voting was put and carried 12 voted for and 7 against it.

Mr. Ball gave notice of protest against the finding of the Presbytery and appeal to the Synod, in which Messrs. Smith and Middlemiss joined.

The Presbytery then adjourned.—Guelph Mercury.

A Southern writer, who has just had an interview with Mr. George D. Prentice, says he is not the man he was ten years ago. Indeed, his genius is gone, and his person is a wreck. His family is broken up—wife dead, one son killed on the Confederation side, another settled on a farm down the river—and the old man, verging on three score and ten, cooks his breakfast and dines in his little room on the third floor of the Courier building, and lives only in conversation about the past. This man once wielded an imperial power with his wit and ard his music. Now the world has whirled past him, and he lies on the shore a mere stranded wreck.

The Invention of Lithography.

The impatience of a German washerwoman led to the invention of lithography. The history of that elegant art begins with a homely domestic scene, which occurred at Munich about the year 1793, and in which three characters figured.—Madam Senefelder the poor widow of an excellent actor, then recently deceased; her son, Alois Senefelder, aged twenty-two, a young man of an inventive turn; and the impatient washer-woman just mentioned. The washer-woman had called at the house of the widow for the weekly "wash;" but the "list" was not ready, and the widow asked her son to take it. He looked about the room for a piece of paper upon which to write it, without being able to find the least fragment, and he noticed also that his ink was dry. Washer-women are not apt to be overawed by such customers, and this one certainly did not conceal her impatience while the fruitless search was proceeding. The young man had in the apartment, a smooth, soft, cream colored stone, such as lithographers now use. He had also a mass of paste made of lampblack, wax, soap and water. In the hurry of the moment, he dashed upon the soft, smooth stone the short list of garments, using for the purpose this awkward lump of oily paste. The washer-woman went off with her small bundle of clothes, peace was restored to the family, and the writing on the stone remained.—James Parton in the Atlantic Monthly.

STRANGE FREAK OF A MAN OF GENIUS:—A few years ago Laurence Oliphant, who went to England as the Secretary of the Japanese mission, made a deep impression on the fashionable and political world by his brilliant talents. He was comparatively unknown, but in a few months took all hearts by storm. He obtained a seat in Parliament, moved in the highest circles of society, and was the universal favorite of the world of fashion. He was once seen sauntering into the Travellers Club with two men leaning on his arms—one His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, the other His Majesty the King of Denmark! Such a future as that which lay before this handsome, clever, fascinating young diplomatist, says an English paper, any man might have envied. Suddenly, however, Laurence Oliphant was missed from his place in society, from the club and "House," and opera. Where he had gone none could tell. Even his constituents at Stirling were unable to get any accurate information concerning him, and as he made no appearance at the recent election, another man was chosen in his place. He has at last been discovered, however, in a semi-religious, semi-socialastic community at Brocton, on the borders of Lake Erie, where the once idolized star of Belgravia now follows the plough and wears home spun.

The wages of sin is death. An awful instance of this is reported in Liverpool, where a young French captain, recently married had gone ashore in company with a shipbroker and spent an evening of the wildest debauchery. At eleven o'clock they parted at a house of ill-fame, agreeing to meet on board the ship at twelve o'clock, preparatory to a night excursion. Mark this. The captain, on staggering across the narrow plank, leading from the quay to his ship slipped, and in falling struck his head scattering the brains all over the wall. Scarce a moment later, the ship-broker, hurrying at top speed to keep his appointment, slipped into one of the hydraulic lifts, just as it was rising with tuck, and was crushed absolutely to bits between the machinery and brickwork.

FICTITIOUS GEMS—A recent English work on diamonds says that but a small portion of the gems sold and worn is genuine. The diamond mines of Golconda have given out, and those of India are rapidly failing. Thus the scarcity of real gems has been met by the ingenuity of counterfeiters. As for these patent imitators, these indefatigable fabricators of gems, it is scarcely propable that the curious branch of industry will ever be relinquished; at least, it is certain that while poor humanity retains its present tendency to strive for that which is beyond its reach, and accept the shadow for the substance, paste diamonds, enamelled porcelain opals, and pearls of fish scales will be marketable articles in the civilized world, as well as among the dusky tribes upon the coral strands of Africa.

The Abyssinian expedition has turned out to be very much more costly than any one ever anticipated, and the expenditure so great in fact that the game would to many hardly seem worth the candle. The cost is now estimated at £8,600,000, a very large sum, and £5,000,000 more than it was said last year would suffice to cover the outlay. It may, however, by proving that England can sometimes be in earnest, save a much heavier expenditure in her dealings, with some other power at some future occasion.

A DESERTER'S STRATAGEM.—A soldier of the 69th, now stationed in Montreal, wanted to desert to the States, and chose the garb of a Methodist parson to effect his purpose. All along the frontier there are military detectives who are on the look out for such as he, but he completely fooled them; he distributed tracts on the train, not only to the passengers, but to the military detectives of his own regiment.—

A parson was picturing to an old sinner on his death bed the glories that awaited him if he would repent. He promised him among other things, that he should soon be an angel. "Don't talk that way, please, parson," said the dying man; "if there is anything I have a horror of, it is of being an angel sitting on a damp cloud picking a harp by moonlight."

A swindler went into an extensive jewellery establishment in Baltimore, a few days ago, pretending to have several bags of gold dust or filings. He exhibited a genuine bag as a sample, and the jeweller bought all by it, paying $2,700. The remaining bags proved spurious. The swindler escaped.

One of the best presentation speeches ever made is said to be the following, addressed in a railroad shop in Illinois, on presenting a watch to the time-keeper: "Be dad, boss, we thrust the watch will keep as good time for you as yees have kept for us this many a year."

It has been discovered that some ladies use paint as fiddlers use resin. To aid them in drawing a beau.

He submits to be seen through a microscope who suffers himself to be caught in a passion.

The French define "flirtation" to be "the boundary line between friendship and love."

Love and discretion are sworn foes; the former is nearly always the conqueror.

Josh Billings on Grasshoppers.

When the grasshopper begins to live they are very small, but in a little time there gits to be plenty of them. They only live one year at once, an then go back and begin agin. Their love gits in a hup, and with the wind on their quarters they take some very good time. They are a sure crop to raise, but some years they raise more than others. I've seen some fields so full of them that you could not stick another grasshopper in unless you sharpened him, too a pint. When they get so plenty they are apt to start, and then they become a travellin' famin, and leave the road they take as barren as the inside of a country church during a week day. Grasshoppers don't seem to be actually necessary to our happiness, but that may be—we don't even know what we want most. I don't want grasshoppers entirely out, not if they are a blessing, but I have thought (to myself) if they would let grass and corn stalks be, and pitch into the barlocks and Canady thistles, just to one or age the fight, I wouldn't care a cuss if they both got finally licked. But my best judgement would be to let on the grasshoppers.

A "Yankee story," heard by us some two years ago in England, may not be new to our readers, since its "texture" seems to show the cis-Atlantic loom. In our opinion, however, it is so good, that we are tempted to give it, at risk of its being a repetition: An American—a veritable "Down Easter," and not to be mistaken for any other stripe—was riding in an English railway carriage, his sole companion being an Englishman, equally unmistakeable as a typical "John Bull." They were strangers to one another, and had travelled some fifty miles or more, without a word passing 'tween them.

The "whistle" was heard, interrupting their unseemable meditations; when the Yankee, whose curiosity could not any longer be kept in restraint, asked what it was for. "Aa—aa!" yawned the Britisher. "Signal! we are yawing to stop at station." Jonathan craned his neck out of the window, but could see no sign of a station. He said so to his travelling companion.

"Of course you cawn't see it," was the reply. "It's more than five miles from heaw. Our railways make such speed, it is absolutely necessary to sound the signal five miles off, to give the engineer time to stop off his steams, put on the tweak, and suspend the motion. I presoome you don't make such speed, on the other side of the Atlantic?"

"Wal, strange!" somewhat tartly rejoined Jonathan, seeing that his nationality was discovered. "We make considerable speed t'other side too. We tried the whissel, but it wouldn't do nohow. I deesinctly remember, travellin' on a train, 'atween Bosting an' the Green Mountings o' Varmount, on the which war a conductor who dependet on his whissel. Wal; as we were streakin' along, we seed 'beout ten miles ahead, a team o' oxen in a wagon wi' thar driver wippin' 'em across the rails. Our conductor ordered the loudest kind o' screech on the whissel; and that war the last thing I heerd, 'cept an allfired smash, that knocked sound out o' my ears and daylight out o' my eyes. I reck'n I must 'a been dead for more'n five minutes.

"When I kim to my senses again, I seed the wagon lyin' on the rail at track, broke up into spokes, the oxen knocked into squash, an' the driver lyin' dead on the top o' 'em. An' beside, the hul o' the railway cars war off o' the track; thar passengers crushed an' squirmin', an' the conductor lyin' clost by the engine, looking as if he'd been drawed an' quartered! Jest at that minnit the whissel he'd ordered to be sounded 'beout ten miles back kim past; but it kim too late. Yes, stranger; we tried the thing in the States. It wouldn't do. It wasn't quick enough; an' we're now using electric sights."

We clip the following from an exchange We advise nightly visitors of dry goods clerks to beware: A clerk in a dry goods store retired one night, having for his bed fellow an acquaintance dating back to school days. Our informant slept in the next room the door of which was partly opened. In the middle of the night, he says, he was awoke from sleep by hearing the clerk, in a loud voice, exclaim, "How many yards did you say you wanted, marm? Three yards enough?" and the next thing he heard a tearing noise, and the bed fellow of the clerk shouted out, "What are you doing?—you have torn my shirt from top to bottom. The poor dreamer imagined himself in the store waiting on a lady customer, who wanted three yards of calico. The shouts of merriment which the event created can well be imagined.

During a concert in the Boston Music Hall, recently, when the organist was exhibiting the full power of the instrument, a lady was enthusiastically conversing with her neighbour about her household arrangements. She suited the tones of her voice to those of the organ, but reckoned without her host this time. The organist made a sudden transition from fff to pianissimo, with at giving the lady warning; consequently the audience were somewhat amused at being informed by her, in a shout, that "We fried ours in butter."

ABSENCE OF MIND.—A man thinking he was at home, a few evenings since, laid down on the common, and put his boots outside the gate, to be blackened in the morning. Another person, after getting home one rainy night, put his umbrella in bed, and leaned up in the corner himself. A third retired to his chamber, and after undressing, placed his pantaloons carefully between the sheets, and threw himself across the back of a chair, in which situation he was exposed during the night.

A NEW DRINK.—"Mr. Guzzlemuction, I have discovered a new drink for you. Suppose you try a little." "Well, I don't care if I do; (drinks.) "It hasn't got a very bad taste to it; and if my memory serves me right, it is what they call water. I recollect drinking some when I was a lad."

"Never give a boy a shilling to hold your shadow while you climb a tree to look into the middle of next week; it is money thrown away!" says a genius who speaks from what he knows.

There is not the least difficulty in getting along with an intelligent man; but stubborn, domineering ignorance gives all the trouble, and often defeats the wisest purposes of intelligence.

"My dear," said a rural wife to her husband, on his return from town, "what was the sweetest thing you saw in bonnets in the city?" "The ladies faces, my love."

A Western editor, in response to a subscriber who grumbled that his morning paper was intolerably damp says "that it was because there was so much due on it."

"Leave you, my friend" said a tipsy fellow clinging to a lamp post, one dark night; "leave you in a condition not to take care of yourself? (hic) never!"

It is singular how pious new clothes makes people. For a whole month after the Misses Flirt get new mantillas they are at church three times a day.

If a man has a right to be proud of anything it is of a good action, done as it ought to be, without any base interest lurking at the bottom of it.

A prodigal complained one day to Socrates that he had no money. Borrow of yourself by retrenching your expenses," replied the sage.

We spend half our lives in making mistakes, and waste the poor remainder in reflecting how easily we might have avoided them.

An agriculturist is of the opinion that the ice crop throughout the country has not been injured by the frost this winter.

Many of the waves of trouble, like those of the ocean, will, if we await them calmly, break at our feet and disappear.

Many are great because their associates are small.

OF

IN CANADA.

MESSRS YOUNG & CHAMBERLAIN,—Sirs,—I feel it a duty I owe to you, as well as to the public, to inform you of the most wonderful cure of consumption, accomplished in my person, by the use of the Great Rhodonaven Remedy and Pills. I coughed a great deal day and night, expectorating great quantities of matter, and had a great pain about my left lung. I had cold chills every day, and severe night sweats every night, and between the racking cough and great sweating, I was almost deprived of sleep; by these miseries as well as the loss of appetite, I was so reduced that I could hardly stand alone. I was under the care of a physician for a length of time, but finding no relief, I tried different receipes, but all without any good effect. Squire Peterson of Bath, recommended me so to use the Great Rhodonaven Remedy; I procured three bottles, at once, with the Pills; as soon as I commenced using it I began to get better, and when I had finished this complement, the cough, expectoration of matter, pain about the lung, chills sweating, &c., left me; and by continuing its use I became strong and healthy. It is now over two months since I quit the remedy, and there have been no symptoms of the disease returning, and I have been, and am now, healthier and better than I have been for many years. I trust you will make this known to the public, that they may be aware of the peculiar virtues of this truly wonderful Indian Remedy.

PETER C. V. MILLER,
Earnestown, Co. of Lennox & Addington.

To all to whom it may come.—This is to certify, that I have been acquainted with the above mentioned gentleman Peter C V. Miller, Esq., for many years, and have known him always to be of the very highest respectability, and a very candid and creditable person, and I am confident that I can safely vouch for the truth of the above, or any other statement made by him.

Poetry.

Sorrow and Sighing Shall Flee Away.

Sorrow and sighing, sorrow and sighing,
How can it happen these should pass
Out of a world where the flowers lie dying,
Out of a world where all flesh is grass?
Sorrow and sighing, sorrow and sighing,
Dear as the Autumn, and fair as the rain.

Sorrow and sighing, sorrow and sighing,
Will they then cease and our souls grow dull?
Sluggishly somnolent, torpidly lying,
Lapped in the calm of a deep sea lull?
Sorrow and sighing, sorrow and sighing,
Should we not long for the thundering main?

Sorrow and sighing, sorrow and sighing,
All to be done and our tears gone dry;
Never a thought o'er the boundary flying,
Never a grasp as the clouds swing by,
Sorrow and sighing, sorrow and sighing,
All faded out, nothing left to restrain.

Sorrow and sighing, sorrow and sighing,
What would our days be cut off from these?
If, at the fairy mart, we were life buying,
Should we not choose them, past things that please?
Sorrow and sighing, sorrow and sighing,—
Take what you will, only leave us our pain.

William Ewart Gladstone.

A STUDY OF CHARACTER.

(From London Society)

Any one who attempts to investigate the life and extraordinary career of Mr. Gladstone, soon discovers that any literary or biographical attempt necessarily resolves itself into a study of character. Such a study speedily becomes a social puzzle, an ethical problem. Mr. Gladstone is a many-sided man. There are all kinds of diverging lines in his character. His orbital range has been so abnormal and eccentric, that it seems at first hard to refer it to any kind of law. There is no man against whom greater contradictions and inconsistencies are alleged, inconsistencies and contradictions which he himself admits, and which the world hastens to condone. Like Moore's Alciphron, as he takes each successive step the step behind crumbles for ever away beneath his feet. He has falsified every prediction which men have made of him, or which he has made of himself.—To understand him, we have to investigate abtruse veins of thought in his mind, which to most men are utterly dry and repellent, but which, when suddenly transferred to the region of practical politics, spring a mine with meteoric explosion. There are, we believe, people who deny that Mr. Gladstone possesses the least honesty of purpose. They refuse to believe that he is a good writer, or even that he is a really great orator. With such persons we can have no common ground. We do not profess to say whether Mr. Gladstone is a first-rate statesman, or only, as it has been said, a second-rate statesman with his mind 'in a first-rate state of effervescence.'—However that may be, Mr. Gladstone is a man of whose high nature and great gifts his country may well be proud. That indeed would be a miserable party spirit which, for the sake of party, would seek to derogate unjustly from these great qualities. With whatever measure of infirmity and alloy, Mr. Gladstone is the most brilliant Englishman of the century, and is, in the main, inspired by a chivalrous and most scrupulous honour. The reputation of her great statesmen is dear to England; and to us it seems utterly impossible to construct any theory of Mr. Gladstone's character, or to find any clue to its changes and chances, without in the fullest degree demanding these two elements as the basis of our climate. There may be flaws in the shining harness. The image, with its head of fine gold, may have an admixture of iron and clay. There is, no doubt, speaking generally, a tendency towards the sophistical in his mind. There is something parasitical in his nature. The oratorical genius is not, after all, the statesmanlike genius; and Mr. Gladstone, with his concentrated power of oratory, is often reflecting the thoughts and guidance of other intellects, from whom he receives thoughts, and to whose thoughts he lends his great gift of varied and eloquent expression.—His principles resemble a system of stratification, where each new set of ideas overlays and well nigh obliterates its predecessor; and this is attributed that want of proportion in his mind which by many is held to be its cardinal defect. The study of a career, so noble and varied and rich in achievement, with whatever admixture of error and infirmity, is necessarily fraught with the highest and most elevated interest.

Mr. Gladstone entered parliament through what was then the favourite avenue of academic distinction. He had done very little in parliament—a few remarks, almost conversational, about the freedmen of Liverpool, about slavery in the island of Demerara, where his father held property, and a short set speech chiefly remarkable as being a defence of the Irish Church—when he was made a Lord of the Treasury, and afterwards Under-Secretary of State.—But Sir Robert Peel had the quick eye to detect early political genius and the happy ability to foster it. Mr. Gladstone could not fail to commend himself heartily to Peel's sympathies. Like Peel, he had passed through Eton and Christ Church.—Like Peel, he had taken from the University of Oxford its highest honours. Like Peel, he had sprung from a family that owed all its greatness to the honourable and successful pursuits of commerce. In process of time the young statesman procured for himself a peculiar kind of reputation. He almost approximated to the etherial reputation which Wilberforce had obtained in the unreformed parliament. There was an earnestness, a seriousness about him to which the House was not accustomed, but which it did not dislike. There was a gentle hortatory and religious vein about him, not unmusical, to which they willingly listened. They saw that he was nervous, scrupulous, sensitive to a degree. In every political step, in every speech and vote, he avowed a lofty religious motive and followed an inflexible principle. This was true, superfine, in fact; and men thought that a political casuist was too far removed from the region of practical politics. In those days there was a kind of gentle hanger and mrbockety about him. He seemed a recluse, of scholarly poetic temperament. He was a political lotus-eater. His voice was called 'the echo of a voice;' the voice of one in whose breast all human passions were lulled. It was thought that he lacked the 'combativity' necessary for parliamentary conflict. It was thought that both his physique and morale were against him. Men regretted that one of so much mind and culture should be never likely to prove an orator, and should turn out on so many points to be altogether impracticable.—There was much vague admiration for him. Evidently he loved truth with a passionate love, and he mixed in controversy with the courtesy of a knight of romance, avoiding selfishness and personality, and only seeking to defend the better cause. The Tadpoles and Tapers must have shaken their heads despairingly at him.

But in the meantime Mr. Gladstone was developing another side to his character, for which the public were hardly prepared. He manifested, if indeed any man, a dual character. If he was great as a thinker in the study, he was equally great as a man of business in the office. All the commercial genius of his family appeared to find an existence in himself. He had all a financier's taste for figures and statistics. Business men who were brought in contact with him found that the young statesman understood their own line of commerce as well as, or better than they did themselves. His information was unbounded, and his mastery of detail. It was said of him that he possessed vast information 'in connection with that under-current of commerce which flows in warehouses and counting-houses, but of which the Cabinet and the library know scarcely the existence.' It is probable that from the very first he was a free-trader, and that he anticipated his great political master in the fulness and ripeness of his views. There was no financial detail in which he could not detect and state the underlying principle. It was noted that not even Sir Robert Peel nor Sir James Graham had so broad and philosophical a grasp of principle. It was well known that the great revised Customs Tariff Act of 1842, when out of twelve hundred duty-paying articles more than half were relieved from taxation in whole or part, was, under Peel's guidance, Mr. Gladstone's sole handiwork. Mr. Gladstone watched the bill, clause by clause, through the committee; the acute intellect that dealt so much with abstract ideas with all the subtlety of a casuist or a theologian was absorbed with the great subject of Baltic timber, or the duties on salt meat and salt herrings. Practically, so well did this final legislative work, that the Whig deficit was exchanged for a surplus of some millions. There seems also every reason to believe that Mr. Gladstone was the author of that great institution in railways, the parliamentary train.

Thirdly, Mr. Gladstone was now winning himself a great position as a parliamentary debater. With each step that he made in political life his mind seemed to expand. Men did not clearly understand the character of his mind; they questioned whether he understood his own mind; but he was able and he was conscientious. For successful oratory, character is as important an element as ability. When Demosthenes said that action was the first, second, and third thing necessary, what Demosthenes meant was most probably earnestness. And Mr. Gladstone was always terribly earnest to the knowledged point of being crotchetty. If he put on his hat, it was as if, to use a modern expression, he was 'crowning the edifice,' and would draw on his gloves as if he were enunciating an immortal principle. Still this was a fault in the right direction. He became a great debater; in some points of view the best debater in the house. His freshness and vitality were astonishing. He had not the great drawbacks which other great debaters had. It was always felt that Peel was plausible, and had a Pecksniffian odour about him. Sir James Graham was sarcastic and weighty, but then many people thought that Sir James Graham was a hypocrite. Disraeli was mighty, but then his might was dwarfed by personalities. Macaulay and Sheil were both born orators in their way; but Macaulay was too imaginative, and Sheil was too passionate. Mr. Gladstone was at least perfectly free from all such extremes as these. His speeches were no longer on merely special subjects, but dealt with all matters of broad imperial interest. It was known that he could be a victorious competitor with great commercial authorities. The lawyers found that both in subtlety and grasp the young statesman was able to vie with them. Ecclesiastics, in the outward world, knew that he could meet them exactly on their own weapons. He always seemed to be developing fresh powers of which he and the world had been unconscious. He made many very able speeches before he attained the height of those great orations which thrilled the House and the country. Only slowly and gradually he became what Mr. Bernal Osborne called the 'Red Indian' of debate. By such gradual approaches Mr. Gladstone has made his way to the Premiership; and the only wonder is that he had not attained it before the shadows of age were beginning to close upon him.

We will now attempt to follow Mr. Gladstone's career somewhat more in detail.

Mr. Gladstone stated at a Glasgow meeting some time back that he had not a particle of any but Scotch blood in his veins. Almost simultaneously Scotland has given to the country a prime minister and an archbishop. The Gladstones, in the last generation, though they came from an old stock of Lanarkshire lairds, were only humble traders at Leith. Mr. Gladstone's father came as a youth to Liverpool, became a member of a firm of the greatest reputation on the 'Change, made a splendid fortune, purchased the estate of Fasque in Kincardineshire, obtained a baronetcy, saw his son a Cabinet Minister, and died in 1851, nearly a nonagenarian. It was through this distinguished parent that Mr. Gladstone may be supposed to derive his astonishing intimacy with our commercial system, and it may here be said that both his mother and his wife may be worthily associated with his own high feeling and high intellect. At Liverpool he was often brought into contract with Mr. Canning, who, at auction mart, used to be his father's guest at Seaforth. It may well be imagined how potent an influence was the mind of Canning over the dawning mind of the Liverpool merchant's son. It was at Eton that he first formed that friendship with Lord Lincoln, afterwards Duke of Newcastle, which, through the father of his friend, was destined first to bring him into political life. One of his school friends has made the following interesting mention of him: 'Gladstone was a perfect scholar; and the only lad who afterwards was at all equal to him was Selwin (the Bishop of Lichfield and New Zealand). They both lived at the same dame's, a house that took very few boarders, and, therefore, it was the more remarkable that the two leading men of Eton should come from under the same roof. The house is situated just opposite to the Christopher Inn. Gladstone was tall, with a particularly clear and tranquil eye, and good complexion; and indeed he always went by the name of "handsome". Gladstone. I should have thought Gladstone too contemplative and deep in his mind to have wished to become a statesman, and embroiled in all the evanescent toils of politics; and he, like Froude, engaged in no rough games, although I think Gladstone was a cricketer. I should have set Gladstone down for a second Wordsworth in after life.' He was, at Eton, a great friend of Harrell Froude's, and it has been supposed that this friendship was not without effect in determining the peculiar complexion of Mr. Gladstone's ecclesiastical views.

We believe that at Oxford Mr. Gladstone, Sir Roundell Palmer, and Mr. Lowe, all entertained for a time the intention of taking holy orders. How different might have been the condition of English politics if this determination had been maintained! These early days would not have been of any political import, had not Mr. Disraeli, who, with his immense strategical ability, has no aptitude for blunders, gone back to them, in order to found a charge of inconsistency against his mighty rival. Had Mr. Disraeli possessed the advantage of a public school and University education he would have been saved this blunder. He alluded to a debate at the Union on the 16th of May, 1831: 'I am sure hon. gentlemen opposite will remember Wyatt's rooms and the Oxford Union,' and he quoted a resolution, of a ferociously Tory character, adding, 'The amendment, as I have read it, was quoted by Mr. William Gladstone, of Christ Church.' The reference was ill-judged; the common sense of the House could not tolerate that the speaker should go back to undergraduate college days in search of weapons of attack. It had however the advantage of eliciting from Mr. Gladstone some autobiographic sentences of much interest. 'The right honourable gentleman, when he addressed the hon. member for Westminster, took occasion to shew his magnanimity, for he declared that he would not take the philosopher to task for what he wrote twenty-five years ago. But when he caught one, who, thirty-five years ago, who, just emerged from boyhood, and still an undergraduate at Oxford, had expressed an opinion adverse to the Reform Bill of 1832, of which he had so long and bitterly repented, then the right hon. gentleman could not resist the temptation that offered itself to his appetite for effect. ....Sir, as the right hon. gentleman has done me the honour thus to exhibit me, let me for a moment trespass on the patience of the House to exhibit myself. What he has stated is true. I deeply regret it.—But I was bred under the shadow of the great name of Canning; every influence connected with that name governed the first political impressions of my childhood and my youth; with Mr. Canning I rejoiced in the removal of religious disabilities from the Roman Catholic body, and in the free and truly British tone which he gave to our policy abroad; with Mr. Canning I rejoiced in the opening he made towards the establishment of free commercial interchanges between nations; with Mr. Canning, and under the shadow of that great name, and under the shadow of the yet more venerable name of Burke, I grant my youthful mind and imagination were impressed with the same idle and futile fears which still bewilder and distract the matured mind of the right hon. gentleman.'

It was hardly fair of Mr. Gladstone to give this speech this mere boyish character, as it was delivered only the year before he was first elected to his seat in the first Reformed Parliament. That phase of the constitution has now ceased to exist, but up to this point Mr. Gladstone's career has been commensurate with it, and the parliamentary life of Mr. Gladstone during the constitution of 1832, like that constitution, has become matter of history. Looking broadly at that career, and attempting honestly to arbitrate between conflicting views, it appears to us that, on the whole, Mr. Gladstone has adopted a disinterested and patriotic course. Mr. Gladstone is certainly fond of office. Mr. Bright once said that he thought Mr. Gladstone was much happier in office, but he thought he would live longer without it. But, nevertheless, he has repeatedly refused or sacrificed office, and by so doing well-nigh reduced himself to a state of Ishmaelitish isolation. There was something almost Quixotic and undubitably austere in his resignation of office in 1845. It was not even professed that he was in antagonism with his chief, Sir Robert Peel, on the question of the Maynooth Grant. His rigid Church principles were then perceptibly beginning to thaw. He was aware that by supporting the bill he should be departing from the principles of his famous book on the 'Church in relation to the State,' and he held it his duty to resign office, and so study the subject free from all biassed and selfish considerations. His friends strongly remonstrated with him, conspicuously among them the present Lord Derby. 'I respectfully submit,' says Mr. Gladstone, in his recent 'Chapter of Autobiography,' 'that by this act my freedom was established, and that it has never since, during a period of five-and-twenty years, been compromised.'—After a year of penitential expiation, Mr. Gladstone became Secretary for the Colonies in the reconstructed Free Trade Administration of Sir Robert Peel. But Newark was now closed against him. The Lord of Clumber, who had hopelessly quarrelled with his own son on the Free Trade question, was not likely to assist that son's recreant friend. Mr. Gladstone was now without a seat in parliament for nearly two years, during a considerable portion of which he was a Cabinet Minister. From the gallery, or beneath it, he watched that great battle of Free Trade, where he could not himself mingle in its fray and lift his voice above the din. It must have been a sore trial to him to sit silent while weaker men were dealing with the profound subject which he knew so intimately.

In the general election of 1847 he obtained the parliamentary blue ribbon of representing the University of Oxford. He himself has told us how fondly, how passionately, he desired and clung to his seat. He would be content to sit as member, he once said, if he only had a majority of a single vote. 'The representation of the University was, I think, stated by Mr. Canning to be to him the most coveted prize of political life. I am not ashamed to own that I desired it with almost passionate fondness.' He says, perhaps with a shade of reproachfulness, that it used to be a trust which, once given, was not repulsed. But abnormal politicians must expect abnormal electoral treatment. Indeed if the worthy electors had been far-sighted enough to have followed out the logical results of the principles Mr. Gladstone now professed, that persistent resistance which was always made to him at Oxford would have been successful at the outset. But they looked at his career as a whole, and not at its recent phases. He was a High Churchman; those stood sponsors for him who were high in the estimation of the University, and, above all, there was the immortal essay, which had never, in so many express terms, been repudiated. One of his first steps as member was to give a vehement support to the Jewish bill, to which he had hitherto been vehemently opposed. This was taking up an entirely new position. He now adopted the principle of Religious Equality which was fraught with serious results to be gradually worked out in course of time. Discerning men saw that he was effectually severing himself from the Oxford majority, but Oxonians repeatedly sought to retain him as one who, in spite of growing differences, in the main so faithfully reflected their intellectual tendencies and religious sympathies.

For years the vanity band of Peelites occupied the cross-benches. That party was all head and no tail; generals without an army, leaders without a following. The tendencies of the Peelites were confused and contradictory, gravitating partly towards the Whigs and partly towards the party which they had disorganized and abandoned. The instinct of Conservatism was still strong upon Mr. Gladstone, and for long years that instinct retained its vitality. For the most part, Sir Robert Peel gave Lord John Russel an effectual support; but just before his death, in that great Pacifico debate in which Mr. Gladstone made his first great oration, of some hours' length, Sir Robert appeared to be veering in the opposite direction. Mr. Gladstone struck out a course for himself, and by so doing, ran the peril of being stranded high and dry as a politician. The whole Peelite party were subsequently very much in this condition when they withstood the Ecclesiastical Titles Bill. Events justified them. Lord John having loaded his gun, was too much frightened to pull the trigger. The leave of the Attorney-General was necessary before any prosecution could be brought, and this leave was never given. The bill was an abortion from the first. Mr. Gladstone supported Mr. Disraeli in his motion for inquiry into agricultural distress, on one occasion answering Graham, and being answered by Peel. After the death of Peel, he would probably have joined the Conservative ranks in 1852 but the question of protection was not then thought to be closed, and was a barrier to his doing so. He declared that he hoped he should find the policy and measures of the new Government such as he could support. This generous language, however, did not prevent him from being largely instrumental in the downfall of the first Derby ministry. There ensued between him and Mr. Disraeli one of those oratorical duels, which once made the latter express his thankfulness that there was a piece of solid furniture between them.—Then followed the Coalition Ministry of All the Talents, under the Earl of Aberdeen, in which, for the first time, he became Chancellor of the Exchequer. Still Mr. Gladstone might cling to the lingering idea that after all he was something of a Conservative. The Peelites with whom he acted would certainly refuse to call themselves Whigs. Once there was an ugly fracas at the Carlton Club, because Mr. Gladstone, while acting against the Conservative party, still frequented the Conservative headquarters. Very cogently-manly conduct is absolutely indefensible; but still these blunt Tories knew what Mr. Gladstone, with all his acuteness, had failed to detect: that he had entirely forsaken the first love of his youth, and that now mountains were rising and seas were rolling between him and the familiar but long-abandoned shores of the past.

As Chancellor of the Exchequer he now made his first great Budget speech, which lasted five hours, and introduced his system of fiscal reform. The Cabinet drifted into war, and calculations based on conditions of war. The Ministry of 'compounded opinions and smothered antipathies' fell to pieces; but though Mr. Gladstone resumed office under Lord Palmerston, he soon parted company with the new Premier, being forced into the step by Lord Palmerston himself. Mr. Gladstone was very restive under exclusion from office; he always is under such circumstances. In 1856 his speeches were incessant. He had almost a mania for speaking. It was, indeed, said that all this was abnormal, and almost looked like a diseased condition of of brain. Members would look at the bar, and exclaim, 'What, Gladstone again! Why, he has spoken every night this week!' And not only would he speak that night, but he would speak over and over again the same night. As he was not in open collision with Lord Palmerston, he once more began to draw near to the Conservatives. The China question allowed a temporary amalgamation of Peelites, Radicals, and Tories. On that great debate on the Arrow, 'Arrow,' Mr. Gladstone delivered another of these finest speeches, which have now become historical. Lord Palmerston's success at the General Election only paved the way for his downfall, the following year, on the cry of submitting to French dictation. The Tory administration came in, and on the whole Mr. Gladstone gave them a generous and discerning support. He would not enter the Cabinet, till he had removed from the University of Oxford, which by repeated flouts had set its constituency at defiance. This was unfortunate, and was afterwards conceded to Gladstone, to their own eventual dissatisfaction. He supported the Tories by speech and vote in their attempt to introduce a Reform Bill, and though he did not speak on their behalf, he voted with them on that vital of confidence motion which ejected them from office. The Tories were greatly disgusted when, without the slightest hesitation, he immediately accepted office in Lord Palmerston's broad-based administration. It seemed very probable that he would be ejected from Oxford; but it judiciously transpired that he had stipulated with Lord Palmerston for an influential voice in church patronage. The Peelites were now absorbed into the Liberal ranks. But Mr. Gladstone was now not only Whig, not only Liberal, but an extreme Radical, going unpromises to doctrines of extreme and levelling democracy. He enunciated the famous 'flesh and blood' doctrine; what the Americans would call the 'platform' of manhood suffrage. We should have mention that his speech on the second reading of Lord Russell's single-barrelled Reform Bill was one of the mightiest of his oratorical efforts. His advanced opinions caused the forfeiture of his seat, first at Oxford and afterwards in South Lancashire. But though 'rejected' by three constituencies Mr. Gladstone is the occupant of the empire, who have elected him by a preponderance of suffrages as its virtual ruler.

The Trial of a Child Murderess—Social Depravity.

Absorbed by the debates on the Constitution of Paris, the famous contrast between the Credit and the Fencier, the "irregularities" or illegalities of the Prefect of the Seine, the Parisian press has paid little attention to the details disclosed during the trial which has been just brought to a close at the Assizes of Montauban. These details exhibit a social depravity, hardly ever surpassed in the annals of crime. The leading criminal in this horrible affair was a woman named Delpech, whose principle occupation seemed to be murdering little children, the offspring of illicit amours, confided to her at their birth or soon afterward. She had carried on her trade for some years, when the suspicions of the police were aroused. A search was made in her house, and led to the discovery of the skeletons, and in some cases only a few bones of her victims, and also and some of her accomplices before and after the fleets were taken into custody and brought to trial. She made a full avowal and not only did she not profess any compunction for what she had done, but laughed several times during her examination by the presiding judge. She has got the name of the 'Ogress' but the ogress of the nursery tale was less merciless, for she tried to save the children of the wood cutter. The woman Delpech, beyond all doubt a most hideous creature, has surpassed other criminals both in the quantity and quality of crime. Her price for taking charge of these children varied from 100f. to 400f., as she herself informed the court; her treatment of them she avowed with the most revolting indifference without omitting detail. When the infants cried for hunger, she gave them oil of vitriol in a bottle to drink, and thus silenced their screams of agony by plunging their hands in boiling water. The verdict of the jury was "guilty with extenuating circumstances." What these "extenuating circumstances" were it is hard to say, unless they were founded on the fact of her having committed ten or twelve murders instead of one or two. The "extenuating circumstances," however, saved her life. She was sentenced by the court to hard labor for life.

MAKING FOR YOUNG GIRLS.—Never make your appearance in the morning without having first bathed, brushed and arranged the hair, and dressed yourself nearly completely. Keep your clothing, especially your under clothing, in perfect order.—Never let pins do duty as buttons, or strings take the place of proper bands. Examine every garment when it comes from the wash, and if necessary mend it with neatness and precision. Train yourself to useful occupation. Remember it is wicked to waste time, and nothing gives such an impression of vanity as a habit of idling. If you are in your father's house take some department of household labor upon yourself and a part of the sewing, and make it you business to attend to it. Let your pleasures come in as recreation not as the business of your life. If you can cultivate some art by which you could gain an independent livelihood. Do it, whether there is any necessity for it or not. There is no telling when or under what circumstance you may need it.

In the Isle, of Man, [illegible] Laxey yielded £30,000 profit; being [illegible] rate of 70 per cent per annum on the [illegible] capital. In Wales, there gold [illegible] £67,000 for the year; being at the rate of [illegible] per cent the season on the paid-up capital. The Llyngwrin mines, as usual, divided [illegible] each year [illegible] and boats of other [illegible] shares, such as the Snailbach, [illegible] Clogh, Wheal Mary Ann, Hereford, Wheal Trelawny, Cwm Eudy, Cwmsymmerin, Minling Company of Ireland, [illegible] Mining Company (London Company), [illegible] Eliot Darren, Mr. Beaumont's [illegible] and other mines [illegible] up of others, both [illegible] to their [illegible] owners [illegible] averaging on the whole about [illegible] cent. on the invested capital. [illegible] Lot' mines also are in all directions [illegible] this York. The Van mine and the [illegible] Mine in Wales—which have [illegible] into existence quite recently, and [illegible] divided by private companies—are turning [illegible] magnificent successes; the former [illegible] it is said, between 200 and 300 per [illegible] profit on the capital expended. Indeed, [illegible] every direction lead mining is asserting [illegible] character of being at once [illegible] profitable and, least, remunerative of [illegible] of British industry; which is [illegible], to be wondered at when we consider [illegible] England yields from a few mountain districts annually between one and a half and two millions, in ultimate value, of lead and argentiferous lead, at a cost comparatively [illegible], do [illegible] fairly very deep or [illegible] conducted to work."

A Novel way of Prolonging the Royal Life.

The French papers brought by the last European mail mention [illegible] of unheard of [illegible] and religious fatuity. The matter will soon be revealed at length before the criminal courts of justice. We merely give an outline of what preliminary examinations of other parties have brought to light. Some 20 years ago at the time of religious excitement caused by [illegible] from Rome to Caste, a young [illegible] girl [illegible] and made a vow that if their fondlings was a male child they would [illegible] the service of the Holy Virgin. They had no children during the first 18 years of their [illegible], while they were blessed by the birth of boys, and were rejoiced at the idea that they might at first add a soldier to the Pope's army, and their fond hope was the subject of all their conversation.

One day, lately, one of the parents was struck with the idea that their vow had been confined to Pius IX, who was then in exile, and that it was hardly possible that his life or his could be prolonged until their son would be old enough to be offered to his Holiness even as a drummer. This difficulty worked upon their minds until at last the wife suggested that as Abraham was once ready to sacrifice his son, he should they be to offer it the child's life. They both agreed that they would be ready to do that if it could be in any way agreeable or useful to the representative of Christ upon earth. At last they came to the determination to kill their son and to offer the sacrifice on the 16th of that the pains during which he would have probably lived might be added to Pius IX's life. Having spent the evening in fervent prayers they went to bed after having, it is supposed, administered poison to the poor child who was found dead next morning. The neighbors, from the singular joy expressed by the parents, and their otherwise eccentric behaviour in dwelling frequently that they had secured the Holy Father's existence for another long period, became suspicious and had the whole affair brought before the authorities. A regular examination is taking place, the results of which will be made public when concluded; but from the admission of the poor deluded fanatics it is surmised that things have occurred as above related. This is but another among the numerous instances of insanity brought on by religious excitement combined with profound ignorance and a complete prohibition of the right of enquiry in such matters.

THE TRICHINÆ QUESTION.—We have been shown by Dr. Edwards some fine photographs taken by Mr. C Baillie and himself of the trichinæ in the pork which was said to be the same as that purchased of by the family in College street, concerning which Dr. Bessey communicated some interesting facts to the Witness. In this way they are obvious even to the unpractised eye. Our remarks in yesterday's issue were not intended to throw any doubt upon the fact that trichinæhad been discovered, but rather that the circumstances did not justify general apprehension or alarm, as we at first supposed. We are also informed that they have been found, quite independently, in the same pork, by Dr. Bell, Dr. Howard.

The fact that many investigations of a precautionary may show no trichinæ, is no proof that trichinæ does not exist in it, for it is only in some parts of the muscles that they are found. And, in the case in question, Dr. Edwards, we understand, found none in at least forty or fifty microscopic fields which he examined, but wherever he did find a piece of muscle infected, several of the trichinæ were present. The shape of these minute creatures is something like that of an earth worm, very much tapered towards the head. Each encoiled up in its cyst, and one is putting his head through the egg. As the whole case is in able scientific hands, we await with interest a full report upon it, which we hope will be made public.—Witness.

SINGULAR LAWSUIT.—A remarkable trial has just been decided in the Court of Queen's Bench, London, England. The plaintiff, an Irish lady, Miss Smith, became a Sister of Mercy in the year 1851, in Dublin, and afterwards removed to a Convent at Hull. She alleged that a conspiracy was entered into by her last Lady Superior, and another Sister, to compel her to cease to be a member of the Convent, by subjecting her to various indignities, persecutions and annoyances, depriving her of food and clothing, preventing her from attending divine service. She was finally expelled by the Catholic Bishop. The damages claimed were £5,000. The jury awarded the plaintiff £500. The case has created intense interest in Great Britain.

A trial just concluded in France has brought to light a wholesale system of infanticide. Eight women are charged with this horrible crime, and all but one have confessed to their guilt. The worst of the lot admitted to the murder of nine infants, whom she drowned in a pail of water and then buried in her cellar. She was sentenced on Monday to the galleys for life, and another for ten years; while five were let off with imprisonments ranging from one to four years.

IMMIGRATION.

For some years under the Government of Canada there was a Minister whose duty it was to watch over Immigration. Year after year, however, passed away and very little was effected. No great influx of emigrants had troubled us, nor are we likely to be troubled by them for some time to come.

There is a faint effort put forth yearly in newspaper articles on the desirability of increasing our population from the surplus population of Great Britain and Ireland, but nothing more appears to be done. Rumor has it that there is a government agent in London for the purpose of attending to the matter, but beyond this rumor there is no thing more known.

Private individuals have undertaken to enlighten the people of Britain on the state of this country, and on the probabilities of emigrants succeeding if they should come to Canada. Yet what will signify all this, if, when they arrive, they are forced to go to the United States to obtain a piece of ground to settle on. Year after year not only are emigrants driven from our coasts, but the sons of our pioneer farmers are forced to leave for the Western States to get farms on which to settle, while at home there are thousands of acres of land belonging to the government that are only visited by the wild animals of the forest, or now and then by a stray hunter, or lumberman's forest rangers.

We are told that none of our wild lands are fit for cultivation—that no one will settle on them; that they consist only of rocks and pine regions, not fit to produce food enough for a crow. But on what authority do these reports come to us? The Government has never employed a reliable party or parties to explore the unsettled regions and report on the matter, and the result of the matter is that the people and the Government, too, are as ignorant of the quality of our wild lands as the people of New Zealand are. They have placed two or three townships in the market, but that is the height of it. In all the other townships not a foot will be sold. The defenders of the Government policy tell us that they are doing this to protect the timber, lest it be wasted or destroyed. But does not common sense tell us that timber belonging to the Government is always being wasted—cut and slashed and burned up, while that belonging to private parties is protected and safe; and the sure way to protect it is to sell it to those whose interest it will be to protect it.

But independent of our timber lands, what has been done to point out to intending settlers where they will find land fit for settlement? Thousands of dollars are spent in surveying the Intercolonial Railway contracts the Gulph fisheries, and government orders (all to pay their organs) but not a word is said about our lands; no effort is made to bring them before the public. Why are there not Commissioners (say one or two) appointed in the back countries to go through and examine the wild lands, and divide them into pine lands, rocks, and arable lands, as the case may be, and after a careful exploration of all the lands in the country, let the reports be published so that the people may know what sort of a country we have, and whether it is capable of supporting emigrants or anything else.

We may be told that all such commissions are costly and unsatisfactory; that seldom true reports are given, and that the people are unwilling to accept reports of government employees. Commissions of this kind need not be costly, if properly managed. If the right sort of men are selected, the reports will be accredited. If Government reports are not to be relied on, why not delegate the power to the County Councils; and we venture to assert that if they do so, the counties will bear one half of the expense willingly, so as to get some tangible and reliable intelligence concerning our back country.

Commissions of this kind might have the power to divide our lands into timber lands and arable lands. If there are any, and then let those arable lands be put into the market at once, and very soon we would find that our young men would be found willing to go and try their luck in the back woods of Canada sooner than go to the far west.

Mr. Richards visited Burleigh last fall and travelled about 20 miles of the road after night, we were told. What a splendid view of the country he must have had! What an intelligent report he would be apt to make to his colleagues of the appearance of things in Burleigh. Besides, we all know that the Burleigh road is not through the best of the lands in that district, and yet the was taken there in order to show him the rocks at the bridge and around it. In fact, if he travelled through the country for two weeks he would not have been prepared to make a full report, and yet we venture to say that his trip to Chandos cost the country as much as an exploring party would cost for an entire month,—yet this is the Government way of doing things. We remarked at the time that Mr. Richards would be as well at home in his parlour, and we leave it to everyone to [illegible] that [illegible] bill.

[illegible] very attentive [illegible] hours [illegible] Mr. Richards [illegible] of doing [illegible] in the use of bringing [illegible] before the people [illegible] good [illegible] lands raised in there being thrown out of it by such management.

THE LOCK AT YOUNG'S POINT.

A defence has been put in to our remarks under the quibbling of the government in the matter of the locks at the above named place, and a lame defence it is.

We are told that the exorbitant demands of the mortgagee of the Young property for compensation is the cause of delay. Such, we can assure the public, is not the case, but on the contrary, the blame lies wholly with the government.

Until lately (perhaps not yet) no one had an offer from the Commissioner of Public Works in the matter. The government had not so much as pointed out the location of the locks. They had surveys and plans, but no one interested had seen them. The owners of the property were asked in a vague manner (and not even by the government) what compensation they would expect, and that without reference to location; and the parties on the property, no doubt to show the Commissioner the way he was doing business, made a vague, undefined offer. There are three proposed locations for the locks and canal. The right of way for one can be had for $500, of the second for $750, but of the third for not less than $3000. Why did not the defenders of the Commissioner of Public Works tell his readers that the whole matter was the selection of one of these three places, and that it has taken said Commissioner since last fall to make up his mind on which of the three—(very clever man indeed). But why is the $500 route rejected, if it be a matter of dollars and cents in the compensation? Whence this squandering of $250, if the last offer be accepted? The truth is, the route for which the least sum is paid may prove the dearest after all is over. We have it on good authority that the cost of construction on the cheapest proposed location would be three or four times what it would cost on the place for which $3000 were asked. And we have every reason to believe that the owners and mortgagee will more willingly take $750 as compensation in one case than $3000 in the other. Suppose one route to cost $5000 or $20,000, as the case may be, and the other three times as much, will the resident come to the rescue and tell the public which will prove the cheapest? But suppose one should leave the mill site useless, would any one say the demand was out of the way high?

Would he not deserve censure rather than praise, who would squander $10,000 or $15,000 on the construction, rather than give a little more for a location that would cost only one-third in construction? But, perhaps, there is some hanger-on who has to get $5,000 or $6,000 out of the job. Another feature in these lock's affair is the sine qua non—"the owners must keep up the dam"—in all the direct and indirect offers of the Commissioner of Public Works. Now, would any sane man take $3,000 and bind himself to keep up the dam alone, not to speak of right of way? Not one. Yet even the last offer the Government has made has that provision in it, we understand.—Does not that clause itself afford a strong argument in proof that there is a wish to back out of building the locks? If the locks are needed, surely a dam is also; and will not the locks be useless unless a dam be provided to supply water therefor? There need be little fear that the dam will be allowed to go down. It is necessary in some degree for the usefulness of the mills at Payne's, War saw, Allandale and Keene, as well as for Young's Mill. But all these mills may fall into the hands of creditors unwilling to improve, then the locks will be useless. Sound Government policy.

There is another feature in the case.—There is a suit now pending, we understand, to compel the owners of the Young's property to lower their dam; perhaps the interested parties in this suit require a little delay. If the Government undertake the building of the locks, it would not be as well, perhaps, for some of their friends; besides, a little delay may allow the suit to be disposed of. There is a wheel within a wheel sometimes.

This is enough for the present, to show the way the wind blows. At some other time we may have to refer to this again.—In the meantime we will have to watch and see what the cost will be, and learn who will be contractor, before we can praise freely.

VERY COOL INDEED.—"Must we," says a contemporary, "set our representative on the run because he deemed it right to oppose and earnestly contend against the members of the government in regard to a Bill in charge of members of the Cabinet? We certainly expect him and other representatives to carry out the distinct pledges or 'platform' on which their election hinged, but in the ramifications of legislative action we have so endorsed their discretion that we are, on the other hand, pledged by our votes to respect it." Sound reasoning: "We certainly expect our representatives to carry out their distinct pledges," but "we are bound to respect their discretion," even when they break their "pledges," so say their mouthpiece. What a set of dolts electors must be! They elected a man by a dozen of a majority to vote for sectarian grants. This was a "distinct pledge" of his. He goes to Toronto and breaks his pledge; yet the organ tells the readers thereof, "that we, (who, the electors or the writer?) are bound to respect this violation of pledge and principle, and promise, and matter of boasting, because he did it at the point of the lash. Consistency. Will the writer tell us when our representative "earnestly contended against the government. It must be a dream. He broke his pledge rather than vote for a "principle of his platform," still "they endorse his indiscretion." Such reasoning may be very sound in combination political economy, but is not logical, reasonable, nor will the electors who voted for him be satisfied with such political ramifications of legislative action.

A HINT OR A PROPHECY?—The rumor that H. R. H. Prince Arthur would shortly join 1st Battalion Rifle Brigade, to be stationed at Montreal, is thus referred to by the Broad Arrow, an English military journal:—"It would probably be premature to specify this as the first opportunity the Prince will have of becoming acquainted with what may prove to be his future kingdom.

The Cunard mail contract having been confirmed by the Imperial Government, the subject of ocean penny postage is laid on the shelf for some seven or eight years to come.

Y. M. C. A.

On Friday evening the regular monthly meeting was held. [illegible] very attentive [illegible] hours. After [illegible] opening [illegible] of reading a portion of scripture, [illegible] and prayer, Mr. H. Fairbairn, [illegible] very excellent essay, the subject of which referred to the last essay.

Our readers are now aware of the discussion that arose on the last essay and of the conflicting opinions that have been set forth. Mr. Fairbairn's essay was therefore intended to take up the ground of debate, as well as to afford no opportunity for explanation and discussion. The essay, which [illegible] cost the writer a great deal of time and careful research. It was well arranged, distinctly and forcibly delivered, and in many places very eloquent, and occupied above 30 minutes in delivery. As no close there were a few minutes given to discussion. Mr. Eastwood took some exception to the essay as not meeting the ground proposed—the refutation of the idea that the old philosophers received, whatever of good they delivered, from God. He also quoted several passages of Scripture to prove that they did receive it from God, and that it was the Spirit of God that "lighteth every man that cometh into the world.

The Rev. Mr. McDonald made some very appropriate remarks, in which he referred to certain newspaper articles in reference to the subject; scouted at the idea of searching the Scriptures by proxy, or allowing any one—minister or not—to do that for us which we should do and are bound to do for ourselves; asserting, that of all his teaching and preaching, every hearer was bound to see whether the things he said were so, and he would be the last man to stifle that discussion when carried on in a proper spirit. He then read from a work by Dr. Trench to show, that the good in heathens being inspired, was no new idea, and that it was in accordance with the teachings of the Word of God. He also showed the word had many shades of meaning as used in the Scriptures. Not having taken notes we cannot exactly give the words.

We may remark that the whole discussion was in the most christian spirit, not the slightest appearance of ill feeling being manifested. The proceedings were then closed by prayer, and the benediction by the Rev. Mr. McDonnell.

For the short time the Association has been in operation, the meetings have been most entertaining and instructive. The essays, on the whole, showing that we have talent and industry enough among our young men to compare favorably with those of any other town in the province. There is also a movement on foot to obtain the services of an evangelist to labor in connection with the Association, in order, under the blessing of God, to create a warmer spirit in the great work of spreading and cultivating the Truth as it is in Jesus. We may be able next week to report progress. In the meantime, the Young Men's Christian Association will continue their regular meetings, and endeavor to extend their usefulness.

MASONIC.

In reference to the attention to the guests of the Masonic Fraternity who attended the lodge of instruction last week, we willingly copy from the British Canadian, Port Hope:—

"Arrangements had been made by the Peterboro Lodges that all the brethren attending should be entertained at Cane's Hotel at half the usual price, and we are pleased to say that everything, unremitting attention and watchfulness could suggest, was done by the proprietors of the well kept house. Notwithstanding the large number they had to provide for, Messrs. Turver & Jewett proved themselves equal to any emergency, and as every train brought additions to their house it must have been a rather difficult thing for them to provide all with necessary accommodations. All with whom we come in contact expressed themselves highly pleased with the quarters.—For ourself we were disposed of to our satisfaction."

Portugal, which, like Spain, still tolerates Slavery in its colonies, has also taken a step forward toward emancipation. On motion of Mr. Calcutt, seconded by Mr. Burnham, the Treasurer was instructed to pay to the order of the Treasurer of the Protestant Home, Peterboro, the sum of $20.

The Council adjourned till the first Monday in May, at 1 o'clock, p. m.

UNION SCHOOL BOARD.

There was no meeting of the Board on Tuesday evening—no quorum.

The members present were Messrs. Stevenson, Coulter, Helm, Lundy, Dumble and Toole.

Absent—Messrs. Clinton, Gilmour, Dunlop, Rogers, Cameron and Dr. Burnham.

The average attendance of the School during the month of March was 461. Some of the rooms we learn are so crowded that there are not desks enough for all in attendance. The Primary Department is also very full and the room not at all commodious. There is an absolute necessity for more school accommodation for the Town, and the sooner the Board can provide it the better.

SPAIN.—The affairs of Spain are still in an unsettled state; despatches sometimes stating that the Duke of Montpensier, son of the late Louis Phillipe, is to be King instead of Isabella; and again it is stated that the members of the Cortes favour Ex-king Fernando, of Portugal, for the throne. Of course there is nothing definite yet, but the fact that there are likely to be two claimants may lead to results not yet thought of. It will require wisdom and a great deal of forbearance to prevent the shedding of blood in settling Spanish affairs.

In Montreal, the sum of $10,650 were subscribed toward the endowment of Queen's College, Kingston. About $60,000 must already be subscribed.

We have not heard how much has been obtained for Victoria College; there are no fears, however, but that the Wesleyan body will get funds enough for their College.

At a meeting of the Board of Trade, Toronto, a motion was made to petition the Government to repeal the Bankrupt Act, or to suspend its operations for five years. A committee was appointed to consider the matter and report. The number of insolvents of late seems to affect the minds of Toronto merchants.

SIR,—Will you be kind enough to permit me to enquire through your columns what the Clerk and Councillors of North Monaghan are doing, as they do not give to the ratepayers the Detailed Statement of their affairs. It is well known that the Auditors' Report has been given in a long time, and no doubt, the ratepayers with myself are anxious to know about the different statements in reference to the way the business of the Municipality has been conducted. By giving the above publicity you will much oblige.

Homer and Scripture.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

[illegible] Editor [illegible] Scripture [illegible] from [illegible] comparison all [illegible] from [illegible] authors. Besides gratifying [illegible] curiosity and [illegible] taste, it [illegible] us to [illegible] with more [illegible] and to assign to every writer his just share of original genius. My object in writing this is to draw the attention of the Y. M. C. A. to the subject of the above—[illegible] between the manners of Homer's characters and those described by the Sacred Historians, and also to a variety of parallel passages containing moral sentiments, with which Duporse has filled his Chronologia Homerica:—

Except Hesiod, the only author that has come down to our time, from whom Homer could have borrowed, are the most ancient writers of the Old Testament. As he is supposed by the best chronologers to have flourished above one hundred years after Solomon, and to have survived Ahab above fifty years, he may have had access to the Sacred Historians, as far down as the 1st book of Kings, and may have received some account of the reign of Ahab and the life of Elijah. He may, at least, have obtained some account of those events and of the Sacred Writings, in conversation with those Phœnician merchants and mariners, with whom he appears in his Odyssey to have been so well acquainted, and is supposed to have made such distant voyages. We cannot deny that this is possible; whether it is probable, let every one judge for himself. It would certainly require strong marks of resemblance to persuade me that he availed himself of these opportunities, if indeed he possessed them. Thus the condolence of Achilles with Priam, on the death of Hector, is very similar to the consolation which David administered to himself on the death of his child "Now, he is dead," said David, "wherefore should I fast? can I bring him back again? I shall go to him but he shall never return to me." (2 Samuel, xii. 23.) "Bear up," says Achilles, "and do not indulge perpetual grief, for you will gain nothing by grieving for your son; nor will you restore him to life before you have suffered some other calamity;" which is, perhaps, a milder expression, after the manner of the ancients, for "before you go to him" See also Sophocles, Electra 1- 186.

I shall now point out some striking coincidents. The first occurs in the First Book of Kings, and though this book did not probably exist in its present form, in the days of Homer, he may have seen the detached fragments of which it seems to have been composed, or learned the principal facts from Phœnician travellers. In the reign of Ahab (1 Kings, xxii. 8) Jehoshaphat said, "Is there not yet a prophet besides that we may enquire of him? And the king said unto him: there is yet one man, but I hate him; for he doth not prophesy good concerning me, but evil." In like manner (Il., i. 100) Agamemnon says to Chalcas:—"Prophet of ills, you never spoke anything agreeable to me, but always took delight in prophesying evil." On the same occasion, this uncourtly prophet, Micaiah, in his reply to Ahab, represents the Lord as saying, "Who shall persuade Ahab, that he may go up and fall at Ramoth Gilead? And there came forth a spirit and said, I will persuade him. And the Lord said unto him, wherewith? And he said, I will go forth and be a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets. And the Lord said, go forth and do so." It is to be observed that the Sacred Historian does not relate this as a fact, but as an allegory used by Micaiah. A similar allegory is employed by Homer (Il., ii. 5). "Jupiter determined to send a deceitful dream to Agamemnon, and thus addressed him: "Hence through pernicious dream go to the ships of the Greeks, and tell Agamemnon to arm for battle." Here the coincidence is the more extraordinary, because the idea is, perhaps, no where else to be met with, and because the two passages occur so near to each other in both authors, and both spirits are sent on the same errand.

Another extraordinary coincidence, except we suppose Homer to have seen the Book of Genesis, is to be found in the eleventh Iliad: where he says, expressly, that "Jupiter fixed the rainbow in the cloud, as a sign to mortal men." Agreeably to Moses (Gen., ix. 13) "I have set my rainbow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth." The Hebrew word is the same, that is applied to sun and moon in the first chapter, and is there interpreted by Robertson, "a token of the interposition of God," which agrees exactly with the Greek word selected by Homer.

In the twenty-fourth book of his Iliad, 527, Homer puts this allegory into the mouth of his hero:—"Two urns are placed on the floor of Jove, full of the gifts which he bestows; the one of good, the other of evil. He to whom he gives them mixed will sometimes meet with evil, sometimes with good; but he to whom he gives sorrow, will be always exposed to injuries. Dire calamity will persecute him while he remains upon the earth. He will pass through life honored neither by gods nor men." This has the appearance of an amplification of the eighth verse of the seventy-fifth Psalm:—"In the hand of the Lord there is a cup, and the wine is red. It is full of mixture, and he poureth out of the same; but the dregs thereof all the wicked of the earth shall wring them out and drink them."

If these correspondences had occurred between Homer and any Greek author of remoter age, we should hardly hesitate in pronouncing the quotations from the latter to be imitations. There are some others which I shall insert, though they may be more easily accounted for, by a natural coincidence in the sentiments and language of men writing on similar subjects. Job (vii. 9) says, "Inquire of the former age; for we are of yesterday and know nothing," and Homer, (Il., ii. 86) "Tell me, ye Muses, for ye know all things, but we have only heard a rumor and know nothing." Moses permits the man who had betrothed a wife, or built a new house to return home, lest he die in the battle, and another man take his wife and his house; and Homer laments as peculiarly hard, the fate of a man who had left a wife and an unfinished house in his own country. In the 50th Psalm the Lord is introduced, saying, "I will not reprove thee for thy sacrifices," that is for neglect of sacrifices; and Chalcas adopts the same sentiment and form of speech, (Il. i. 93) "Apollo does not reprove you for your prayers or sacrifices." Goliath challenges the Israelites in these words:—"Choose ye a man for you, and let him come down to me. If he be able to fight and to kill me, then will we be your servants, but if I prevail against him and kill him, then shall ye be our servants. Give me a man that we may fight together." So Hector says to the Greeks:—"Let any man that will fight with me, come hither, to be a champion against Hector;" and it was agreed that if Menelaus killed Paris, the Trojans should pay tribute to the Greeks for ever. But that relates rather to manners than style.

The uniformity that prevails in the customs of the East sometimes occasions a resemblance between the similitudes employed by Homer and in Scripture. Thus Homer has the following comparison:—"As destructive fire reges in the mountains, in the deep recesses of a thick wood." (Il., xv. 605.) The same simile occurs in the Psalm, (lxxxiii. 14) "As the fire burneth a wood, and the flame setteth the mountains on fire." Thus, too, the similes of the lion and the shepherds. (Il. xii 299—Isaiah xxxi. 4.) In more recent times, after the appearance of the Septuagint version of the Old Testament, to which the Romans and later Greeks might have access, either in whole or in parts, plainer allusions and direct imitations may be found. Thus, in Ovid, (Met., vii. 30) "Nulla meliora præsagia, deteriora expecto," looks like a translation of St. Paul's declaration:—"That which I do, I allow not; the good that I would, that I do not; but the evil which I would not, that I do;" and would be admitted as such did we not know that Ovid lived before St. Paul, and we also readily suspect the Apostle of imitating Ovid. In one place [illegible], indeed, he quotes Aratus, and in another place refers to Epimenides for a character of the Cretans. The phrase "to kick against the goads," also occurred in Æschylus, and was probably proverbial in Paul as in Fors hastra lubricis in the Greek Tragedian Pros kentra ekkrouei adapted to the iambic metre. Of the same kind is that passage in Cicero's oration for Ligarius, which contains two proverbial expressions of our Lord "He that is not against us is for us," and "he that is not with me is against me." Te (Cæsarem) victor conservatorem nobis (Ad particulam) omnes, admiratio futuri, nisi qui nobiscum cecidit, fuimus. The following quotation must be ranked with these, except we dare suppose that Judas Maccabeus read Homer, which is not very improbable. "Be not greedy of the spoil," said Judas, "inasmuch as there is a battle before us; but stand ye now against your enemies, and overcome them, and after this, ye may boldly take the spoil." (First Macc. iv. 17) This agrees exactly with the exortation of Nestor, (Il. vi. 62) "Let no man now be greedy of the spoil, but let us kill the enemy; and after this we shall despoil the dead at our leisure." Such deceitful appearances, as some of these, may abuse our confidence in other alleged imitations, which may have only been coincidences. I shall conclude with the words of the virtuous friend of Tigranes, whose father had capriciously condemned him to death, through jealousy, because he had engrossed the affections of his son: "I beseech you not to resent my death to your father, for he does not act from malice, but ignorance; and what men do in ignorance I consider done against their will." This [illegible] incidence of sentiment with our Lord's petition, "Father forgive them, for they know not what they do," deserves to be added to this enumeration, in honor of the benevolent Armenian, or of Xenophon, his amiable historian.

BAZAAR AT BOBCAYGEON.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR.—There are a good many circumstances over which I have no control and one of them took me to Bobcaygeon. I find they often take me there:—My Circumstance's name being Betsy. But that has nothing to do with what I intend say. Well, I was there on Wednesday last, the 17th; my Circumstance having specially invited me, and so formed myself in due course a distinguished and brilliant atom in a very numerous company assembled in the Bobcaygeon Town Hall, attached to Simpson's Hotel. The occasion was this—Bobcaygeon has no church, at least no English church, and Bobcaygeon has very laudably determined it will be churchless no longer. Great exertions are therefore being made to raise a Building Fund, and in aid of this Building Fund a Bazaar was held on the 17th & 18th. To this Bazaar I was taken by my Circumstance, and a very pretty Bazaar it was, the Hall having been neatly ornamented for the occasion, the stalls nicely disposed, the articles for sale prettily exhibited, and the young ladies who fluttered about the counters doing their spiriting in the most graceful and irresistible manner. I really don't know how it was, but what between the influence of the charming Circumstance who hung on my manly arm, and the almost equally charming Circumstances who pounced on me the moment I entered, I fairly lost my presence of mind, I became utterly bewildered and a prey to Circumstances of all ages and sizes. I was handed down from one Circumstance to another like a bag of candles and each Circumstance took what it liked. Ultimately I found myself at the door much exhausted, with an empty purse in one hand and my arms containing a miscellaneous assortment of articles conspicuous among which were two pair of children's socks, a woolen comforter, a paper knife, three neck ties, four book markers, an indescribable woolen garment with the use of which I am to this moment utterly unacquainted, and, name it not in Gath, a baby's frock My Circumstance tells me she left me for only a moment, to speak to her cousin Sam, [I hate that Sam, in my opinion he is a low vulgar fellow,] and when she reclaimed me she found me overwhelmed with confusion, and baby's clothing, that I had purchased when in a state of profound mental bewilderment. However, this is not exactly what I am writing about. So let me proceed: the Bazaar was altogether very successful, and in the two days a sum of $301 was realized, chiefly owing to the exertions of the Committee—Mrs. Boyd, Mrs Bradfield, Mrs. Hall, and Mrs. Read. The weather was simply abominable, or otherwise there

Frightful Catastrophe in Paris.

(From the London Star.)

The quarter of Belleville Paris was startled on Tuesday evening 16th ult., by a sudden earthquake. Shutters were seen flying to pieces, windows smashed, and a terrible explosion was heard. It appears that M. Veron Fontaine, manufacturer of chemical products, living in the Place de la Borbonne has invented a new powder for marine torpilles, which was for him the cause of the Legion of Honour. A barrel containing a chlorate of potassium, which is one of the component parts of the newly discovered powder, had been that morning deposited at the house in question, to be forwarded by last night's train to Toulon. One of the [illegible] to carry home a little portion of this chlorate of potassium, took a small pipe to get all the stuff, and let in two particles of it fall on the ground, and by accidentally treading on it set fire not to the fatal particles alone, but to the whole barrel. The explosion was frightful. The branch office of the neighboring Belleville Lottery, the first floor of which was occupied by the [illegible] were thrown on their [illegible] and in the street in Sorbonne alone 5,000 panes were shivered to powder. The first and second floors of M. Fontaine's house were torn away, and each and every partition of those floors were precipitated into the flames. The staircase ceased also, and the falling stench prevented all access to the incandescent volcano. In a wonderfully short time a detachment of the fire brigade headed by the trumpeters, arrived at their pas de course, and in one half hour the fire was extinguished. But what a scene! Trunks of human bodies, arms and legs, and fragments of smoking flesh are found 200 yards distant. A washerwoman was literally reduced to powder; the concierge was flattened against the wall. A tavern-keeper and his wife were crushed between two brick partitions. M. Fontaine's son is missing; but in a room on the third floor of an opposite house have been found shreds of flesh and portions of the vertebræ of a human body which are supposed to be the remains of the unfortunate victim. The workmen who took the small portion of chlorate from the barrel was blown to atoms. One man appears to have been guillotined, his head having been blown off to a tremendous distance. Of his clothes there remains the fragments of a knitted shirt, on which are [illegible] Seven bodies have as yet only been discovered. Two so utterly mutilated that they cannot be recognised, are deposited at the Morgue. All the neighbouring [illegible] are crowded by the wounded. numbers are not yet ascertained. I happened last night at 11 o'clock to be in the Faubourg St. Germain, when a gentleman arrived somewhat late, and in a most excited state, which he explained by relating it was that he himself was within a few yards of the site of the explosion, and had just been [illegible] when the explosion took place. His impression was so vivid that it was impossible to induce him to speak on any other subject. The details of the fire are contained in the evening papers.

The Scotch School Bill.

The Daily News (Feb. 26) approves the Duke of Argyll's Bill. The obligation of the State to provide for the education of the people by means of compulsory rates has not been established and acted upon in Scotland for [illegible] three centuries. What is needful now is that this system shall be applied to the present distribution and needs ties of the population. This work of local discrimination cannot be permanent, once for all, by any general statute. It cannot be discharged from London. It must be performed by a authority which will be a [illegible] of a national and of a representative character. For this purpose a Central Board of Education is to be created, which is to consist of two members representing the counties and the landed proprietors, two members representing the Scotch burghs, two members representing the universities and the higher education of Scotland, a representative of the schoolmasters, and two members, including a paid chairman, nominated by the Crown. This Central Board is to decide on the number of schools which may be required in particular parishes and burghs, and to enforce the erection and maintenance of new schools where the supply is insufficient. It is also empowered to see that the school buildings are ample, and that the teaching is efficient. With a view to the latter end it may dismiss masters on sufficient proof of moral or intellectual unfitness, and may assign a retiring allowance to teachers disabled by age or physical infirmities. The schools are to be managed by committees nominated by the town councils in burghs, and elected by the ratepayers in rural parishes. The Central Board will not interfere with the religious teaching which these committees may adopt in the several schools but a conscience clause is to be strictly enforced. The inspectors, who will be appointed by the Privy Council, need not belong to any particular religious denomination.

Military Establishments in the Colonies.

A paper has just been issued showing the amounts included in the army estimates for military purposes in the colonies, and the probable repayment by the several colonies on the same account. The grand total cost will be no less than £2,698,886, for the maintenance of 34,798 troops, while the repayment to the British Exchequer will amount to only £1,520,000. Western Africa, of course, contributes nothing, although it costs over £80,000 a year, but the nature of the occupation of the settlements there sufficiently explain the fact. New Zeland, Bermuda, Canada, Newfoundland, Nova Scotia and the West Indies are, however, in the same category. The military occupation of Canada alone will impose upon the mother country a tax amounting to £204,407.—Bermuda increasing that amount by £185, 754, Nova Scotia by £186,343, New Zealand by £30, 967, and the West Indies i.e., the Bahamas, Honduras, and Jamaica—by £146, 26. The occupation of Malta by 5,989 troops costs £338,144, but there will be a repayment of £6,200. Gibraltar, which was garrisoned by 1,381 men, is set down at £212,385, but being a purely military possession, it, of course, repays nothing.—In the Windward and Leeward Islands there is a force of 1,490 men maintained at an expenditure of £119,617, but there is to be a trifling repayment amounting to some £1,000. The Australian Colonies, flourishing as they are said to be, cost more than double their contribution to the Exchequer, the total charge being £92,504, and the total repayment £44,000. The Cape of Good Hope costs nearly a quarter of a million for military service, and reimburses the Exchequer to the amount of only £10,000 a year, but it is intimated that a further demand will be made upon the colony if the present force be maintained. The only profitable occupation, so far as regards the charges for military service, is that of Ceylon, which, according to this document, actually repays more than it requires, the estimate for last being £156,701, and the repayment £160,000. We simply give this item as we find it, without suggesting any explanation.

The total vote in Great Britain at the last election was 1,378,534, divided between the two parties as follows: Liberal, 755,371; Conservative 623,163. The aggregate population is about 28,000,000. The average is, therefore, less than one voter to every twenty one inhabitants. In the United States, [illegible] number of inhabitants about as one to six and three-fourths. The Liberals, therefore, have something to do yet in the way of reform.

Two respectable but wild young girls in New Orleans put on their brothers' clothes the other day and started to call on a neighbor. An officer met them, discovered their disguise at once, and there was a ludicrous crying scene in the street. The rules were rigid, however, and they were carried to the nearest lock-up, where they remained until released by their father.

RUMOURS FLOB QUENED.

It is said that very great discontent has been excited among the high officials of the Roman Church in Canada on the passing of the Education Act. They first had hoped that the opposition would not have accepted it, and it is reported that instructions had been given to a sufficient number of conservatives to vote with the opposition, and thus secure the rejection of the law. Seeing that the liberal members would not sacrifice their principles for the mere purpose of embarrassing the government, great hopes were placed in Mr. Cauchon, who had privately assured many of his acquaintances that he would break down the ministry upon that question. Mr. Chapleau and others were to follow suit. But friends of the Federal ministers, and ex-Federal minister, and Privy Councillors, gently hinted in Mr. Cauchon's ears, that if he caused any embarrassment to the Local Ministry upon such a subject, his post of speaker of the Senate would not be worth much. Mr. Cauchon backed out, to the bitter disappointment of many representatives, who have received verbal notices from high personages that they must not calculate upon a re-election. Mr. Cauchon declares his wishes to withdraw from political life.

Such are the rumours current in the lobbies of our Provincial Parliaments, and in the [illegible] patronised by M. P. P.'s and M. C.'s.

What seems sure, however, is that Monseigneur Laflèche has telegraphed to members belonging to his Diocese, that he was totally opposed to the Education Bill.

That much dissatisfaction prevails among the clerical authorities is certain, and what clearly proves it is that the Courrier du Canada, an ultramontane paper, which is the reputed organ of the Archbishop's palace, and which has from the beginning zealously supported the Local Ministry, has published very severe articles against the law, and particularly against Hon. Mr. Langevin for having given it his support.

A sort of commission composed of priests has been lately sent to the United States, to investigate the present position and future prospects of Catholics there. People who think they are in the confidence of important individuals, pretend the reports the deputation sends are of a very encouraging nature.—Witness.

Treasure-Seeking in Sewers.

The New York Times of Thursday tells the following curious story:—"Yesterday morning, in the dim light of opening day, a singularly habited individual, jumped in rubber boots with high leggings, rubber overcoat, and cap, besmeared with mud, and carrying a capacious and well-filled carpet-bag, was observed issuing from the ferry-house, Hoboken. His appearance attracted the attention of Officer Burke, who, well knowing the ways of political carpet-bagging had mostly passed away, accosted the stranger, took him in charge as a suspicious character, and had him lodged in prison. In the cell of the prisoner remained some hours, until the arrival of Justice Bogg, before whom he was arraigned. The bag was opened, and the contents spread out on the floor to be examined by the police court officials. What a medley of articles met their gaze! There were old watches and silver spoons, knives, jewelry and bottles of liquor, a considerable quantity of old pennies, some of ancient date, 10 cent pieces, silver pencil cases and finger rings, (one of which is supposed to be a valuable diamond ring), together with various other articles. He was asked by the recorder to explain how these articles had got into his possession, and his explanation in a singular one, to say the least of it. He appeared to be an intelligent and well educated man, and told a story which left no doubt in the mind of the Judge as to its truthfulness. He gave his name as John W. Crane, a "down-easter" by birth and residence. He had frequently heard fabulous accounts of the Empire city, and having seen a year ago a paragraph in a Boston paper describing the adventures of a woman and boy in New York sewers, he determined to seek for the treasures supposed to be contained in the underground city. He left the Hub and started for New York, where he arrived in due time. With the spirit of adventure and shrewdness of a Yankee he provided himself with a rubber outfit, a ground map showing all the sewers in the city, a compass, candles and a six shooter to protect himself against rats or anything else that might impede progress. After donning his waterproof apparel he entered a sewer in Houston street, on Tuesday last, near the North river. He 'picked' his way through all day, and never stopped until yesterday morning, when, having his bag filled, he emerged about 4 a. m. from a sewer near the Hoboken Ferry. His appearance being very uninviting, he considered it best to go to Hoboken for the purpose of cleaning himself preparatory to his appearance among his friends in New York. Everything indicating his story to be true, the prisoner was discharged from custody."

Another New York paper says the man had about $150 worth of stuff in his bag.

EASTER SUNDAY IN TORONTO.

The Leader, in describing the services in the various Churches in Toronto, on Easter Sunday, gives the following description of the Church of the Holy Trinity:—

"This church, as was expected it would be, was the great cynosure of attraction. The services, it more numerous, differed in little else from those usually performed than that they were choral throughout, and perhaps a more ornate and joyful—correspond ing to the celebration of the day. We have already described at length the reredos about to be erected in the sanctuary behind the altar. It was anticipated that the time was too short to allow of its being completely finished, and so it has turned out. The screen, however, was withdrawn, and although the seven compartments of the reredos have yet to be filled in, the altar now stood out "magnificent" in all its glory and beauty. The purple cloth which covered the Holy Table during the past forty days was now changed, giving place to a gorgeous covering of crimson and gold. The frontal was of white lace, with the sacred Monogram I. H. S. and the cross in embroidery of gold. Immediately behind was the Reserved Table, bearing, in letters of gold, the words "Holy, Holy," and upon and above it a cross of the rarest greenhouse flowers—the first fruits of spring—and on each side vases containing the same. Covering the [illegible] was another cross, in which the Japonica, the lily, the daisy and early violets were conspicuous—all natural flowers, and standing upon a pedestal of the sweetest moss. This was the only extraordinary decoration, and, as will be seen, they were all of the fruits of the earth. The pulpit had a white frontal fringed with yellow gold, with a cross of flowers in the centre, and the fald-stool, and reading desks in the choir were similarly decorated. The early celebration of the Communion took place at 8 a. m., the celebrant being the Rev. W. S. Davies, assisted by Rev. W. L. Darling, and over 100 members of the congregation communicated. The Sanctus, Creed, and Gloria in excelsis, were from Marpeck. Masine were said at 11 o'clock. The choir surpliced—48 men and boys—and the clergy surpliced, hood and stole formed in the vestry and marched in procession to the western door of the church, thence up the centre aisle, chanting as a Processional the Easter Hymn, (Monk). The Rev. T. Cole, garrison chaplain, sang the services; the anthem was "The Exodus. 'Allelulia,' (Barnby), and the communion service again from Marpeck. The sermon was preached by the Rev. Mr. Davies, who took his text from Matt. xxviii. 6—"Christ is risen."

To which we add the following found in the editorial items of the same paper.—"I have been in convents and Roman Catholic churches in Lower Canada," said a worshipper at one of our city churches yesterday, as he was leaving it, "but I have never seen anything worse than I have witnessed to-day." The reader will easily recognise the church attended by the person who made this remark. He was, probably, a little extravagant in his language."

Should always have a bottle of Jacobs' Liquid ready.

THE THESPIANS.

The Thespians gave their third entertainment at Tenley, 26th ult., to a slim audience. The first piece, with the somewhat sensational title of "The Seven Clerks, or the Three Thieves and the Denouncer," was well played. Claude Duval, though in a part evidently not suited to his abilities, was excellent; and the other performers supported him ably. Of the Three Thieves, two of them looked their parts, though why the gentlemen who played in knickerbockers, stockings and gold buckled shoes, should suppose that was the proper costume for a penniless and starving thief, we are at a loss to conceive. Simon Siggel was spirited, but rather too "siggerly." The females were well dressed and, allowing for the difficulties in their parts being played by males, were admirable.

In the afterpiece "Lend me Five Shillings," Mr. Golightly and Sam were the only two deserving of commendation. Captain Hobbs was not well up in his part, and all the players in the afterpiece, with the exception of Golightly and Sam, were tame and careless in their entrances and exits. Captain Spruce was elegantly dressed in an undress uniform coat, soldier's trousers, &c., and wore a dress sword; this, as the incidents of the play occurr at a ball, was certainly a queer dress for the occasion.

The entertainment was for the benefit of Mr. Rockett and the orchestra, and we regret that, owing no doubt to the very disagreeable weather, there was so small an audience.

The Thespians will appear in about two weeks again, when they expect a bumper house.—Crier.

A Joke which was No Joke.

The Montpelier, Vt., Journal says that not a thousand miles from White River Junction, a serio comic affair occurred, which made that parties to the joke laugh out of the other side of their mouths. A correspondent, who describes the affair, says:

They have got up the funniest snarl, across the river, you ever heard of.—At a party last week, at one——'s, after exhausting the ordinary games, and wanting something new, mock marriages were proposed. Accordingly names were drawn by lots, and four couples stood up to be married. The ceremony was performed, and they duly pronounced "man and wife, by the laws of the State, and before three witnesses." After ward, they ascertained that the man officiating was a Justice of the Peace, and the parties were legally married! They are in the greatest alarm about it, that ever was. One of them, Prof.——, of Thetford Seminary, expects a lady from below, in about a fortnight, to marry him; and nearly every one involved is expecting to be married right away—one other gentleman to a lady below—and they feel like death. They have searched all the law books and counselled authorities far and near, and everything only proves the knot still tighter. The Justice has been fined $50 for each couple. He says he is from another county, and cannot do business here, and supposed the marriage not to be legal. It is certainly a funny scrape and made still funnier by the fact that all the parties belong to the "upper ten." The best opinion is that they are legally married, and can only be divorced by the Legislature.

IAMATOLOGIA!

Don't Know What to Do. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and certify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers.

Twenty years experience in using Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers have proved them to be the most effectual remedy for coughs, and irritation of the throat, caused by cold, or unusual exertion of the vocal organs; public speakers and singers will find them most beneficial. DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Conditino Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and glossy appearance.

THE SWELLS.

(A parody on Edgar Allen Poe's Bells.)

Hear that noisy lot of swells—
Silly swells!
What a deal of trashy talk their subjects foretells!
How they chatter-chatter, chatter,
All the last century night!
Making such a fearful clatter,
As if somebody were the matter,
And God grin them hot to-night,
Killing time, time, time,
(Never thinking it a crime)
With the foolish conversation, to the little hanging bells,
Swells, swells swells—
While a-walking and a-talking with the belles.

Hear these dissipated swells—
Drunken swells!
What a tale to temperance that tipsy tumble tells!
In the startled air of night
Ringing bells with great delight,
And singing songs with all their might,
Although the words they do not quite Distinctly utter.
Reeling, reeling, reeling,
Standing, sitting, kneeling,
On their homeward journey strolling
With a resolute endeavor
Now, now to sit or never,
Side by side with their companions in the gutter
In the gutter—
Arm in arm with their companions in the gutter.

Hear these horrid dandy swells—
Scented swells!
What a world of vapid talk their company compels!
How disgusting their flirtation,
And affected adoration
Of ev'ry exclamation
Of the belles!
Oh! maiden young and single!
Lest your ears with pain should tingle,
Never listen to the jingle
Of the swells—
Of the swells, swells, swells, swells,
Swells, swells, swells,
To the jingling and the dingling of the swells.

What A Little Boy Thought About Things.

BY JOHN PAUL.

I am a little boy about so many years old; I don't know whether I am a good little boy, but I'm afraid not, for I sometimes do wicked things, and once I cut sister's kitten's tail off with the chopping knife, and told her a dog came along and bit it off, and swallowed it down before kitty could say Jack Robinson, and sister said she was sorry, and it must have been a very naughty dog; and mother did not believe me, and said she was afraid I had told a lie, and I'm afraid I had. So then she asked me if I knew where Isip's went to, and I said yes—that they went to New York and wrote for the newspapers: she said no—but a lake of fire and brimstone; and she asked me if I would like to go there, and I said no, for I didn't think there would be much skating or sliding on that lake, and the boys couldn't snowball either on shore, and she said it was more that that, just as though that wasn't bad enough, for I don't think they can play base ball nuther. Then she asked me if I would like to be an angel and have a harp, and I said no, I'd rather be a stage driver and have a big drum. for I couldn't play on t'other thing. So I shouldn't like to be an angel, for their wings must be in the way when they go swimming, and play tag and leap frog, and besides it must be hard to fly when one is not accustomed to it. But it would be jolly to be a stage-driver and have a great long whip and touch up the leaders, and say "g'long there, what are ye doin' on?" I should like that much better'n flyin'; and then mother said there was a dreadful stage of sin, and Bob hollered and said that "he guessed I was on it;" and then she whipped us and sent us to bed without any supper, but I didn't care for that, for they hadn't nothin' but bread and butter and tea, and Bob and I got up and he lifted me in at the pantry window, and we got a mince pie and a whole handful of doughnuts, and they thought it was the cook that stole'em, and sent her away the next day, and Bob said he was glad of it, for she didn't make good pies, and the doughnuts wasn't fried enough, and sometimes I do swear, for I said by golly the other day, and sister heard me and she told mother, and mother said I was a bad boy and would bring her grey hairs to the grave, and she whipped me, but I don't think it did her grey hairs any good, and it hurt me, and when I got up stairs I said goll darn it; but I said it so she didn't hear me, and when she asked me if I did not think I was very wicked, I said I was afraid I was, and was very sorry for it, and wouldn't do so any more, and then she said I was a good little boy, and told me about George Washington, who cut down the apple tree, and was caught at it and said he did it with his little hatchet, just as though I hadn't heard all about it before, and didn't always think he was a big stupid for cutting wood when they had a hired man about the house, and dullin' his little hatchet, and besides it would have been a great deal jollier to let the apple tree be, so as he could have stole apples off in the fall. I don't care if he was the father of his country, he wasn't smart, and I bet you the boys in our school would cheat him out of his eye teeth swapping jack-knives, and I could lick him and hardly try; and I don't think he was very healthy, either, for I never see a good boy that wasn't always sick and had the mumps and measles and the scarlet fever, and wasn't a coughing all the while, and hadn't to take castor oil, and could not eat cherries, and didn't have to have his head patted till his hair was rubbed off by everybody that came to his mother's, and he asked how old he was, and who died to save sinners, and what he'd been studying at school, and how far he'd got, and lots of other conundrums, and have to say his catechism; no, I wouldn't like to be a good little boy; I just as lief be an angel, and be done with it; I don't think I ever shall be a good little boy, and other people don't think so, too, for I wasn't never called a good little boy but once, and that was when my uncle John asked me where I stood in my class, and I told him it was next to the head, and he said that was right and gave me a quarter, and when he asked me how many boys there were in the class, and I said, there were only two, myself and a little girl, and then he wanted me to give him back his quarter, and I wouldn't, and he ran after me and stumbled over a chair, and he broke his cane and hurt himself, and he's been lame ever since, and I'm glad of it, for he isn't my father, and hasn't got any right to lick me, for I get enough of that at home, and the quarter wasn't a good one either. I don't like uncle John, and I guess he knows it, for he says I'm not like any of the family, and he says he expects I'll go to sea and be a pirate instead of a respectable member of society, and I should not wonder, for I'd rather be a pirate than a soap boiler like him. I don't care if he is rich, it's a nasty business; and I shan't have to be a pirate either, for one can make lots of money without it, and they are always talking to me about being rich and respectable, and going to Congress and being President, and all that sort of thing, but I doesn't want to be President, there is Lincoln, he was president, and I guess he's sorry for it now; and there's Andy Johnston, I guess he don't like it much either; and a fellow don't have to be respectable to be a Congressman, for there's John Macjoidy, and he has got nice curley hair and nice clothes, and he don't do any work either. Oh! I know how things are done; but there's Bob calling, and we're goin' birds nesting' for I know where there's a yaller bird's-nest chock full of eggs.—Mother says it's cruel, and the birds don't like it; but I shouldn't like to have my eggs stole if I was a bird; and I don't think I should. But I ain't a bird you know, and that makes a difference, and if you want to print this you can, for next to bein' a stage-driver and a pirate, I'd like to be an editor, for your fellers don't have to tell the truth, and you can go to circuses without paying.'

STATISTICS OF ILLEGITIMACY.

The number of children born in any country out of wedlock is not exactly known. A comparison, however, can be made of the number of children in different countries who are registered in such a manner as to disclose their illegitimacy. Statistical investigation has shown that there are many causes which may account for the differences that exist in the proportion of children born out of wedlock in various foreign countries, among which may be mentioned that of the legitimation of children born before marriage. England stands almost alone among the civilized nations of Europe in refusing legitimation, even at the wish of the parents, to offspring born out of wedlock. In England the percentage of illegitimate births to total births has declined from 6.7 to 5.9 in 1867, while the number of persons married to every 100 of the population has increased from 1.586 in 1847 to 1.672 in 1867. In Scotland, where many of the children registered as illegitimate are legitimated by the subsequent marriage of their mothers, the percentage of children born out of wedlock to total births was 9.5 in 1856 and 10.1 in 1866. In Spain the proportional number of illegitimate births was 5.6 in 1859, and 5.5 in 1864; but these results, being derived from the baptisms of the children, are very erroneous. The percentage for Italy in the year 1865, including foundlings, most of which are illegitimate, was 5.1; the number of illegitimate births in Italy, however, appears incredibly small, being only 10,517 out of a total number of births of 865,387, affording a ratio of a little more than ½ per cent, a result manifestly erroneous. In Holland illegitimacy is very low, and the rate in 1859, which was 4.1 per cent, was the same (4.1) in 1864. In Belgium the percentage has decreased from 7.4 in 1859 to 7.0 in 1865. The returns for France, although they show a higher proportion than Belgium, indicate a slight improvement from 7.8 per cent. in 1858 to 7.5 per cent. in 1864. The rates for France are comparatively low, but the social habits of the French may perhaps account for the small proportion of illegitimacy. In Prussia there is little variation in the proportion between the year 1858 (8.4 per cent.) and that of the year 1864 (8.1 per cent.). In Norway the proportion per cent. of illegitimate to the total number of births was 8.6 in 1850, and 8.4 1860. In Sweden the percentages are rather higher—viz., 9.4 in 1855 and 9.5 in 1864. In Austria the rate of illegitimacy was 9.0 per cent. in 1851, and 10.9 per cent. in 1864, showing a marked increase of bastardy. In Wurtemburg the percentages were 16.1 in 1857, and 16.4 in 1864; and in Bavaria the high proportion was reached of 22.6 in 1857 and 22.2 in 1862.

The Queen and her Husband.

The Queen's affection for her mother was most tender and devoted, and seemed to be only deepened by her own maternity. I have been told by a friend who had her information from a lady of the court, that so utterly overwhelmed was the Queen by the death of this good mother, that there were serious fears for her reason. Her grief was not violent, but she seemed stunned and Bewildered; could not sleep or weep, and for days refused food. It was her noble and patient husband who at last aroused her from this sad, listless state, and persuaded her to eat, to take up again the burden of her mortal and royal life. The same friend told me that when Prince Albert died, the Queen, who still loved him with all the passionate worship of her girlhood, and with something still deeper and better—as the father of her children—bore up with wonderful fortitude to the end; received in solemn quietness his last word, and kiss, and look; and then, when all was over, rose, and with that beautiful consideration for others, which is the highest mark of English high breeding, said to the physicians of the Prince standing near, in sorrowful dejection: "Gentlemen, I know that human knowledge and skill could do to save my dear husband has been done, and I thank you for your faithful devotion." Then she bowed "right queenly," and walked calmly from the chamber of death to her own room, there to wrestle with her great anguish alone, to face the dreary blank of her widowed and desolate life. Among the many millions of her subjects, there was not at this hour, perhaps, a heart heavier with sorrow, more lost and desolate than hers. Yet, in her early years, before grief had invaded her royal state, and death had come to court, like some horrible maker, she was a merry monarch. She loved daring, plays jests, games and practical jokes, with now and then a hearty romp. She was espically fond of blindman's buff—and often, after some tiresome ceremony, formal reception, or congratulation, she would propose to her ladies to lock the doors, to keep out the wise people and fools, and have a good frolic at that old-fashioned English game.—Grace Greenwood.

Dancing Differences.

A writer in the Moravian says: what a strange thing this dancing is, after all, when you look at it from a philosophical, or if, you please, unsophisticated point of view. The other day, Insulanus asked a lady how it came to pass that the entrance upon the floor of a ball room made such a wonderful change in the usual manner and habits. She asked him what he meant, she did not understand. He asked her, suppose I introduce you to a friend of mine, a stranger, and he would not only take your hand, but put his arm around you, what would you do? What would she do? All your lady readers know what they would do! and what the father, husband, or brother of such a lady would do. But, but Insulanus, as soon as you enter the "hop" or ball, you permit a perfect stanger, who is introduced to you at the time, not only to take your hand but put his arm around your waist, and to sail around the room with you, in the giddy maze of the dance, and your father, brother, and husband think it all right! The lady admitted that she had not exactly looked upon it from that point of view, but gave Insulanus no other information than that things were allowable in the dance which were not so in ordinary life. How wonderful that delicate ladies can dance from 9 to 12 p. m., square dances, and round dances, and wind up with a sherry cobbler, and yet feel too weary to stand up during prayer in church.

Lay Attitude in Prayer.

Posture in prayer is a matter of account. Standing, kneeling and prostrate are all mentioned in the Bible. A modern invention added to those of ancient times is sitting in the pews. This we do by pretending to stand behind the spirit of the age to popularize the becoming and proficient.

It is a city habit, mostly. But country souls in their simplicity are apt to ape city manners. Hence you will find here or there in the country churches, where the old devout habits can not at all be broken in upon, the city style is now copied by a select few.

We have noticed elders and deacons and their families set thus irreverently and set this unbecoming example. It is disrespectful to the congregation and to God. It wears a lazy look. It is not crucifying the flesh. It is not worshiping God with the body and spirit which are His.

Prostrate may do in the closet, and sitting in the invalid's chair; but it is unbecoming in the congregation. Lying in bed to say prayers is as lazy and inexcusable as to sit in time of prayers during public worship. When the congregation kneels, then all devout persons present should kneel. When the posture is standing, then it is a mark of disrespect, if nothing worse, to sit still in the pew.

In prayer meetings and special acts of humiliation, kneeling is the custom in our Church. In ordinary public worship the standing posture is almost universal. There are a few of our congregations with which we have at times worshipped, where the theory of the custom is to kneel always in prayer and stand in singing.

This comes from surrounding influence. The theory is not put into practise. For, while most all rise up to sing, few kneel in time of prayer. Nearly all sit bolt upright in their pews. It is copied from surrounding seats.

A minister of our church in one of those places, while attending a meeting of the Western Synod was assigned to preach for the Baptists. He asked before service, 'What is your posture in prayer?'

'Standing,' was the reply of the Baptist deacon.

At the proper time the minister said 'Let us pray!' expecting the congregation to rise.

No one moving in the pews, he repeated, 'Let us pray!' Two or three men rose to their feet.

Looking the congregation in the face, and indicating his request with a gesture of uplifted hands, again the minister challenged them with 'Let us pray!'

That brought the congregation to their feet, and we trust, taught them a good lesson.

In a Boston congregation of many hundreds assembled, with which we once worshipped, a committe of six, with us and the minister, representing the people before the Lord in the requested attitude of prayer, and a smaller committee of four or five did the singing.

Let all things be done decently and in order. This requires all to join in the worship of the congregation, in united acts of devine service. When they sing, then sing. When they pray, then pray, in the attitude of the adopted custom.—Reformed Church Messenger.

HOW TO CATCH RATS.—For catching rats in a cheap and effective manner we recommend the following:—Cover a common barrel with stiff, stout paper, tying the edge around the barrel; place a board so that the rats may have easy access to the top; sprinkle cheesparings or other "feed" for the rats on the paper for several days, until they begin to believe that they have a right to their daily rations from this source; then place in the bottom of the barrel a piece of rock, about 6 inches or 7 inches high, filling with water until only enough of it projects above the water for one rat to lodge upon. Now replace the paper, first cutting a cross in the middle, and the first rat that comes on the barrel-top goes through into the water, and climbs on the rock. The paper comes back to the place, and the second rat follows the first. Then begins a fight for the possession of the dry place on the stone, the noise of which attracts the rest, who share the same fate.—Scientific Farmer.

AGE OF SHEEP.—The age of sheep may be known by examining the front teeth. They are eight in number, and appear during the first year, all of a small size. In the second year the two middle one fall out, and their place is supplied by two new teeth, which are easily distinguished, being of a larger size. In the third year, two other small teeth, one from each side, drop out, and are replaced by two large ones, so that there are now four large teeth in the middle, and two pointed ones on each side. In the fourth year, the large teeth are six in number, and only two small ones remain, one at each end of the range. In the fifth year, the remaining small teeth are lost, and the whole front teeth are large. In the sixth year, the whole begin to be worn, and in the seventh, sometimes sooner some fall out and are broken.—Mass. Ploughman.

To remove warts and corns, take a small piece of raw beef; steep it all night in vinegar, cut as much from it as will cover the wart, tie it on, or if the excrescence is on the forehead, fasten it on with strips of sticking plaster. It may be removed in the day and put on every night. In two weeks the wart or corn will die and peel off, and no scar be left.

To keep the hands soft and white, they should be washed in warm water, using fine soap, and carefully dried with a moderately coarse towel. If engaged in any business that may hurt the color of the hand, or if they have been exposed to the sun, a little lemon juice will restore their whiteness, and lemon soap is proper to wash them with.

It has been found by experiment that dry, pulverized earth makes an excellent dressing for ulcers and purulent wounds.—It not only absorbs the bad odor arising from the matter discharged, but exercises a healing influence, causing a healthy granulation to take place and greatly diminishing the inflammation.

A vigorous circulation of the skin should be constantly maintained. If neglected, the blood which should circulate in the skin is gathered into the stomach, and disease is the consequence. Frequent bathing and the use of a coarse towel and gloves cannot be too highly recommended.

WASHING WOOLENS.—If washerwomen would be persuaded to use cold water with a little borax in it, for washing flannels, they would not only be better cleansed but there would be no shrinkage whatever.

Coal ashes, mixed with the droppings of the poultry yard make a compost nearly as valuable as guano.

The country young schoolmistress who put Bible down as a book, and thought the city young public school girl who knew almost every book only one whose title was unknown to her brother's. The only way to keep them from getting into a pasture is to turn them into another lane, and let them jump out. They are ready for use as soon as they will do to abuse. The heirs get any friends, and will live on huckle berry bush, with an occasional chance at Kanada thistle. They are a modern invention I don't think the Bible studies to them at all. The call for more money than any other domestic animals. You best tell their age by looking into their mouths, easy more than you could a Mexican cannon.—The never have no disease that a good club won't heal. I've known them to do good mules for six months, just to get a chance to kick somebody. I have seen edditated mules at a sarcus. They couldn't buck and bite tremenjus. Every man trying to ciddling to drive a mule, ought to be excluded by law from running for the Legislature. I heard tell of one who fell oph from the towpath, on the Erie kanawul, and sunk as soon as he touched water, but he kept an towing boat to the next station, breathing through his ears, which stuck out of the water 2 feet 8 inches. I didn't see this did, but an auctioneer told of it, and I never knew an auctioneer to tell an untruth unless it was absolutely convenient.

A few days ago a young school-mistress was taking down the names and ages of her scholars at the commencement of the term. She asked a little white-headed boy: "Bub, how old are you?" 'My name aint Bub, it's John.' "Well," said the schoolmistress, 'what is the rest of your name?' 'Why, that's all the name I've got—just John."—'Well, what's your father's name?' 'You needn't put pap's name down, he ain't comin' to school any; he's too big to come to school.' 'Well, how old are you?' 'I aint old at all. I'm young.'

At an Oakland, Ohio, hotel, recently, a strong smell of gas was discovered issuing from the room of a bridal party from the country. Admission being demanded to put out the gas, the rural swain replied that he blew it out, and then the darned thing smelt so bad that he put his stocking over it. Sure enough, there was the stocking drawn over the burner and tied down with a shoe string.

A good story is told of a German shoemaker in Utica, who having made a pair of boots for a gentleman of whose financial integrity he had considerable doubt, made the following reply to him when he called for the articles: "Der poots ish not quite done, but der heel ish made out.'

A CORRESPONDENT says that all beauties generally die old maids. They set such a price on themselves, that they don't find a purchaser until the market is closed. Out of a dozen beauties who have come out within the past eighteen years, eleven, he says still remain single.

AN ASS-TONISHING REPORT.—"I am like Balaam," said a dandy on his meeting a pretty girl in a narrow passage "stopped by an angel." "So am I," said she, for I am accosted by an ass."

"Say, ma," exclaimed a little minx of thirteen, "do you know what the pyrotechnical remedy is for a crying infant?"—"Goodness gracious me, no; I never heard of such a thing!" "Well ma, it's rocket."

A young editor being reproved by an old lady for kissing her daughter and requesting an "exchange," innocently replied that he had no idea of transcending the 'liberties of the press.'

'Good morning, Patrick! It's slippery this morning.' 'Slippery! an' be jabers, it's nothing else yer honer! upon my word, I slipped down three thimes without slipping up once.

A little boy, disputing with his sister on some subject, we do not remember what, exclaimed. "It is true, for ma says so; and if ma says so, it is so, if it aint so."

There are trees so tall in Missouri that it takes two men and a boy to look to the top of them. One looks till he gets tired, and another commences where he left off.

MAMMA'S KISSES.

A kiss when I awake in the morning,
A kiss when I go to bed,
A kiss when I burn my fingers,
A kiss when I bump my head.

A kiss when my bath is over,
A kiss when my bath begins;
My mamma is full of kisses,—
As full as nurse is of pins.

A kiss when I play with my rattle,
A kiss when I pull her hair;
She covered me over with kisses
The day I fell from the stair.

A kiss when I give her trouble,
A kiss when I give her joy;
There's nothing like mamma's kisses
To her own little baby-boy.

Selections.

William Ewart Gladstone.

A STUDY OF CHARACTER.

Let us now look upon Mr. Gladstone in the aspect in which he will probably be longest and best remembered, that of a renowned chief in British oratory. We will view him in the scene of his great parliamentary triumphs. It is some memorable afternoon of some bygone session. The loungers about the vast portals of the Hall are waiting to obtain a sight of the celebrities. Mr. Gladstone drives up, perhaps, in an open carriage, and is probably greeted with more or less of an ovation. Mr. Gladstone does not mind an ovation. He has learned to understand, he 'the people's William,' the judicious use of a mob. But his way of entering the Hall is different to his way of entering the Chamber. He rarely walks up the floor to receive a greeting. You look to the front bench; he is not there: presently you look again, and there he is; he has crept into the House; silently, almost stealthily. He has the customary large box of papers by him. If he is going to make a speech, there is also a small flask of some unedaginous compound, which he will occasionally lift to his lips. Public speakers would, in their common interest, be glad to know what that small flask contains, and whether it is really any aid to that beautiful and noble voice. It was a genuine pleasure—more so, once, perhaps than it is now—to ask Mr. Gladstone a question. His voice was so agreeable; his manner so mild and gentlemanly; and he took such infinite pains to go fully into matters for you; leaning on his box pointing his finger, and imparting a sermonic flavour of 'thirdly and lastly,' to the driest observations.

It has been well said of Mr. Gladstone that he clothes material facts with moral considerations and moral considerations with material facts. This contains the secret of the wonderful charm which belongs to that last great series of his Budget speeches. The figures of arithmetic are transformed into figures of rhetoric. That dry desert of statistics is changed into a garden of roses. To Mr. Gladstone's mind all those figures are instinct with the most intense meaning. They are outward and visible signs of inward and invisible things. They proclaim the beats of the nation's pulse, and tell both of its functional and organic condition. Probably, the greatest of these Budget speeches was the great speech of the year 1860. There were a series of stage accessories belonging to this speech, which have rarely been paralleled. Mr. Gladstone had had an attack of bronchitis, which had already caused a postponement of the Budget. This Friday night, if he were not sufficiently recovered, the work would devolve on Sir Cornewall Lewis. It was known that he was still very unwell. On Tuesday he had been some rumour of congestion of the lungs. The House was very crowded—for an hour before the commencement of the business of the night. Even Jews, to secure their places, had joined in the prayers of Christians. To the last moment it seemed doubtful who her the great fiscal Minister would show. And when at last he came, and had commenced his marvellous speech, and men saw his face pale and worn, and observed him leaning, as if fatigued against the table, it was doubtful whether his voice would really last to the end. His physician was seated under the gallery, watch in hand, observing this wonderful physical effort. Through the brass lattice of the ladies' gallery, his wife was looking and listening, still more riveted, still more anxious. Gladstone spoke for four hours. Not for a moment did the musical river of speech ever falter. There was the same eager play of feature, dramatic action, and melodious utterance. The speech was concluded by a peroration in the loftiest vein of eloquence, which neither the elder nor the younger Pitt could have excelled. It was less a speech than an epic. The effect on the House was extraordinary, and the same thrill of delight and admiration ran throughout the country. Only there were one or two grumblers who suggested that this impressive bronchitis was simply an ingenious ruse.

But Mr. Gladstone quietly answering a question, with his energies held in leash, or Mr. Gladstone with his power of 'unanimous exposition, setting forth the principles of the Budget, are both very different to Mr. Gladstone in the full sweep of impassioned oratory. Then we have what Mr. Bernal Osborne calls 'the Red Indian.' 'We see before us the splendid savage bounding on to the floor of the house—the swift of foot, the eagle eye, the voice that rings like the sound of victory, the manly presence that reminds us of a chief-tain.' Sometimes, directly he rises, he raises his war-whoop and brandishes his tomahawk, and the work of scalping and excoriation begins. One of his famous speeches, in answer to Mr. Disraeli, has been thus described. 'In the memory of the present generation there has no speech been delivered in the House of commons in which there was such a rushing eloquence, such a rage of words. Its "go" was incomparable. There was not even time to cheer. It seemed as if the Chancellor of the Exchequer had only five minutes to spare, and is to that space had to crowd the entire Dictionary. He seemed to be speaking against time, and the pace reminded one of nothing so much as the last half-mile of the Derby. He kept this up for a good hour. He swept on as a hurricane, the House as we tore on rising to catch every word.—There was exultation in his voice; there was an intensity of hate in his speech of which the printed report conveys but a poor idea. He took the House by storm and retained it for the remainder of the evening. It was a physical rather than an intellectual impression which he had created. It would be difficult to state what was the gist of Mr. Gladstone's speech. It was a sensation rather than a demonstration which he had made; but the sensation was tremendous.' And this brings us to that sensitiveness, irritability, and bad temper, which, after all, stamp Mr. Gladstone as being only an imperfect Christian. Mr. Horsman, on a memorable occasion, crossed swords with him. He told Mr. Gladstone that he always began his reply by knocking a man down, and that he knocked everybody down who attempted to dispute with him. Many other very uncomfortable things did Mr. Horsman say. The 'Saturday Review,' which always treats Mr. Gladstone as a spoilt child, with alternate caresses and reproaches, thus described the effect: 'As each keen and polished sarcasm told upon the House, there gathered over his countenance that expression of condensed, unutterable passion, which those who have watched him know so well. His lip curled savagely; his eyes flashed; his attitude became more rigid; his fingers twitched; the paleness of his face grew ghastlier and ghastlier, leaving not a vestige of colour on his cheek except the dark spot on the centre—the shadow thrown by the high cheek-bone as the light fell on it from above.' Something of the same sort happened when Mr. Gladstone, on a memorable evening, again and again interrupted Mr. Disraeli, and laid himself open to a sharp rebuke, in which the sense of the House concurred. On one occasion he used an expression towards Mr. Disraeli, concerning which he afterwards said, 'I think the expression was a very improper one, and I sincerely regret that I have used it.' To such mistakes does Mr. Gladstone's peculiar temperament render him liable. It is pleasant after such things to find him, at the Mansion House, calling Mr. Disraeli his right honorable friend. But Mr. Gladstone is generally assailing some one. He is said to resemble the retired hangman, who felt obliged to execute a puppy once a week. Once he gave the House of Lords the severest scolding which that august body ever received.

Mr. Gladstone's 'verbiage' has been immensely discussed. A man said, some years ago, that he had been into the House of Commons seventeen times in the course of a day or two, and each time found Mr Gladstone speaking. He has never been able, as the Frenchman said, to avail himself of a great opportunity of holding his tongue. Mr. Kendall, recently member for Cornwall, happily said that Mr. Gladstone would not say that twice six was twelve, but he would say that twice six multiplied by three minus thirty plus six was twelve. A writer in the 'Quarterly Review' describes Mr. Gladstone answering a question, and contrasts him with Lord Palmerston. 'Supposing each Minister was asked what day the session would be over, the Viscount would reply, that it was the intention of her Majesty to close the session on the 18th of August. Mr. Gladstone would possibly premise, that, inasmuch as it was for her Majesty to decide upon the day which would be most acceptable to herself, it was scarcely compatible with parliamentary etiquette to ask her Ministers to anticipate such decision; but, presuming that he quite understood the purport of the right honourable gentleman's question, of which he was not entirely assured, the completion of the duties of the House of Commons, and the formal termination of the sitting of the Legislature, being two distinct things, he would say, that her Majesty's Ministers had represented to Queen that the former would probably be accomplished about the 18th of August, and that each day would not be unfavourable for the latter; and therefore if the Sovereign should be pleased to ratify that view of the case, the day he had named would probably be that inquired after by the right honourable gentleman.'

It is remarkable how Mr. Gladstone errs both on the side of diffidence and on the side of confidence. Thus in the late Lancashire election he declared that he was nobody, and his opinions were nothing. He is always tearing his raiment and pouring ashes on his head. He speaks of 'his humble and insignificant person.' 'It would be the height of arrogance,' he almost whines, 'to forget that I am no more than a young, a late, a feeble labourer in this happy cause.' 'If my affection is of the smallest advantage to that great, that ancient, that noble institution, that advantage, small as it is, and it is most insignificant Oxford will possess as long as I live.' In almost abject terms he alluded, in the House of Commons, to his connection with the Whig party. 'I am too well aware of the relations that subsist between the party and myself. I have none of the claims he (Lord Russell) possesses. I came among among you an outcast from those with whom I associated; driven from them, I admit, by no arbitrary act, but by the slow and resistless force of conviction. I came among you—to make use of the legal phraseology—in forma pauperis. I had nothing to offer you but faithful and honourable service. You received me as Dido received the shipwrecked Æneas,

"Ejectum littore egentem

and I only trust you may not hereafter at any time have to complete the sentence in regard to me—

"Et regal domens in parte locavit.'

You received me with kindness, indulgence, generosity, and I may even say with some measure of confidence. And the relation between us has assumed such a form that you can never be my debtors, but that I must for ever be in your debt.' Now this language is positively servile and unreal; and now that Mr. Gladstone is Premier, it is to be hoped that he will leave it off.

But Mr. Gladstone figures at all kinds of meetings, and makes all kinds of speeches. He is opening a school; he is addressing a mechanics' institute; he is adorning a penny reading; he is receiving an address; he is taking part in some religious meeting, perchance for the S. P. G. At Burslem, on the great Wedgwood occasion, he confined himself, as if afraid of his own genius, rigidly to his manuscript. A little anecdote of Mr. Gladstone's public speaking may be interesting. On one occasion he had promised to attend a local meeting in behalf of the S. P. G., in a vast London central parish. With the usual stupidity of the local mind, the meeting was most insufficiently made known in the neighbourhood. The result was that there was not a single reporter present, and the general attendance was exceedingly thin. A chairman was extemporized, and soon after he had begun, Mr. Gladstone drove up, and in turn addressed the audience. The speech has been described to us as one of the happiest efforts he ever made. He addressed his scanty audience with all the clearness, force, and eloquence with which he could have addressed the House of Commons.—An apology for the thin attendance was made to him, and the chairman explained that he was in no way responsible for the want of the proper arrangements. Mr. Gladstone courteously waived any apology and said how glad he was, on any occasion and to any audience, to support a cause to which he was so much attached.

It will be interesting to turn away from politics to discuss Mr. Gladstone's place and office in literature. In speaking of Mr. Gladstone as a literary man, we should perhaps, first speak of him as a poet; for, though he has not written much poetry, much may be gathered from the little he has written. Jointly with Lord Lyttleton he issued a volume of 'Translations,' which, printed at first for private circulation, has subsequently enjoyed extensive publicity.—Mr. Gladstone's Greek and Latin compositions hardly rise above, if indeed they attain the level of, University prize compositions, and cannot, in scholastic merit, be for a moment compared with Lord Lyttleton's wonderful performances. His translation of that beautiful hymn, Toplady's Rock of Ages,' into rhyming monkish Latin, is, indeed, an exceedingly happy effort; but his translations into English from ancient and modern authors better show the poetical quality of his mind.—We will quote just one brief passage from the Italian, of Manzoni's Ode on the Death of Napoleon:—

'How often, as the listless day
In silence died away,
With lightning eye deprest,
And arms across upon his breast,
He stood, and memory's rushing train
Of wars was in his brain,
The breezy tents he seemed to see,
And the battering cannon's course,
And the flashing of the infantry,
And the torrent of the horse,
And the quick ecstatic word,
Obeyed as soon as heard.'

His earliest work, that difficult and obscure 'Essay on the State in relation to the Church,' which seemed to belong, if ever work belonged, to the region of abstract opinions, has of late been very eagerly scrutinized. The chief interest of Mr. Gladstone's publications is, first, the light that is thereby thrown on his political course, and on the growth of his peculiar mental idiosyncrasy. We cannot help thinking, in glancing through Mr. Gladstone's various works, that he has shifted almost as much in his theological as in his political creed. Mr. Gladstone is always supposed to have intimate relations with the 'Guardian' newspaper. It would be interesting to compare Mr. Gladstone's standpoint in the Essay, and in the earlier numbers of the 'Guardian,' with the Guardian's review of 'Ecce Homo,' Mr. Gladstone's own book on 'Ecce Homo,' and Mr. Gladstone's own references to Mr. Lecky's 'History of Rationalism,' in that Edinburgh address, which is perhaps the most careful and finished of all his publications. Mr. Gladstone has given us a commentary on the Essay in his recent 'Chapter of Autobiography,' which contains much noble writing, especially in his sketch of the Oxford movement (pp 28—31). He clearly explains his original point of view. 'The distinctive principle of the book was supposed to be that the State had a conscience; but the controversy really has not in the existence of a conscience in the State, so much as in the extent of its range. Few would deny the obligation of a State to follow the moral law. Every treaty, for example, proceeds upon it. The true issue was this: whether the State, in the best condition, has such a conscience as can take cognizance of religious truth and error; and in particular whether the State of the United Kingdom, at a period somewhat exceeding thirty years ago, was or was not so far in that condition as to be under an obligation to give an active and an exclusive support to the established religion of the country.' Mr. Gladstone has favoured the world with the very interesting correspondence with Macaulay, which seems to have considerably shaken him in the stability of his opinions. Let us now look at the practical results. 'Scarcely had my work issued from the press, when I became aware that there was no party, no section of a party, no individual person, probably in the House of Commons who was prepared to act upon it. I found myself the last man on the sinking ship.' The question subsequently arises, why, if he had changed his views, he postponed all idea of legislation till a great party opportunity arose? He makes answer, 'I have not been disposed, at my time of life, gratuitously to undertake agitations of the most difficult, and at times apparently the most hopeless questions.' This is an instance of that political and worldly adroitness which has characterized Mr. Gladstone amid all his aberrations. He thought that the question might not come on in his lifetime. In touching language he says: 'On that subject I will only say, that a man who in 1865 completed his thirty-third year of laborious career; who had already followed to the grave the remains of almost all the friends abreast of whom he had started from the University in the career of public life; and who had observed that, excepting two recent cases, it was hard to find in our whole history a single man who had been permitted to reach the fortieth year of a course of labour similar to his own within the walls of the House of Commons; such a man might surely be excused if he did not venture to reckon for himself on an exemption from the lot of greater and better men, and if he formed a less sanguine estimate of the fraction of space yet remaining to him than seems to have been the case with his critics.' He says, however, that he still does not coincide with Macaulay's view that Government only means police, although it is difficult to see with much closeness where the view now differs from Macaulay's. The 'Essay' was chiefly known, and will be chiefly remembered through his famous review.

Other publications, comparatively little known, might be cited which illustrate the progress of Mr. Gladstone's opinions.—Mr. Gladstone's letter to the Bishop of Aberdeen is a very remarkable one. He holds that synodical action of some sort necessary to the well-being of a church, and that the laity as a body, must take some part in the church synod; and that in matters ecclesiastical their assent and authority can be dispensed with. He writes as a Scotch churchman. He suggests that there should be three chambers; bishops, clergy, and laity respectively. He alludes to the deplorable condition of the Colonial Church. Much of this language caused alarm among his most fervent supporters. It was clearly seen, for instance, by Dr. Wordsworth, the Warden of Glenalmond, who published a letter to him, that he looked, albeit indirectly, to a separation between Church and State. It should be noted that Bunsen prefixes to his 'Church of the Future' a correspondence between himself and Mr. Gladstone, in which Mr. Gladstone says: 'Although I see in the Church of England everywhere the signs of revival and improvement, there is yet an evil condition of things which can only be averted by an increase of the episcopate.' Mr. Gladstone's vote has brought very near to us the question of the disestablishment of the Church of England, which is one of the next large questions looming on the political horizon. We need not discuss further Mr. Gladstone's religious writings, which display all his earnestness, but which if they had not owned his name, would probably have dropped still-born from the press.

In 1851 Mr. Gladstone published his translation of Signor Farini's 'Roman State from 1815 to 1850.' These four volumes of translation form one mine proof of his versatility and his enormous industry.—While Mr. Gladstone was translating the earlier portion, Signor Farini was concluding the latter portion, which he dedicated to his translator. 'I decided on relating them to you, sir,' writes Farini, 'who, by your love of Italian letters, and your deeds of Italian charity, have established a relationship with Italy in the spirit of those great Italian writers who have been our masters in eloquence, in civil philosophy, and in national virtue, from Dante and Macchiavelli down to Alfieri and Gioberti.' Mr. Gladstone has now become a household name in Italy. What the present Sir Robert Peel is to Geneva, Mr. Gladstone is to the whole of Italy. Of the language and literature of the country he is an absolute master. On one occasion he is known to have delivered a speech of three hours in faultless Italian. Mr. Gladstone's vigorous and hearty exertions on behalf of Italian nationality proved great helps to his popularity at home. Those efforts probably had some effect in hastening the Italian revolution. It is not often that a publication has such a large and direct political influence as Mr. Gladstone's 'Letters to Lord Aberdeen on the State of the Neapolitan Prisons.' Mr. Gladstone's statements on Italian matters were impugned by Lord Normanby and others, but their accuracy was hardly materially affected. The Letters were the result of a long sojourn which he made in Naples in 1850-51.—Lord Palmerston sent Mr. Gladstone's Letters to every English ambassador, requesting each one to bring them under the notice of the court to which he was accredited. The Neapolitan Government itself published an answer, which Mr. Gladstone met by a crushing rejoinder. It would be out of place to enter here on a criticism of Mr. Gladstone's work on Homer and the Homeric Age. In much it is deeply interesting, though the scholarship is defective, and the work is rather a matter of derision than otherwise with German critics. It is very curious to notice Mr. Gladstone's excitable nature, as shown in these volumes. It is not only that he sees mystic adumbrations of the cultus of the Virgin, and of the doctrine of the Trinity; in the most chivalrous way he espouses the cause of Helen, and expends a great deal of ingenuity in exploring the force of the middle voice in order to ascertain whether Homer's princesses washed their heroes themselves or caused them to be washed. Mr. Gladstone has also contributed to the 'Quarterly Review' and the 'Oxford University Essays.'

There will frequently be observed, in Mr. Gladstone's writings, a kind of 'energy divine,' and a curiosa felicitas of words.—In all that Mr. Gladstone writes there is, to some extent, the same energy of language, the same strong, happy idiomatic English. Only it must be owned that, although these elements exist, they are by no means constant elements in Mr. Gladstone's compositions. You often meet with a page of exquisite English, but also over how many weari-some pages you must travel before you alight upon such an oasis of the desert.—We candidly confess that we find it an extremely difficult matter to read with enjoyment, as a whole, any one of Mr. Gladstone's literary works. Macaulay tells a story—or perhaps invented one—that a man chose to go to the galleys rather than read Guicciardini; and Guicciardini is, to say the least, easier reading than Gladstone. Mr. Gladstone's books owe any popularity they may enjoy to the fact that they were written by the leading statesman of the age. If it were not for this they would probably be chiefly remembered as marvels of logomachy and wasted ingenuity, or be speedily forgotten. At the period of publication they will eagerly be examined to see what Mr. Gladstone's opinions may be on important events in contemporary history. Even his speeches, so irresistible in their hearing, have very much the same character in their perusal.

Who ever fairly followed Mr. Gladstone through all those interminable speeches of his on his Lancashire campaign? The most inveterate reader of the 'Times' would be content to glance his eyes down that wilderness of verbiage, allowing it at times to rest on the passages which elicited bursts of cheering, but greatly wondering to what the cheering could be attributed. Mr. Gladstone's speeches are somewhat said to be Demosthenic. We hope the parallel is not altogether complete, for Demosthenes was as unfortunate as a states-man as he was magnificent as an orator.—But can any one honestly believe that Mr. Gladstone's speeches will ever be classic as our Demosthenes? As we read the Greek orator we see how every word is essential to a sentence, and every sentence to a periculus oratorum. There are many noble passages in Mr. Gladstone's speeches, but whole columns might be cut out, and the pruning knife should everywhere be unsparingly applied. How feebly, and in a kind of antichmax, do these long, involved sentences end! what involutions, what parentheses, what twirlings and riggings of speech! How often do we regret, for Mr. Gladstone's own scholastic fame and literary repute, that fluent volubility of speech, which is often as so much sounding brass or tinkling cymbal. As we listen to the great orator we are borne away on the resistless tide of his eloquence; but as the words meet us in the passionless print, we see that there is a luxuriance of foliage without fruit, that exuberance of language often hides poverty of thought, and that often an enormous expenditure of labour has been incurred on behalf of some barren intellectual crotchet. It may safely be said that no writer of real eminence has written so voluminously as Mr. Gladstone, and, at the same time, has made such slender additions to the knowledge, amusement, or thought of humanity.

It will readily be conceded that Mr. Gladstone's strength lies in practical politics rather than in authorship. But we are forced to believe that the same qualities or defects of mind which pervade his writings must also belong to his statesmanship. One of the keenest of Liberal writers has said of him that he is 'a statesman of the very highest class of the second rank, a statesman of wonderful resource on all subjects, of fine insight in many—but not a statesman of deeply-matured political principles, nor one of the safest judgment.' Some such estimate as this is, we think, substantially correct. Mr. Gladstone has also been called the most vulnerable of politicians. His course seems patriotic in the Crimean war, and unnatural in defending the Chinese for poisoning wells. Still his friends urge his unbounded honesty; and while we vehemently urge this ourselves, we see that this honesty has generally been exercised in harmony with his personal and political predilections. Mr. Gladstone invests every side he adopts with a halo of earnestness and political truth. But when this halo is successively attached to two different sides of a subject, it becomes something of a will-o'-the-wisp or a mist. When Mr. Gladstone advocat-s the extinction of the Income Tax, and when with growing love he expatiates on its utility and its enemies; when he vehemently condemned Mr. Ouviers for desiring to cheapen French wines which the English could never drink, and afterwards cheapened them because drinkable above all drinks; when he strongly advocated the system of small boroughs, and shortly afterwards ruthlessly prepared to sweep small boroughs away, it becomes rather puzzling to outsiders to determine on which side the Gladstonian earnestness and truth is really enlisted. We have no desire to interfere with politics, and do not discuss his anticipated legislation on the Irish Church. But it has been surprising that political writers have not connected this with his crusade against endowments some years ago. It will be remembered how strongly he advocated the heavy taxation and charities, and with that want of proportion so characteristic of his mind he could not modify a sweeping principle to meet particular instances. He would, for instance, tax the London hospitals, though the result would be that hundreds of in-door patients and thousands of out-door patients would necessarily be excluded under most afflicting circumstances from those humane palaces of suffering. Such is the result of applying an inflexible political principle to complex conditions of society. Mr. Gladstone has now obtained the roc's egg in the Westminster Palace for which all the politicians sigh. But the question ever more arises, What will he do with it? If the highest statesmanship was a necessary adjunct to the highest oratory, there could be no doubt of the answer. But, historically speaking, statesmanship and oratory are easily susceptible of divorce. The concentrated fires of passionate speech are soon opposed to the lumen siccum of philosophical truth. However that may be, all patriotic Englishmen may well have a national pride in their Premier: in his scholarship, his profound religious nature, his vast experience, his enormous industry, his boundless capacity; and the most timid may, for a time, check their forebodings, and wish him all good wishes for a strong, successful

EMIGRATION.

The following circular has been addressed to the Mayors and Reeves of the Councils of Ontario:—

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE AND PUBLIC WORKS FOR ONTARIO, TORONTO April 5, 1869.

DEAR SIR,—In view of an anticipated extensive immigration of the industrial classes to this Province from Europe, and especially from Great Britain, during the coming season, I am anxious to ascertain, so far as possible, the actual demands for the various descriptions of labour in the different sections of the Province of Ontario.

The Government is desirous of furthering, by every prudential means, a healthy immigration. To the industrious immigrant, either with or without capital, it is desirable that every possible encouragement should be afforded, and in a way that will not lessen the feeling of honourable independence on the part of the recipient. In this view, the greatest benefit which can conferred upon industrious immigrants is to provide them with work at fair rates of remuneration. It is here that the Government and the Municipal authorities can render essential aid, the latter by furnishing information as to where and to what extent labour is required; the former, by imparting that information to immigrants on their arrival, and if need be, by assisting them to reach those sections where the demand for labour exists.

I shall be glad if you will, after consultation with the council of your Municipality, and with such other persons as you may deem necessary, fill up the annexed blank Schedule, with the numbers of the different classes of labourers and servants for whom employment can be found, and return the same to this Department at as early a day as possible.

The returns, when received, will be duly registered, and immigrants on their arrival will be distributed to the different parts of the Province, in accordance with the requisition of the local authorities.

It is believed that, in this way, by a hearty co-operation between the Government and the various Municipal Councils, and in connection with efforts which the Government is now making for diffusing in the Old World information in relation to this Province, a large number of immigrants can be induced to come here, and can be supplied with work immediately on their arrival, and thus be prompted to remain as permanent settlers in the country.

Invoking your hearty and earnest assistance in this effort to promote the prosperity of the Province of Ontario,

I am, Sir,
Your obedient Servant,
JOHN CARLING,
Commissioner.

FROM OTTAWA.

April 13.

Senators Dickey, Archibald and Mills have arrived. Hon. Messrs. Rose and Mitchell returned to-day from Montreal.

Hon. J. H. Cameron, it is said, will defend Buckley and Doyle at the Assizes here. The medical opinion is that Buckley's mind has broken down under his troubles. He has lost all interest in his private affairs, and it is not impossible, that instead of undergoing trial, he will be sent to a Lunatic Asylum. Should Buckley and Doyle be brought to trial as accessories in the McGee murder, it is pretty generally believed here the charge will break down. It is expected that medical men will be called upon to state their opinion as to Buckley's sanity before a trial takes place.

The Private Bill Legislation for the session is considerable. Notices of about 70 Bills are already given, and, as the session advances, it will no doubt be increased to one hundred. All of the leading banks of the country are applying for extension of their charters. Several of them ask for amendments, and a few banks seek incorporation. There are four divorce bills asked for; over twenty bills for patents of invention, besides legislation on railways, insurance and telegraph companies. All this together with the measures to be brought forward by the Government, gives promise of a pretty active session.

It is said the Government is tend to close up the business of the session in two months, which would extend it to the middle of June. It is of course impossible to predict what the session may bring forth or what may be developed in its course.

THE PRINCE OF WALES.—In reply to the stories which have been circulated in reference to H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, a well informed English paper says: He is a high-toned English gentleman, doing nothing night or day to dishonor his name or cloud the high hopes connected with his future. He is represented as very impressible, desirous of gaining information, and generous to a fault. The stories of his ill-treatment of the Princess of Wales, or of his neglecting her, are equally untrue. He is exceedingly happy, and even jovial, in his house among his children. He is their companion and playmate, and does not hesitate to have with them a Royal romp. In public the Prince is a model of attention to his wife. At pic-nics he looks after her to see that she takes no cold, guards her with shawls and clothing; indeed he gives personal attention to the comforts of his guests, including his coachman, footman, and servants who wait upon the royal party. He is a high-toned honorable man in all his dealings, official and personal. The Prince of Wales possesses great animal spirits, and his personal attention to his great estates does not afford him sufficient employment to answer his physical nature. On more than one occasion he has been known to attend fires and work at the common firemen, glad of the chance to have a healthy recreation and at the same time do a good thing. Such is the Prince of Wales, as represented by a person who knows him even better than his royal mother.

JUST LIKE HIM.—How Sir John A. Macdonald attends to the interests of the country may be learnt from the Kingston News:—The urgency of public interests demands the filling up of the vacant Judgeship of the County of Frontenac. Owing to the short time allowed for the Assizes, many very important cases were not tried. Mr. Justice Morrison would have left these cases to be disposed of by the County Judge if there had been one; but he held that the Deputy, Mr. Parke, had no power to try them. These cases, much to the loss and annoyance of suitors and witnesses, stand over until next court. Important interests are consequently suffering. It is much regretted that the Minister of Justice does not make an appointment to the County Judgeship and save many inconvenience.—Recorder.

PORT BURWELL BONDS.—The Ontario press would do well to apprize their readers not to buy Port Burwell Harbor bonds, as $2,400 of that issue have been stolen from this city, and it is presumed the villains will try to pass them in Canada. Only $30,000 were issued, and of them the six stolen are all that are afloat. These are in denominations of $400, and are payable at the Bank of British North America, London, Detroit Post.

Jacobs' Rheumatic Liquid applied in time frequently prevents weeks of suffering.

The Approaching Ecumenical Council.

GREAT PREPARATION IN ROME—THE NUMBER OF CLERICAL DIGNITARIES EXPECTED—THE POPE PERSONALLY SUPERINTENDING THE DETAILS.

A Roman correspondent says:

"Nulla dies sine linea" must now be the motto of every Roman correspondent on the subject of the approaching (Ecumenical Council. The necessary organization of such a vast assembly of prelates, and the still vaster concomitant crowd of dependents, attendants, devout visitors, and curious spectators, develops in successive order arrangements worthy of being chronicled.

It is difficult to conjecture by what precise number of general visitors the Eternal City will be invaded on the occasion, but we can gain an approximate idea from official sources of the number of prelates to be expected.

When 'au grand complet' there are 12 patriarchs of the Latin and Oriental rite, 12 Latin archbishops immediately dependent on the Holy See, 120 with ecclesiastical provinces, seven Oriental bishops; total, 126. Of Latin bishops there are six called suburbicarians, always cardinals (with sees near Rome), 84 immediately subject to the Holy See, and 570 with dioceses, and 66 bishops of the Oriental rite; total, 723.

His Holiness has elevated to the Metropolitan dignity 16 sees, and erected five archbishoprics and 111 bishoprics; total, 131. Archbishops sees in partibus, 36; bishops sees in partibus, 198. The vacant sees are, one patriarchial 16 archiepiscopal, and 100 episcopal. Those occupied amount to 747 patriarchial and presidential, and 224 in partibus. So that the titular Catholic hierarchy comprises 981 prelates.

There are 135 apostolic delegations vicariates, and prefectures, besides which the present Pope has created 32 similar offices. Of these 28 are vacant. With such a prospect before him, his Holiness has acted wisely in naming a commission, which might be aptly denominated of "ways and means," to provide suitable lodgings for the assembled fathers, and to offer them the hospitality of the Sovereign Pontiff.—Six prelates, with the Secretary of the propaganda for their president, are charged with this duty.

Pio Nono takes immense interest in the progress of these preparations. He inspected on Saturday last, the plan of the semicircle of seats in the transept of St. Peter's as designed for the Conscript Fathers, and gave a trial to the convenience of the stalls, of which a section has been executed as a specimen. In order to make sure of the receptive capacities of the stalls, of which 14 semicircular rows will rise in successive elevation, the Pope requested Monsignor Teodoli, who has succeeded Monsignor Giraud as Economo of St. Peter's to get into one of them, dressed first in the simple soltana and afterwards with the more voluminous privilaie. The physical dimensions of this prelate are of a class which will constitute the maximum mould of ecclesiastical form extant, and as he was comfortable in his seat we may presume that no other bishop of the hierarchy will venture to complain of want of room.

The Hudson Bay Negociation.

The Minerve publishes in full the letter of the Canadian Ministers in London, to the Secretary for the Colonies, dated 8th February last, a document which occupies six closely printed columns. In this letter our Ministers, Sir G. E. Cartier, and Hon. Mr. MacDougall, review the history of the whole question with its legal aspects, and then present the following as their conclusions:—

1st. The actual property and cash on hand of the Hudson Bay Company, according to their own showing, as valued by competent persons, (apart from their so-called territorial rights), amounted to £1,393,569 at the time when they sold the whole property and territorial rights for £1,500,000 to a new company. It is clear, therefore, that their own valuation of these territorial rights was just the difference between these two sums, or £106,431, instead of the £300,000, which the British Government proposes, and which is to be supplemented by a twentieth part of the territory settled for 50 years. There is, however, another view still more striking of the value of these rights. The new company made its capital nominally £2,000,000 divided into £20 shares, which are selling for some time back at £13 10s., at which rate the whole concern, property, rights and all would be worth £1,350,000, or £43,569 less than the company's valuation of its property in 1863. At this rate the territorial rights are worth just the sum less than nothing. The Canadian Ministers would be willing to take either of these measures as the value of the so-called territorial rights, and leave the Company all its property actually occupied, but give no share of land in future settlements.

If these terms are declined by the Company, the Ministers demand, in the name of the Dominion of Canada, a transfer of all the British territories west and north of Canada not held by the H. B. Co., under the charter granted by Charles II.—Witness.

UNION OF SCOTLAND AND IRELAND.—It is proposed to unite Scotland and Ireland by a tunnel, starting on the Irish side from a point midway between Cushendun and Cushendall, on the coast of Antrim, and on the Scotch side at Glenstrone, from whence it would run through the head of the Mull of Cantyre. The total length of the tunnel will be fourteen miles three furlongs, and it is said that the ground through which it will have to be made is exactly suited for tunnelling operations, and the sandstone for lining it can be had in any quantity on the Irish side. It is proposed to construct the tunnel for a single line only, the extreme depth being twenty-one feet, and the clear width at the level of the rails fifteen feet. It is proposed, however to lay down three lines of rails to accomodate wide and narrow gauge carriages. The time estimated for completing the tunnel is about six years, and the cost four and a quarter million of pounds.

MISCELLANEOUS TRAINING.—If an advertisement appears for a person to fill any of the situations which men of a miscellaneous education think themselves fit for, such as that of clerk or storeman, there are crowds of applicants; but if the advertisement is for a person specially qualified for some specified duty or branch of business, there are few or no applications, and those who do apply are rarely qualified. The moral to be derived from this fact is that, there are far too many persons educated after a miscellaneous fashion who are willing to do anything, but who can do nothing well, and far too few are thoroughly bred to some particular branch of business. The old apprenticeship system evidently needs reviving in some way.—Witness.

THURSDAY, APRIL 15, 1869.

The North-West or Hudson Bay Territory.

Latest telegrams inform us that Earl Granville has announced to the House of Lords that the shareholders of the Hudson Bay Company have acceded to the terms proposed by the Government.

The proposition of the Imperial Government is, for the Canadian Government to pay the Company £300,000, or nearly $1,500,000, and in addition they are to have one twentieth part of the territory settled for 50 years.

Some of our knowing ones tell us the bargain is a good one for Canada, as the territory is rich and extensive, the climate healty and the country calculated to be the home of an immense population. They further assure us that the settlement will open up a high way through Canadian territory to the Pacific, and consequently, of course, to the great gold mines of British Columbia and the Rocky Mountains.

Now this may or may not be realized; we are not to be too sanguine of the results, as too often the settling of a country so far away from the present centre of Canadian civilization may cost as much as it is worth. We are not, however, to look entirely at the worst side of the picture, but on the contrary to consider both sides, and then try and draw reasonable conclusions. The whole of the vast North-west has been and is yet in the hands of a company, the centre of which is in England, and as a consequence the profits of the territory will go to that country so long as they are the owners, nothing except the necessary outlay of working the concern will ever be left here, to get rid of this and to place the country under the control of our own government will appear, at least, to remove this difficulty.

But then when we consider that the Company is still to retain the control, profits, &c., of one-twentieth of the settled, and hence, of the best of the territory, may we not fear that this huge company will still for fifty years longer control the whole country. We cannot be ignorant of the power of a wealthy strong corporation over the straggling settlers that first go to a new tract of country. How often do they gain the control of all local and, too often, of public affairs, and try to mould the whole for their interests; and may we not dread that this may be attempted in this new territory if acquired. And then, if in lapse of time, the Red River and Saskatchewan valleys should become a province what will be to hinder such a powerful company gaining entire control of public affairs through their influential traders, and obtain by a vote of the Legislature, forever, that which they are seeking to retain for a few years only. The question, therefore, arises just now, should our government consent to the company's retaining one-twentieth of the best part of the territory?

This question will, no doubt, come before our Dominion Parliament during the present session, but we fear that whatever the government proposes, the members are ready to vote for. We have seen so much of this in the past that we are led to look for it in the future; and we now expect the ratification of every thing proposed. Would it not be really better to buy out the company entirely at once, and thus rid ourselves of their influence forever? At present and for many years to come, the lands retained will be most valuable as hunting grounds. The company know this, and they will seek to keep them for that purpose. Will this not retard the settlement of the lands in the immediate vicinity of those lands, and thus also retard the growth of the country as a whole? Hence, there can be no doubt but that it would be better for the country in the end to buy the whole now.

We will be told that even at a sacrifice it will be better to get possession of the North-west territory. This we most readily admit, if the after control was in the hands of the proper parties. We have, already, millions of acres of wild lands. What are they doing with those lands? Are they being settled? Are they in the market? Can a farmer's son get an acre of them except in about two or three townships? And while this is the case, and the press of the country teems with accounts of hundreds of families leaving our country for the Western States because they cannot get a few acres of the millions that we already possess; does it not seem like madness to give a million and a half of dollars for territory to be used in about the same way? The country is strongly in favor of getting rid of the Hudson Bay Company; but they should also exert themselves just as much to get rid of the old feeling that prevails in the management of the wild lands we already possess.

"It is proposed that Canada should pay in cash £300,000; that within twelve months after the surrender of the country the Hudson's Bay Company may select a block of land adjoining each of its stations, not exceeding in the aggregate 50,000 acres; that for fifty years after the surrender, the Company may claim in any township or district within the section of country denominated the Fertile Belt, in which land is laid out for settlement, grants of land not exceeding one-twentieth part of the land so laid out; that Canada shall take over the materials of the electric telegraph at cost price, subject to reasonable deductions for deteriorations; and the Company shall be at liberty to carry on its trade without hindrance in its corporate capacity, that no exceptional tax shall be placed upon the Company's land, trade, or service, nor any import duty on goods introduced by them previous to the surrender."

It is held that £106,431 is nearer the value of the company's territorial rights.—The whole concern, property and territory, were held by the Company at about £1,350,000, the property which they still are to retain £1,393,569. The territory, therefore, is worth, the difference by their own showing in '63, £43,569, for which we are asked to give £300,000, or seven times its value, to which is to be added one twentieth of the entire lands of the country for 50 years. In the view of the transaction the Company will have the best of the bargain if the offer of Earl Granville be accepted.

The only redeeming argument is that by so doing we get clear of the vexed question, and one that its final settlement might cost as much and perhaps more in litigation.—This, no doubt, will induce not a few to vote to grant the proposed terms rather than hereafter be forced to gain possession by law.

THE HOUSE OF COMMONS

Meets to-day at Ottawa. Already (considering the general tardiness) the members are with their faces Ottawa-ward. Messrs. Cartier and McDougall have returned from England, where they have been the entire winter on the Hudson Bay question. When they left there was no final decission, but a telegram of Friday announces the willingness of the company to accept Earl Granville's offer. The settlement, therefore, of this question will come before the Commons this Session. The terms of a union of Newfoundland with the Dominion will also occupy the House, and if we may judge from the terms procured by Mr. Howe, for Nova Scotia, if the Newfoundlanders can bear the damp and bad ventilation of the Ottawa buildings long enough, they will in all probability be able to obtain the best of it.—Our Statesmen are so anxious to get support from any quarter that if the Delegates from Prima Vista prove at all tractable, John A. will secure them. Mr. Howe boasts that he has secured millions for his Province. This will be an obstacle to a fair settlement with Newfoundland, and may do more than anything else to prevent it.

The Intercolonial Railway contracts, too, will afford a little scope for government engineering, and a more than usual chance to mesmerise opponents into tractable followers. We may expect, therefore, to find the session extending till the dog days compel members to seek retreat from the heat of their prisons. We will endeavor to keep our readers posted in all that transpires, as far as our space will permit. The busy season now approaching will prevent the people of Canada prying as closely as they ought into public affairs, and this may be something of the reason for calling the members together so late in the season.

Not According to the Letter.

In a summary statement given by Dr. Ryerson, purporting to be the result of the different County Conventions held by him, and which is now going the rounds of the public press, we find the following paragraph:—

"The Convention at Whitby, Port Hope, Peterborough, Napanee and Alexandria, by the vote of a majority, desired Local Superintendents to be appointed and paid, as now, by the Municipal Councils. The majority at the meetings held in Napanee and Alexandria desired Township Superintendents—the gentlemen filling these offices strongly contending for it, as they did at several other meetings, though several Township Superintendents at various meetings advocated County Superintendents in their place. The majority at all the other County Conventions voted for County Superintendents, qualified, appointed and paid as recommended by the Committee of the Legislative Assembly."

Now, as far as Peterboro is concerned we find the statement is not according to what transpired. The Convention here did not desire Local Superintendents to be appointed and paid as at present, as our readers will remember. On the contrary, the Convention was in favor of the County Council nominating and the Lieut.-Governor appointing; the Government to pay one-half the salary and the County Council the other half. In the hurry of speaking and attending, to the remarks of others, we suppose the Doctor lost track of the vote on this matter, and hence the impression carried away.—The Convention here, however, was not in favor of making the Local Superintendency a political machine to be at the mercy of every set of Cabinet Ministers who might be in power.

The Commissioner of Public Works was at London a few days ago, selecting a site for a lunatic asylum, and was to proceed to Belleville to select a site for a deaf and dumb asylum. The Leader and other papers assure us that Belleville was chosen on political considerations. Central Canada had supported J. Sandfield well, and two or three members from the neighborhood of Belleville among the rest, thus] political influence rules the Premier. Hamilton has long had its deaf and dumb asylum, and if any place in Ontario deserved the honor of having the new building, Hamilton was that place. But then a wily Premier could not make votes by that. The more servile people of Belleville and vicinity have therefore succeeded better; a warning and a threat this, that if representatives do not support J. S. he will remember it in public works, asylums, aid to railways, and all the other "ramifications of Legislative action." This large-hearted, high-minded and generous Premier, cannot forget a single vote polled against him, and woe betide the member that opposes him. This may account for the action of one of our members, in supporting J. S., and for the extreme quiet of the other in not daring to say a word for fear of its being considered in opposition. Under the circumstances, a wise head keeps a close mouth.

It is reported that Shuter Smith is to be appointed Queen's Printer for Ontario, in place of Mr. Hartney, who is Chief Clerk of Stationery.

EMIGRATION.

The Government of Ontario has appointed Mr. T. White, of the Hamilton Spectator, Emigration Commissioner of Ontario to Europe. Mr. White, it appears, will leave immediately for England. He will, no doubt, be away a few months and will do all in his power to further the errand on which he is sent. We have not learned his instructions or what terms he will be empowered to propose to induce the right sort of emigrants to direct their course this way. Perhaps this new movement will open the heart of the Commissioner of Crown Lands to offer such inducements as will draw able-bodied young men, who wish to remain in the country to get a home. Could a Commissioner be appointed to inquire into the cause of so many going to the West from Canada? We should try to keep the population we have, as well as to try to bring foreigners here, for if they should be treated as our young Canadians are, they will find their way to the West also. We trust Mr. White may be successful in the work, but he should be sure that there are lands for them before he seeks to induce them to come here.

Admission of Girls to the Grammar Schools.

During the late Session of the Legislature, petitions were presented from various parties, and strong opinions were expressed by various members in favour of the admission of girls to the Grammar Schools upon the same conditions as boys. The head of the Administration, though satisfied of the correctness of his expressed legal opinion on the subject, yielded to the popular pressure, and intimated an intention to get the regulations changed so as to permit girls, at the option of the Board of Trustees, to become recognized pupils of the Grammar Schools upon the same conditions as boys. We understand the regulation has been thus modified by the Council of Public Instruction. But as the programme of studies in the Grammar Schools cannot be changed the current year, and as an amended Grammar School Act is expected to be passed on the meeting of the Legislature next Autumn, by which the higher English education of girls as well as boys will be provided for in the Grammar Schools, it is suggested that parents had better keep their girls to English in the common schools the present year, than to put them to Latin for a few months, which would be equivalent to a loss of so much time in a girl's legitimate studies for a sound English education.—Journal of Education, March.

That is to say—girls have a right to go to the Grammar Schools on the same terms as boys, but the Chief Superintendent thinks it would be a loss of time, therefore, for twelve months' girls who might avail themselves of the advantages of being under the head master should not—it will be lost time for this year. What next?

Our Canadian Roman Catholic fellow citizens have been celebrating the 50th anniversary of the ordination of Pope Pius IX. The present Pope was born in 1792, and is hence in his 77th year. On the 16th of June, 1846, he was elected Pope. Many of our readers will remember the Italian trouble of 1848, and his having to leave his capital for a season, owing to the agitated state of the Italian people. Through French interference he was enabled to return to Rome, and his presence there has been prolonged only by means of French bayonets. His old age must serve to indicate a not very distant change, and on the good judgement of a successor much of the contentment and happiness of the Roman people depend. In all probability the Temporal Power will cease with the present occupant of the vatican.

LITERARY CLUB.—The annual meeting of the Peterboro Literary Club was held in the Club Room on Thursday evening last, April 1st. The following gentlemen were elected for the current year:—

Mr. Sheriff Hall, President.
Mr. John Burnham, 1st vice do
Mr J. Carnegie, jr., M.P.P., 2nd vice do.
Mr. J. W. Dunnet, 3rd vice do.
Mr. J. A. Hall, Treasurer.
Mr. J. O'Donnell, Secretary.
Mr. F. C. Taylor, Asst. do and Collector.
Mr. C. O'Beirne, Librarian.
Messrs. D. Haggart, W. Cameron, Jonathan B. Dixon, D. S. Eastwood, F. H. Knapp, and A. B. Kidd, Directors.

POPULATION OF THE TOWN.—The Assessors have just finished their work of assessing the property of the Town for the current year, 1969. The population as reported to them is 4,950. They are confident that there is considerably above 5,000, as in many cases they think boarders were not returned correctly. One to two hundred people must have come into town since they commenced, who are not recorded at all.—We may, therefore, safely put it down at 5,000.

We see it stated that the Commissioner of Public Works has concluded to go on with the Lock at Young's Point. He has also withdrawn the consideration of keeping up the dam. The right of way has been offered for $250 less than the Government led Mr Young to believe they would give. Thus the matter was so put that they could not back out. There may something be done this summer—let us wait and see.

The spring is not yet, as the weather is still cold. The snow lingers around the fences, but is going away very gently. The danger of spring floods is past, we think.—The wheat appears alive, and promises to be as good as usual, but warmer weather is ardently desired.

MESSRS. GREEN & ROCHE are receiving extensive assortments of spring and summer goods of the latest styles and best qualities and invite a call. See their advertisement this week.

W. CLINTON has received large spring importations of every thing in his line. Intending purchasers would do well to go and examine for themselves.

NEW STORE.—Messrs. Doran & Gibbons will open an extensive stock on Saturday.—See advertisement.

GRANTS PATRONAGE.—President Grant's Government is just as "paternal" as Mr. Chauveau's. The following is a list of the "good things" which have been distributed among his relatives since accession to office:

	Annually.
General Grant, as President	$25,000
Father Jesse R. Grant as Postmaster at Covington, Kentucky	3,100
Son Grant, Cadet at West Point	750
Brother-in-law Dent, Brigadier-General (and board at White House)	3,954
Brother-in-law Sharp, Collector (about)	15,000
Brother-in-law Casey, Assessor	3,500
Brother-in-law Cromer, Consul	3,500
Distant relatives to the Dents, Longstreet, Surveyor (about)	7,500

The Toronto Telegraph is enlarging itself. It promises a "big thing" to-day.

The Rev. Mr. Donald was to be inducted (yesterday) pastor of the Presbyterian Church, Port Hope.

H. H. Horsey has been appointed architect to the Provincial Penitentiary in room of his father, (deceased.)

The County Judgeship of Frontenac has not yet been named. Sir J. A. is not willing to have the entire onus of doing so.

The Toronto Telegraph says the Methodist Book concern earned $150,000 last year. We should think that it pays well.

Mr. Howe is well again, but cannot yet say how he is likely to succeed. Money, however, will enable him to make his mark.

Mr. Mitchell of Guelph, we understand, has received a call to be pastor of the Centreville and Millbrook Canada Presbyterian Church.

A soldier of the R. C. Rifles, named Dickson, lately attempted suicide at Kingston.—The knife was too dull, and in consequence the wound was not deep enough to be fatal.

LONDON SOCIETY.—The April number of this popular monthly has been received from W. C. Chewett & Co. It can be had at Chewett's, Toronto, or at the book stores here.

The trial of Mr. Boyle, of the Irish Canadian, for libel, will take place at the present Carleton Assizes. It can hardly be looked upon in any other light than a little petty spite against Boyle.

The Montreal Witness says, "Four persons in Peterboro have subscribed $2,500 for the Queen's College endowment fund." This is very good for these four—they have given of their abundance.

Late West Indian news represent that Jamaica authorities had proclaimed all the ports of Cuba as infected with cholera.—That scourge added to that of civil war must ere long make war no longer necessary.

The Provincial Government has now in press a pamphlet setting forth the inducements offered by Ontario to emigrants. Copies will be mailed to the steamship agents at home, as it will be their interest to circulate them.

DISESTABLISHMENT ON A GRAND SCALE.—In the House of Commons, England, on the 6th inst., Mr. Archdale, member for Fermanagh, Ireland, proposed to extend the Church disestablishment in England and Scotland also. This will follow ere long.

The Kingston Whig says:—There is not an Onion in Kingston Market to be had for love or money. Any person within Railroad distance having this useful commodity in store, would do well to consign a quantity to Kingston, where a big price can be had.

RITUALISM AT OXFORD.—The Rev. R. M. Benson, M. A., incumbent of the district church of St. John the Evangelist, Oxford, who has recently founded a monastic brotherhood in close proximity to the building in which he officiates, has placed a full-size figure of the Saviour with two attendants, in the open air at the east end of the chapel connected with the monastery

The Rev. Mr. Gundy, B. C. Minister at Galt, reports to the London Advertiser that a remarkable revival is still going on at Galt. Religious services are largely attended and those who do attend appear to be impressed in a more than ordinary way.—He says that at "threshings" the "noon spell" is commonly spent in reading the bible and in prayer instead of as formerly in idle talk.

TORONTO.—A woman named McKenna died, yesterday, under doubtful circumstances of being killed by her husband in a passion. She was drunk at the time, and for two or three days before it, and received two or three severe falls while in that state. McKenna also drank. She has gone to render her account before the dread tribunal, in a drunken state. This is one more to the many victims to this dreadful curse and yet people are satisfied with a system that slays its thousands every year.

The Hon. John Sandfield Macdonald made a peculiarly happy selection when he appointed Mr. J. H. Cameron to conduct the Crown business at the Wentworth Assizes. Mr. Cameron is said to be the chief pillar of the bar in Ontario, and that chief pillar was sent to us, doubtless as a special favor, by a Premier who loves Hamilton beyond measure. To be sure, as in many other cases where extravagant favours are shown, some slight embarrassment attends the honour done us. It is in this wise. Chief pillars of the bar are generally blessed with a superfluity of private business, Mr. Cameron is no exception to the rule. So great is that business that through the Assizes opened on Monday, Mr. Cameron did not find it convenient to put in an appearance until Tuesday. Towards the close of the week the pressure of private business became again so great that Mr. Cameron had to leave on Thursday with a promise to return on Monday. So he has given one whole day and parts of two other day to the Crown business during the first week of the Assizes. During the remaining period the Grand Jury has been permitted to remain idle and the trial of criminal cases to stand over in order to suit the superior exigencies of Mr. Cameron's private business, and enable him to earn a few extra Counsel fees. We suppose it would be wrong to complain of this as being too high a price to pay even for the honour of Mr. Cameron as Crown Counsel in place of any less eminent man. To be sure some half dozen unfortunates may in consequence be left over in gaol for three or six months longer without having the trial to which they are fairly entitled to establish their guilt or innocence. Witnesses for the Crown, and the prisoners, may also be unduly detained to their own grievous financial detriment, and the whole business of the Court be improperly checked. But what of all this so long as they and the public have the pleasure of rejoicing in the fact that Mr. Cameron is a pillar of the bar, and that he is receiving more fee and reward for attending to private business at Kingston or somewhere else, than where he promised to be when he accepted the Crown counselship for the Wentworth Assizes.—We join in the rejoicing that Mr. Cameron has so many counsel fees coming to him in Kingston; yet we cannot express the wish the next time Mr. John Sandfield sends us an out side Crown prosecutor, he will send one who has time to attend to the public business as well as to his own. The gentleman himself may not make so many dollars as Mr. C., but the people will be better served and better satisfied.—Hamilton Times.

DRUNKENNESS.

A FEW REMARKS THEREON, ADDRESSED IN A CHARACTISTICA POEM.

Q.—Is drunkenness a Biblecal term?

A.—Yes. See Ro. 12, 13.

Q.—What is the definition of the word drunkenness?

A.—Intoxication with strong Liquor.—J. Walker.

Q.—Can it be defined in any other sense?

A.—Yes, as being actual or habitual, just as it is one thing to be drunk, and another to be a drunkard.

Q.—Do I apprehend you to mean that it is possible for a person to be drunk and at the same time not to be considered a drunkard?

A.—Yes, that is what I mean by asserting that it is one thing to be drunk, and another to be a drunkard.

Q.—This truly appears to be something new to me, and which I never thought of before.—If you can substantiate this assertion to my satisfaction, I shall feel obliged.

A.—I think this can be proved in the case of Noah. After he came out of the Ark he planted a vinyard, and drank of the wine, insensible no doubt, of its intoxicating virtue, and became drunk, Gen. 9. This is the first instance we have on record of any person becoming drunk, and the first and last time in the case of Noah. Now, if we possess the least degree of charity, we cannot consider Noah a drunkard. It is the habitual practice of partaking of intoxicating liquor that renders a person a drunkard.

Q.—Is there any difference between Convivial intemperance and that solitary sottishness in which the person waits neither for company nor invitation?

A.—Yes, there is a vast difference. But the one most commonly ends in the other; and this last is the lowest degradation to which the faculties and dignity of human nature can be reduced. Paley's Moral Philosophy, Book IV, chap. 2.

Q.—How do persons become drunkards?

A.—They have to acquire it, or in other words to learn to be drunkards. Things that are really good for us, like water and milk, God has made pleasant to our taste, we dont have to learn to drink them. Sea.-cely is there one to be found who likes them at first. It takes them some time to get into the habit of drinking them, before they really like them. What a vast contrast there is between the dumb animals and man, man is endowed with speech, reason, and an immortal soul. The horse, the cow. the dog, the cat, the sheep, the pig, nor even the stupid donkey will ever learn to get drunk.

Q.—Has example a powerful influence to lead persons to the vice of intemperance?

A.—Yes, most assuredly. Man is an imitative being; and there are various instances of children being led to intemperance by imitating the conduct of their parents; of domestics imitating the conduct of their employers; of many a young man by imitating the conduct of his evil associates; and of laymen imitating the conduct and example of their pastor. I would here add, that drunkenness is apt, beyond any vice that can be mentioned, to draw in others by the example.

Q.—How would you define or classify the evils that are consequent on intemperance?

A.—First—personal or individual—it betrays most constitutions either to extravagance, anger or sins of lewdness; it disqualifies the person from discharging the duties of his station; it destroys his usefulness in society; it renders him dishonorable in the estimation of the more refined classes of society it will shorten his life, and if persisted in, will prevent him from the Kingdom of Heaven. See 1 Cor. 6, 10.

Second. There are domestic evils. If we would contrast the home of the drunkard with that of the sober man, we should find a great disparity. In the former there is contention and strife, obscene language and oaths, disorder and confusion, attended with poverty, sorrow and degradation. But not so in the house of the sober man; the state of things therein is quite the reverse.

Third. There are civil evils attending intemperance. This is obvious to every thinking mind, when we consider the various robberies and murders that are continually committed in our land, and the vast expense such cases occasions to our government and consequently to the community at large, by imposing a taxation upon them to meet the exigencies of the government.

Q.—As many devices have been sought out for the prevention of intemperance, which of them all do you suppose to be the most efficient?

A.—Some contend for a prohibitory law against making and selling intoxicating drinks; others, that a change of place, situation, company, or profession, will prevent intemperance; others recommend that the drunkard be excluded from the society of all sober people, let no one offer him any employment, let him never be beheld except with the aspect of pity or the frown of disapprobation, and never let him be spoken to except in a way that shall make him the more deeply feel that he has lost the favor of God and of man; others say that total abstinence by signing the pledge to this effect is the most certain remedy; but we know that this has failed in many instances. The most certain and infallible prevention is, I think, the fear or true love to God. This, as one eminent person writes, is the real temperance jewel. If we carry this jewel with us wherever we go, it will prevent us from learning to drink and it will keep us from tempting others to drink. If we should be tempted or invited to drink intoxicating liquors, let us have the fortitude of young Joseph, when he said on one occasion, "How can I do this great evil or wickedness and sin against God?" It was the Bible jewel, the fear of God that prevented him.

"The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom." Pro. 9, 10.

EVANS PUGH.

Douro, April 14th, 1869.

SUICIDE OF DR. TOWLE.

"One more unfortunate, weary of breath, Rashly importunate, is gone to his death."
Hood.

Said to relate that Dr. Towle, of Nottingham, England, and about two or three months ago a resident of Guelph, met with his death very recently in Montreal, under the most distressing circumstances, "unswept, unhonored and unsung;" his lifeless remains sent unwashed and "unkempt" to burial, and "tumbled over from his bed into a shapeless packing box."

It appears from a letter signed "T. H. Harrison," in the Montreal Witness of the 31st ult., that the deceased sprung from a highly respectable family; was pleasant and engaging in his manners, and just the sort of a man likely to fall a victim to the seductive witchery of the wine-cup, which brought him to an untimely end, and a pauper's grave, whose surroundings but too painfully illustrate the lines of Hood:

"Rattle his bones over the stones,
He's only a pauper whom nobody owns."

Mischief of some kind is evidently brewing among our republican neighbors, and who knows but they are projecting new plans of conquest, and preparing to make a descent somewhere. Troops are stopped on their way to the west, soldiers are being sent to Key West, and vessels of war to the Gulf. Does it not look as if a design on Cuba was meditated? Really it looks mysterious on the part of a nation whose President has been so emphatic in saying—"Let us have peace."—Spectator.

REPORTING IN THE VATICAN.—A correspondent, writing from Rome, informs us that, to ensure correct reports of the debates in the approaching Vatican Council, a staff of stenographers is being organised. All the deliberations will be in Latin, the universal language of the Church in her theological schools. The reporters are divinity students, selected from the different national colleges in Rome.

The Reformers of both ridings of the County of Wentworth purpose, says the Hamilton Times, to have a grand pic-nic some time this season, when roads and weather are favourable; and although the demonstration last year was so successful, the one to come, it is predicted, will be more so.

MOTHERS READ THIS.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and self-administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and certify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package. It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

STOP AND SEE!

THE following remarks on Testimonials of most wonderful and extraordinary cures in Canada by the GREAT INDIAN REMEDY. They are stern, undeniable and inconteatable facts, sufficient to convince the most skeptical that the Great Medicinal Compound yearned after for ages is now accessible in the Great Shoshonees Remedy.

For Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Digestive Organs, Kidneys, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from Impurities of the Blood, we boldly state that this great remedy has NEVER BEEN EQUALLED. Where was there ever such a cure as that in the person of Wilson Storms, of Brighton, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Peter C. V. Miller, of Kranestown, Ontario, of Consumption; or that of Ambrose Wood of Canseeon, Ontario, of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint; or that of John Hosey, of Napanee, Ontario, of Rheumatism, who had actually been on crutches for years, in spite of all treatment heretofore, and is now well. Scores of such cases might be mentioned had we space.

Price of Remedy in large pints $1.00.

☞ For sale by all Druggists and Dealers in Medicine Agents for Peterborough—Messrs. Kempt, Gilmour, Coulter, Ormond & Walsh, Ontario Drug Store and Dr. Bell.

CONSUMPTION!

IN CANADA.

MESSRS YOUNG & CHAMBERLAIN,—Sirs,—I feel it a duty I owe to you, as well as to the public, to inform you of the most wonderful cure of consumption, accomplished in my person, by the use of the Great Shoshonees Remedy and Pills. I coughed a great deal day and night, expectorating great quantities of matter, and had a great pain about my left lung. I had cold chills every day, and severe night sweats every night, and between the racking cough and great sweating, I was almost deprived of sleep; by these miseries as well as the loss of appetite, I was so reduced that I could hardly stand alone I was under the care of a physician for a length of time, but finding no relief, I tried different receipes, but all without any good effect. Squire Peterson of Bath, recommended me to use the Great Shoshonees Remedy; I procured three bottle, at once, with the Pills; so soon as I commenced using it I began to get better, and when I had finished this complement, the cough, expectoration of matter, pain about the lung, chills sweating, &c., left me; and by continuing its use I became strong and healthy. It is now over two months since I quit the remedy, and there have been no symptoms of the disease returning, and I have been, and am now, healthier and better than I have been for many years. I trust you will make this known to the public, that they may be aware of the peculiar virtues of this truly wonderful Indian Remedy.

PETER C. V. MILLER,
Earnestown, Co. of Lennox & Addington.

To all to whom it may come.—This is to certify, that I have been acquainted with the above mentioned gentleman, Peter C. V. Miller, Esq., for many years, and have known him always to be of the very highest respectability, and a very candid and creditable person, and I am confident that I can safely vouch for the truth of the above, or any other statement made by him.

North Monaghan, Nov. 4, 1868. 45

Kick Him when He's Down.

When the sun of prosperity is shining,
And a man's growing richer each day—
When in ease and in comfort reclining,
And golden success crowns his way—
Then if friends should happen to frown,
How quickly he'll get the "cold shoulder,"
And be "kicked because he is down!"

How kindly the world will smile on him
When life with successes abound;
How cordially, blandly 'twill greet him
As in pleasure he's riding around!
But then let reverses o'er take him,
And his friends both in country and town
Have not a kind sentence to cheer him,
But will "kick him as soon as he's down."

Let a man get position or wealth,
Matter's not—if by intrigue or fraud—
The world nods approvingly at him
And his acts it will loudly applaud.
What though he may be a great villain?
With the simple, the wise and the clown,
While he's up he's a "tip-top good fellow,"
But they'll "kick him if ever he's down."

When a man has plenty of "greenbacks,"
And he's healthy and festive and gay,
He's counted a "hully good chiel," then,
And the crowd approves all he may say;
But just let him lose all his treasures,
Perchance, too, his health may be gone,
He'll get to be nobody quickly,
And sure to be "kicked when he's down."

Oh! when will mankind be less selfish?
I wonder if 'twill ever be thus;
That we'll love to do to each other,
As we would have them do unto us;
And if in "adversity's ocean"
We are sinking and ready to drown,
Thrice blessed be the friend whose devotion
Will help a man up when he's down.

Mrs. Snapp on the Rights of the Body.

The individual who wrote that paragraph on "Man's Shortcomings," in the eight number of HEARTH AND HOME, is a shabby fellow, whoever he is. It's all very well to be jocose; but to suggest that a rational being ought to be "able to jump from New-York to China at a single bound" is, in my opinion, carrying things entirely too far. "If he had proportionally the jumping powers of a flea," forsooth!—stuff and nonsense! A man never was intended to be like a flea in any respect. If you put your finger on him, is he not there?—unless he owes you money, which, of course, alters the case—and if he bites you, can you not bite back?

It is one of the growing evils of the age—this speaking so lightly of the noble human creature. I cannot express the indignation with which I read yesterday the following precious item, in a recent paper, by one of our most eminent scientific writers.

"If a man, weighing one hundred and forty pounds, were squeezed in a hydraulic-press, seventy pounds of water would run out, the balance being solid matter. A man is, chemically speaking, forty-five pounds of carbon and other elements, with nitrogen diffused through five and a half pailfuls of water."

Think of that! There's a pretty bit of information to introduce into the sanctity of home, to pour into the ears of growing boys and girls! Where would Mr. Snapp's dignity be, I'd like to know, if the children understood that he was only "half and half," like his favorite beverage? What if, after he had delivered a few impressive words of paternal rebuke and counsel to the children, I should say to them: "Don't mind your father my dears; he's only a little carbon, nitrogen, and other elements, diffused through five and a half pailfuls of water!" A pretty state of things we should have after that!

No, Mr. Editor—or rather Mr. and Mrs. Editors—of HEARTH AND HOME, this sort of thing won't do. You must respect the body, and teach your readers to do likewise. It's the best material thing that Heaven has made yet; and I don't believe it's going to be excelled in this world.

Respect the body, dear men and women! speak of it reverently, as it deserves.—Don't take it into unworthy places; give it sunshine, pure air, and exercise. Be conscientious as to what you put down its throat. Remember what is fun to the cook and confectionery trades may be death to it. Give it good, wholesome food, let it be on intimate terms with friction and soap and water; and, especially, don't render it ridiculous by your way of dressing it.

Recognize the dignity of the body; hold it erect when you're awake, and let it be out straight when you're asleep. Don't let it go through the world with little mincing steps nor great gawky strides; don't swing its arms too much, and don't let them grow limp from inactivity. Resolve to respect its shoulders, its back, and its fair proportions generally, and straightway shall "stoops," and "wriggles," and "grecian bends" be unknown forever.

Respect the body—give it what it requires and no more. Don't pierce its ears, strain its eyes, or pinch its feet; don't roast it by a hot fire all day, and smother it under heavy bed-covering all night; don't put it in a cold draught on slight occasions, and don't nurse or pet it to death; don't dose it with doctor's stues, and, above all don't turn it into a wine-cask or a chimney. Let it be "warranted not to smoke" from the time your manhood takes possession.—

Respect the body, don't over-work, overtest, or over-love it, and never debase it. but be able to lay it down when you are done with it a well-worn but not a mussed thing. Meantime, treat it at least as well as you would your pet horse or hound, and, my word for it, though it will not jump to China at a bound you'll find it a most excellent thing to have—especially in the country.

Some idea of the magnitude of the temperance movement may be gleaned from a bit of statistics of membership of the different organizations;—Sons of Temperance, 400,000; Good Templars 500,000; Father Matthew Societies, 500,000; Temple of Honor, 300,000; Good Samaritans, 500,000; Cadets of Temperance Societies, 400,000 Total, 2,450,000.

Men and women make their own beauty or their own ugliness. On our features the fine chisels of thought and emotion are eternally at work. Beauty is not the monopoly of blooming young men and of pink and white maids. There is a slow growth beauty which only comes to perfection in old age. Grace belongs to no period of life, and improves the longer it exists.

To keep lemons moist for weeks in warm weather cover with buttermilk or sour milk. I have lemons fresh and nice for lemonade, one year old, that I slice into a can and cover with plenty of white sugar. If one is sick in winter they are very nice.

The Methodist church of Saratoga has resolved to censure any member who may sign an application for a liquor license.

MANNERS AT TABLE.

Some little folks are not polite, at their meals. The following humorous lines suggest practical comprehensive, simple and directly to the point, we take pleasure in placing them conspicuously before our young readers:

In silence I must take my seat,
And give God the thanks before I eat;
Must for my food in patience wait
Till I am asked to hand by plate;
I must not scold, nor whine nor pout,
Nor move my chair or plate about:
With knife, or fork, or napkin fling
I must not play—nor must I sing:
I must not speak a word less kind—
Nor children must be seen—and heard,
I must not talk about my food,
Nor eat if I don't think it good;
My mouth with food I must not crowd,
Nor while I'm eating speak aloud:
Must turn my head to cough or sneeze,
And when I ask, say, "If you please:"
The table cloth I must not spoil,
Nor with my food my fingers soil;
Must keep my seat when I have done,
Nor round the table sport or run
When told to rise then I must put
My chair away with noiseless foot,
And lift my heart to God above,
In praise for all His wondrous love.

Reasons Why Fruit-Trees are Barren.

We promised, in our last paper, to give the reasons why fruit-trees are barren, as stated by Dr. E. S. Holt, in his Industrial University Lecture at Champaign, Ill. He said:

"To understand this, we must refer to the tree's action in growth. Trees that expend all their forces in the production of wood-growth can produce little or no fruit. Indeed, it is not possible for any tree to perfect a fruit-germ, and not again, in some way, disorganize it, unless the wood-growth shall cease in time for the leaves to elaborate food enough to grow both leaf and fruit the following year, or until a part of the leaves shall attain to nearly or quite their full size.

"That this is so will be apparent when we consider that the leaves which first appear in the spring were formed in the buds the previous year, perfect in all their parts, and in the embryo state contained each individual cell found in them when fully grown.

"But, we are asked, if there is no addition to the number of cells, how do the leaves grow?

"The answer is, that the only difference we can see between an embryo leaf and one fully grown is in the size of the leaf-cells.

"As growth begins in the spring, these small cells, which were formed in the previous year begin to expand. Each individual cell thus enlarges, until the whole of the numerous cells of which the leaves are composed are of full size.

"To further illustrate this, let us suppose, in a brick wall, that each brick at the same time was gradually to expand to several hundred times its present diameter, and you have just what takes place in the growth of an embryo leaf.

"Here we find the tree in possession of a full-grown leaf. This leaf did not form itself, but was formed by the tree in the preceding year. To produce and sustain this cellular enlargement, there had been stored the previous year a large share of nutriment in the buds and in other parts of the tree.—This nutriment or plant food must not only be sufficient to feed the embryo leaves, but must also be sufficient to produce the small, watery excrescences—the rootlets and spongioles. These new leaves and spongioles are the tree's laboratory. And these leaves and spongioles first grown were made, with the exception of moisture, wholly out of the materials that were stored by the tree during the growth of the previous year.

"When these vegetable stores are in sufficient supply to this, and nourish the fruit-germs also, then we hear little about imperfect fertilization.

"On the other hand, had the food been consumed the previous year, by ripening an over crop of fruit, or by making a very succulent growth, then the tree would not store a sufficient amount of plant food to perform its three-fold office in the production of leaves, roots with their spongioles, and fruit.

"In this condition, a part of the leaf, and a larger part or all of the fruit buds yield up their nutri-bident, which goes to the production of root and leaf growth.

"The tree, therefore, is barren of fruit for the summer, its whole growth being required to recuperate the vigor of the tree. Such trees often bloom freely, and then cast their bloom. When this occurs, uninformed persons often attribute it to a want of fertilization, or suppose that the rain must have washed away the pollen.—Hearth and Home

CURE FOR A FELON.

When Augustus was opening a box containing raisins the other day, he gave his thumb a sharp rap with the hammer. The pain resulting from the blow was not very severe at the time, but it increased, until the next day he felt sure that the bone must have been bruised, and a felon was coming. As he has been thus twice afflicted, he had good reason to shrink from the suffering awaiting him. Happening to be in at Mr. Pride's store, I mentioned the circumstance while talking with old Mr. Mix, who had come in with a load of produce to exchange for groceries. "Felon is it, you think?" said he. "Well, I can give you a recipe that'll kill it outright, and you won't hear nothin' more from it. You jist take some of this 'ere common rock salt, sich as you use for saltin' down pork and beef, dry it in the oven, then pound it fine, and mix it with sperits of turpentine, in equal parts. Put it on a rag, and wrap it round the thumb, and as soon as ever it gits dry put on some more, and in twenty four hours the felon 'll be as dead as a door nail."

On my return home, I found Augustus walking the floor in great pain with his disabled hand, and ready for anything that promised relief. We got the salt and turpentine and followed the directions minutely. About one o'clock in the night he got to sleep, and when he wakened late in the morning, not only the pain was gone, but all feeling had gone with it. The first joint of his thumb seemed perfectly dead so far as sensation was concerned. He still kept applying the remedy, and by degrees feeling returned, until in a day or two his hand was entirely recovered. We have double reason now to remember Mr. Mix with kindness—His recipe for stove-lining has proven itself as good as that for a felon.—Ibid.

YEAST FOR WARM WEATHER.—Boil, say on Monday morning, two ounces of good hops in four quarts of water, for half an hour; strain, and let the liquor cool down to the warmth of new milk, then add a small handful of salt and half a pound of sugar. Beat up one pound of good flour with some of the liquor and mix up well together. On Wednesday, add three pounds of potatoes boiled and mashed. Let the mixture stand till Thursday, then strain and bottle for use.

While making, it must be kept warm and stirred frequently. Always shake the bottle well before using it.

TO RAISE FRUIT EVERY YEAR.—As soon as the winter sufficiently disappears, and before the sap ascends, all the dead limbs should be chopped off, and the branches on which are no blossoms cut away, and also the extremity of every branch having many buds on its lower part. The sap is thus concentrated upon the maturation of the first seeds of fruit, while the tree is not injured. Of course all other precautions should be attended to, such as cutting out worms from the roots and placing iron on the limbs, which acts as a tonic to the sap, etc.

THE GRECIAN BEND.—For the benefit of lady readers who have just commenced to practice the Grecian Bend, we append the following:—

Throw up the chin and out the chest,
Assume the form of the letter S!
Like a kangaroo your arms extend,
And then you'll have the Grecian Bend.

Paddy's description of a fiddle is as follows. It was the shape of a turkey, and the size of a goose; he turned it over on its back, and rubbed its belly with a stick, and ooh, St. Patrick! how it did squale?'

A mischievous girl being bothered by a number of lovers, has invited them to a public velocipede race—the winner to win her.

CHARMING WOMEN.

(Saturday Review.)

The charming woman is generally notoriously in love with her husband, who is almost always inferior to her in birth, acquirement, manner, or appearance. This affection of hers only shows her feminine qualities of meekness and wifely devotion to greater advantage, and makes other men envy more ferociously the lucky fellow who has drawn such a prize. The husband of a charming woman is indeed lucky in the world's esteem; so man more so. Though he may be one of the most ordinary, perhaps unpleasant, fellows you know, with a sour face, an underbred air, and by no means famous in his special sphere, his wife speaks of him enthusiastically as so good, so clever, so delightful; no one knows how good he is, she says, though of course he has his little peculiarities of temper, and the rest of it, and perhaps every one would not bear with them as she does. But then she knows him, and knows his wonderful worth and value! If they are not seen much together, that comes from causes over which they have no control, not from anything like disinclination to each other's society. Certainly, for so happy a marriage, it is a little surprising how very seldom they are together; and how all her friends are hers only, and not his; and how much she goes into society without him. On the whole, counting hours, they live very much more apart than united; but that is the misfortune of his career, of his health, or of hers—a misfortune due to any cause but that of diversity of tastes and inharmonious-ness of pursuits. Full of home affection and the tenderest sentiment as she is, the charming woman does sometimes the oddest-looking things, which a rough little domestic creature without graceful pretensions would not dream of doing. Her child is lying dangerously ill, perhaps dying, and she appears at the grand ball of the season, subdued certainly—how well that sweet melancholy becomes her!—but always graceful, always thoughtful for others, and attentive; and though indeed, she will tell you, she does not know how she got dressed at all, she is in such a state of cruel anxiety, yet she is undeniably the best-dressed woman in the room, and the most carefully appointed.—It is against her own will that she is there, you may be sure, but she has been forced to sacrifice herself, and tear herself away for an hour. The exigencies of society are so merciless—the world is such a terrible Juggernaut, she says, raising her eyes with plaintive earnestness to yours in the breathing times of the waltz.

The charming woman is the gentlest of her sex. She would not do a cruel thing nor say an unkind word for the world. When she tells you the unpleasant things which ill-natured people have said of your friends or hers, she tells them in the sweetest and dearest way imaginable. She is so sure there is not a syllable of truth in it all; and what a shame it is that people should be so ill-natured! In the gentle tone of sympathy and deprecation peculiar to her, she gives you all the ugly and uncomfortable reports that have come to her, of which you have never heard a breath until this moment; yet it is you who are stupid, for she tells them to you as if they were of patent notoriety to the whole world; only she does not believe them, remember! She takes the most scrupulous care to deny and defend as she retails, and you cannot class her with the tribe of the ill-natured whom she censures, setting, as she does, the whole strength of her gentle words and generous disbelief to oppose these ugly rumours. Yet you wish she had not told you. Her disclaimers spring so evidently from the affectionate amiability of her own mind which cannot bear to think evil, that they have not much effect upon you. The excuse dies away from your memory, but the ill-savoured report roots, and you feel that you have lost your respect for your former friends for ever; or, if they were only hers, that nothing should tempt you to know them. There is no smoke without some fire, you think; and the charming woman cannot possibly have kindled the flame herself out of sticks and leaves and rubbish of her own collecting. But how sweet and charitable she was when she told you! how much you love her tenderness of nature! what a guileless and delightful creature she is!

The charming woman is kind and graceful, but she does not command the stronger virtues. She flatters sweetly, but, it must be confessed, she fibs as sweetly. She sometimes owns to this, but only to fibs that do more good than harm—fibs into which she is forced for the sake of peace, and to avoid mischief. It is a feminine privilege, promising, stern-faced truth, is coarse and indelicate, she says; a masculine quality as little fitted for women as courage or great bodily strength. Her husband knows that she fibs; her friends at times find her out too; but though the women throw it at her as an accusation, the men accept it as a quality without which she would be less the charming woman that she is; and not only forgive it, but like her the better for the grace and tact and suppleness she displays in the process of manufacture. Hers are not the severer virtues, but the gentler, the more insinuating; and absolute truth—truth at any price and on all occasions—does not come into the list. Charming women, with their plastic manners and non-aggressive force, always have their own way in the end. They are the women who influence by unseen methods, and who shrink from any open display of power. They know that their métier is to soothe men, to put them on good terms with themselves and so to get the benefit of the good humour they induce; and they dread nothing so much as a contest of wills. They coax and flatter for their rights, and consequently they are given privileges in excess of their rights whereas the women who take their rights, as things to which they are entitled without favour, lose them and their privileges together. The art of self-abasement for future exaltation is one which it is given only to a few to carry to perfection, but no woman is really charming without it. In fact, it is part of her power; and she knows it. Though charming women are decidedly the favourites with men, they are careful to keep on good terms with their own sex; and in society you may often see them almost ostentatiously surrounded by women only, whom they take pains to please, or exert themselves to amuse, but whom they throw into the shade in the most astonishing way.

Whatever these really charming women are, or do, or wear, is exactly the right thing: and every other woman fails in proportion of the distance she is removed from this model. If a charming woman is dressed richly, the simpler costumes of her friends look poor and mean; if she is a la bergere, the Court dresses about her are vulgar; if she is gay, quietness is dulness; if she is quiet, laughter is coarse. And there is no use in imitating her. She is the very will-o'-the-wisp of her circle, and so soon as shows her light here than she flits away there; she has no sooner set one fashion, which her admiring friends have adopted with infinite pains and trouble, than she has struck out a new one, which renders all the previous labour in vain. This is part of her very essence; and the originality which is simply perfection that cannot be repeated, and not eccentricity that no one will imitate, seems to us one of the finest and most potent of her charms.

Warmth from the Stars.

Express.

It would scarcely be thought by most persons that the stars supply the earth with an appreciable amount of heat. Even on the darkest and clearest night, when the whole heavens seem lit up by a multitude of sparkling orbs, the idea of heat is not suggested by their grandeur. It will, therefore, seem surprising to many that men of science should assign no inconsiderable portion of our terrestrial heat-supply to these distant twinkling lamps. It is not many years since Professor Hopkins, of Cambridge, went even farther, and expressed his belief that if the earth's atmosphere were but increased some 13,000 yards in height, so as to have an increased power of retaining the warmth poured upon it from outer space, we might do without the sun altogether so far as our heat-supply is concerned. As a glass house collects the sun's heat, and renders it available during the time that the sun is below the horizon, so he held that the additional layer of air would serve to garner the warmth of the stars in quantities sufficient for all our requirements.

But until lately all these views, however plausible they might have seemed, had not been founded upon facts actually observed. It has been reserved for these days in which discoveries of the most unexpected kind are daily rewarding the labours of our physicists, to see that established as a certainty which had before been founded merely upon considerations of probability. Mr. Huggins, the physicists and astronomer, has just published the results of a series of inquiries addressed to the actual measurement of the heat which we receive from the leading brilliants of the nocturnal sky. The instrument called the galvanometer, which has been made more or less familiar to many of us by the researches and lectures of Mr. Tyndal, was made use of by Mr. Huggins in these investigations. We need not consider the construction of this instrument, or the manner in which heat acts upon it through the agency of what is called the thermo-electric pile; all that is necessary to be known is the fact that the qualities of the instrument as a measurer of delicate heat effects, are thoroughly established, so that no doubt can exist as to the significance of its indications. The instrument was fixed to Mr. Huggins's large refractor, so that the image of a star formed by the object-glass might fall upon the sensitive face of the thermopile. It will give some token of the sort to mention that the apparatus had to be left attached to the telescope for hours, sometimes for days, until the needle whose motions mark the action of heat had come to perfect rest. When the time came for making an observation, the shutter of the dome which covers the telescope was opened, and the telescope was turned upon a part of the sky near to some bright star, but not actually upon the star. Then the needle was watched to determine whether the change of position had produced any effect. For clearly it is necessary, in a case of this sort, to see that no cause except the one to be examined is exercising any influence. If, in four or five minutes, no signs of chan e were shown, the telescope was moved over the small distance necessary to bring the image of the star directly on the face of the pile.—Almost always the needle began to move as soon as the image of the star fell upon it. The telescope was then moved slightly away again from the star; the needle was then seen to return to its place. In this way, from twelve to twenty observations would be made upon the same star, so that no doubt might remain as to the motion of the needle being really due to the star's heat.

In this way it was found that the bright Arcturus moved the needle three degrees in about a quarter of an hour. So did Regulus, the leading brilliant of Leo, the constellation at present adorned by the splendour of ruddy Mars. Pollux gave a deflection of 1½ degree; but, singularly enough, his twin brother Castor produced no effect at all upon the needle. The splendid Sirius gave a deflection of only two degrees; but as this star is always low down, and so shines through a greater proportion of the denser atmospheric strata, it is not surprising that its heat should not be proportioned to its brilliancy.

These inquiries are singularly interesting the more so when we remember that the full moon, which outshines so many fold the stellar glories of the heavens, gives us either no warmth whatever, or so little that no experiments have ever certified us that we receive any from her. Mr. Huggins has tried the moon with his powerful galvanometer, with results which are not by any means satisfactory or accordant, but which are sufficient to show that we receive scarcely a trace of heat from the pale-faced orb.

DESTROYING STUMPS.—The Baltimore Leader suggests the following method for getting rid of stumps without making a large hole in the ground:—"We have heard of two methods of getting rid of stumps, which, as they appear feasible and inexpensive we hope some reader will try and report upon. Bore with a two-inch augur to the heart of the stump; fill the cavity thus made with sulphuric acid, or with crude oil of petroleum. In the first case, the acid becomes the destructive agent within a few months; in the latter, when the stump becomes saturated with the oil, it is fired, and will then burn out to the last particle, like a candle."

THE BLOOM OF AGE.—When we look upon a good woman we never think of her age: she looks as charming as when the rose of youth first bloomed upon her cheek. Who does not love and respect the woman who has passed her days in acts of kindness and mercy? She will always be fresh and buoyant in spirits, and active in humble deeds of mercy and benevolence. If the young lady desires to retain the bloom and beauty of youth let her not yield to the sway of fashion or folly. Let her love truth and virtue; and to the close of life she will retain those feelings which shall make life appear a garden of sweets—ever fresh and ever new.

A late Catholic bishop of New York said to a friend:—"I have found that the laboring classes under my charge in the city of New York pay for drams alone at the grog shops $1,250,000 annually.—Money saved to the Irish in New York and converted into comfortable dwellings, better clothing, better education to their children, would soon elevate them to a condition and respectability which would do honor to the country of their adoption.

To beautify the teeth, dissolve two ounces of borax in three pounds of boiling water, and before it is cold add one teaspoon full of spirits of camphor, and bottle for use. A tablespoon full of this mixture with an equal quantity of tepid water, applied daily with a soft brush, give the teeth a beautiful appearance and arrest decay.

Poetry.

A VOICE FROM HEAVEN.

I shine in the light of God,
His likeness stamps my brow;
Through the shadows of death my feet have trod,
And I reign in glory now!

No breaking heart is here,
No keen and thrilling pain,
No wasted cheek, where the frequent tear
Hath rolled and left its stain.

I have found the joys of heaven,
I am one of the angel band,
To my mend a crown of gold is given,
And a harp is in my hand.

I have learned the song they sing,
Whom Jesus hath set free,
And the glorious walls of heaven still ring
With my new-born melody!

No sin, no grief, no pain!
Safe in my happy home!
My fears all fled, my doubts all slain,
My hour of triumph come!

O friends of mortal years,
The trusted and the true!
Ye are walking still in the vale of tears,
But I wait to welcome you.

Do I forget? Oh no!
For memory a golden chain
Shall bind my heart to the hearts below,
Till they meet to touch again.

Each link is strong and bright,
And love's electric flame
Flows freely down like a river of light,
To the world from which I came.

Do you mourn when another star
Shines out from the glittering sky?
Do you weep when the raging voice of war
And the storms of conflict die?

Then, why should your tears run down,
And your hearts be sorely riven,
For another gem in the Saviour's crown,
And another soul in heaven!

Selections.

EDUCATION IN ENGLAND.

ADDRESS OF THE HISTORIAN FROUDE.

Dr. Froude, the historian, was installed Rector of St. Andrews University, on the 19th ult., on which occasion he delivered a long address on education. In introducing his subject, he said:—

"I am addressing the successors of that remote generation of students whom Knox 'called round him' in the yard of this very college, 'and exhorted them,' as James Melville tells, 'to know God and stand by the good cause, and use their time well.'—It will be happy for me, if I, too, can read a few words out of the same lesson book; for to make us know our duty and do it, to make us upright in act and true in thought and word, is the aim of all instruction which deserves the name. It has become a cant now-a-days to make a parade of noble intentions; but when we pass beyond the verbal propositions our guides fail us, and we are left to grope our way to guess it as we can." He proceeded: "We will consider the stock-in-trade the moral and mental furniture upon which you will start upon your journey. In the first place you are Scots; you come of a fine stock, and much will be expected of you. If we except the Athenians and the Jews, no people so few in numbers have scored so deep a mark in the world's history as you have done. No people have a juster right to be proud of their blood. I suppose if any one of you were asked whether he would prefer to be the son of a Scotch peasant or to be the heir of an Indian Rajah with twenty lacs of rupees, he would not hesitate about his answer. We should none of us object to the rupees, but I doubt if the Scot ever breathed, who would have sold his birthright for them. Well, then, Noblesse oblige; all blood is noble here, and a noble life should go along with it. It is not for nothing that you here and we in England come, both of us of our respective races; we inherit honourable traditions and memories; we inherit qualities inherent in our home and blood, which have been earned for us, no thanks to ourselves, by twenty generations of ancestors; our fortunes are now linked together for good and evil, never more to be divided; but when we examine our several contributions to the common stock the account is more in your favor than ours. More than once you have saved English Protestantism; you may have to save it again for all I know, at the rate at which our English parsons are now running. You gave us the Stuarts, but you helped us to get rid of them. Even now you are teaching us what, unless we saw it before our eyes, no Englishman would believe to be possible—a member of Parliament can be elected without bribery. For shrewdness of head, thoroughgoing completeness, contempt of promise, and moral backbone, no set of people were ever started into life more generously provided.—You did not make these things, it takes many generations to breed high qualities of either mind or body; but you have them; they are a fine capital to commence business with, and, as I said, noblesse oblige. Passing to the second portion of their equipment, education, there was, he said, no occasion to tell a Scotchman to value it.—On this, too they had set an example which England was beginning to imitate. He only wished their prejudices and jealousies would let them imitate it thoroughly. In the form of their education there was little to be desired. It was fair all round to poor and rich alike. They had broken down the enormous barrier of expense, which makes the highest education in England the appendage of the wealthy. Whether the subjects to which the best years of boyhood and youth continued to be given were the best in the matter, were questions all the world was busy with. I have long thought, he said, that to educate successfully you should first ascertain clearly what you mean by an educated man. Now, our ancestors, whatever their other shortcomings, understood what they meant well. In their education they knew what they wanted to produce and they suited their means to their ends. They set out with the principle that every child should be taught his duty to God and man. The majority of people have to live by bodily labour; therefore every boy was as convenient set to labour. Besides this, you had in Scotland, established by Knox, your parish schools, where he was taught to read, and if he showed special talent, was trained for the ministry. But neither Knox nor any one in those days thought of what we call enlarging the mind. A boy was taught reading, that he might read the bible and learn to fear God and be ashamed to do wrong. The essential thing was that every one that was willing to work should be enabled to maintain himself and his family in independence. If you require much you must produce much. If you produce little you must require little. Those whose studies added nothing to the material wealth of the world were taught to be content to be poor.—The thirty thousand students who gathered out of Europe to Paris to listen to Abelard did not travel in carriages, and brought no portmanteaus with them. They carried their wardrobes on their backs,—walked from Paris to Padua, from Padua to Salamanca, and begged their way along the roads. The laws of mendicancy were suspended in favour of scholars wandering in pursuit of knowledge. At college the scholar's fare was the hardest, his lodging was the barest. If rich in mind, he was expected to be poor in body; and so deeply was this theory grafted into English feeling, that earls and dukes, when they began to frequent universities, shared the common simplicity. The furniture of a noble earl's room at an English university at present may cost, including the pictures of opera-dancers and racehorses, perhaps £500.—When the magnificent Earl of Essex was sent to Cambridge in Elizabeth's time, his guardians provided him with a deal table covered with green baize a truckle bed, half a dozen of chairs, and a wash hand basin. The cost was £5. The scholar was held in high honor, but his contributions to the common wealth were not appreciable in money. He went without what he could not produce that he might keep his independence and self-respect unharmed. Neither scholarship nor science starved under this treatment; more noble souls have been smothered in luxury than were ever killed by hunger. A young man going to Oxford learns the same things which were taught there two centuries ago: but, unlike the old scholars, he learns no lessons of poverty along with it. In his three years' course he will have tasted luxuries unknown to him at home, and contracted habits of self-indulgence which make subsequent hardship unbearable, while his antiquate knowledge has fallen out of the market. There is no demand for him; he is not sustained by the respect of the world, which finds him ignorant of everything in which it is interested. He is called educated; yet, if circumstances throw him on his own resources, he cannot earn a sixpence. An Oxford education fits a man well for the trade of a gentleman. I do not know for what other trade it does fit him as at present constituted. More than one man who has taken high honours there, who has learnt faithfully all that the University undertakes to teach him, has been seen in these late years breaking stones in Australia. That was all which he was found to be fit for when brought in connection with the realities of things. There are but three ways of living, by working, by begging, by stealing. Those who do not work, are doing one of the other two. The practical necessities must take precedence of the intellectual. A tree must be rooted in the soil before it can bear flowers or fruit. A man must learn to stand upright upon his feet, to respect himself, to be independent of charity or accident. It is on this on this basis only any superstructure of intellectual cultivation worth having can possibly be built. The old apprenticeship therefore, was in my opinion, an excellent system. The Ten Commandments and a handicraft made a wholesome equipment to commence life with. The apprentice plan broke down—partly because it was abused for purposes of tyranny, partly because employers did not care to be burdened with boys whose labor was unprofitable, partly because it opened no road for unexceptionably clever lads to rise into higher positions. Yet the original necessities remain unchanged. The Ten Commandments are as obligatory as ever, and practical ability—the being able to do something, and not merely to answer questions—must still be the back bone of the education of every boy who has to earn his bread. Add knowledge afterwards as much as you will, but let it be knowledge which will lead to the doing better each particular work which a boy is practising, and every fraction of it will thus be useful to him; and if he has it in him to rise, there is no fear but he will find an opportunity. Take the most unskilled labor of all—that of the peasant in the field.—The peasant's business is to make the earth grow food; the elementary rules of his art are the simplest, and the rude practice of the easiest; yet between the worst agriculture and the best lies agricultural chemistry, the application of machinery, the laws of the economy of force, and the most curious problems of the physiology. Each step of knowledge gained in these things can be immediately applied and realized. Each point of the science which the laborer masters will make him not only a wiser man, but a better workman, and will either lift him to a higher position, or make him more intelligent and more valuable if he remains where he is. He may go far, or he may stop short, but, whichever he do, what he has gained will be real gain, and become part and parcel of himself. It sounds like mockery to talk thus of the possible prospects of the toilworn drudge who drags his limbs at the day's end to his straw pallet, sleeps heavily and wakes only to renew the weary round. I am but computing the systems of education, from each of which the expected results may be equally extravagant. The millions must ever be condemned to toil or the race will cease to exist."

Dr. Froude is hard upon the country. He says:—

"We have had thirty years of unexampled clerical activity; churches have been doubled; theological books, magazines, reviews, newspapers have been poured out by hundreds of thousands, while by the side of it there has sprung up an equally astonishing development of moral dishonesty. From the great houses in London to the village grocer, the commercial life at England has been tainted with fraud. So deep has it gone that a strictly honest tradesman can hardly hold the ground. You can no longer trust that any article that you buy is the thing which pretends to be. We have false weights, false measures, cheating, and shoddy everywhere. Yet the clergy have seen all this in absolute indifference; and the great question which at the moment is agitating the Church of England is the color of ecclesiastical petticoats. Many a hundred sermons have I heard, many a dissertation on the mysteries of the faith on the divine mission of the clergy, on apostolical succession, on baptism, on justification, and the theory of good works, and verbal inspiration, and the efficacy of the sacraments, but during these thirty wonderful years, never one that I can recollect on common honesty nor those primitive commandments—thou shalt not lie, and thou shalt not steal. Clement philosophy, classical history, and literature, taking as they do no hold upon the living hearts and and imaginations of men in this modern age, leave their working intelligence a prey to vile imaginations and make them really incapable of understanding the world in which they live. If the clergy knew as much of the history of England and Scotland as they know about Greece and Rome—if they had been ever taught to open their eyes and see what is actually around them, instead of groping among Books to find what most did or taught at Alexandria or Constantinople fifteen hundred years ago, they would grapple more effectively with the moral pestilence which is poisoning the air. But it was not this that I came here to speak of. What I insist upon is, generally, that in a country like ours, where each child that is born among us finds every acre of land appropriated, a universal "Not yours" put upon the rich things with which he is surrounded, and a government which, unlike those of old Greece or modern China, does not permit superfluous babies to be strangled—such a child, I say, has a right to demand such teaching as shall enable him to live with honesty, and take such a place in society as belongs to the faculties which he has brought with him. It is a right which was recognized in one shape or another by our ancestors. It must be recognized now and always, if we are not to become a mutinous rabble; and it ought to be the guiding principle of all education. We have not to look any longer to this island only. There is an abiding place now for Englishmen and Scots wherever our flag is flying. This narrow Britain, has become the breeding-place and nursery of a race which is spreading over the world, Britain may have yet a future before it greater than its past; but on this condition only—that her children when they leave her shores, shall look upon her, not—like the poor Irish when they go to America—as a stepmother who gave them stones for bread, but as a mother to whose care and nurture they shall owe their after prosperity. Whether this shall be so, whether England will now descend to a second place among the nations, or whether it has yet before it another era of brighter glory, depends more than anything on the breeding which we give our children. The boy that is kindly nurtured and wisely taught, does not forget his father and his mother. He is proud of his family and jealous for the honour of the name that he bears. If the million lads that swarm in our towns and villages are so trained at home or in the colonies, they can provide for themselves, without passing first through a painful interval of suffering, they will be loyal wherever they may be; good citizens at home, and still Englishmen and Scots on the Canadian lakes or in New Zealand. It was not so when we colonized America, and we are reaping now the reward of our carelessness. We sent America our convicts. We sent America our Pilgrim Fathers, flinging them out as worse than felons. We said to the Irish cotter, "you are a burden upon our rates; go find a home elsewhere." Had we offered him a home in the enormous territories that belong to us, we might have sent him to places where he would have been not a burden, but a blessing. Loyalty, love of kindred, love of country, we know not what we are doing when we trifle with feelings the most precious and beautiful that belong to us—most beautiful, most endearing, most hard to be obliterated—yet feelings which, when they are obliterated, cannot change to neutrality and cold friendship. Americans still, in spite of themselves, speak of England as home.

THE COURTEOUS HIGHWAYMAN.

Many years ago, the Duke of Montague was one night stopped by a highwayman at Finchley, and robbed of all he had about him. Among the spoil was an old family watch, which he much prized. He entreated the plunderer to return it to him, pleading the great value he set upon it as a family relic, and adding, "If you will name a price for it, and call on me to-morrow I will pay you for it." The highwayman, in the most courteous manner, returned it immediately; declaring himself incapable of depriving the Duke of so precious a relic, and promised to do himself the honor of calling upon him the next day. True to his appointment, he came; and the Duke, equally true to his word, at once paid him the promised sum. This business done, the Duke observed, "May I be allowed to ask you how you could venture to place yourself in my power, with the gallows as your sure doom?"—"Nay" replied the highwayman, "I knew that to be impossible; the Duke of Montague's honour was my sure guarantee." On wishing him good morning, the Duke, with his usual love of fun, asked him to dine with him in the afternoon. The invitation was accepted, and a large party asked to meet the man. Full of anecdote, and most polished in manner, all were enchanted with him. When his "hour of business arrived," he pleaded an engagement and withdrew. As soon as he was gone, the question at once arose, "Duke, who was that man—the most gentlemanlike and agreeable man we ever met?"—"I am sure I don't know," said the Duke; "all I know of him is, that he stopped me on Finchley Common last night, and robbed me of all I had about me."

The Americans are no longer the best customers of Great Britain. The inhabitants of the colonies consume nearly twice as much per head of British products as the Americans do. Last year, Germany took upwards of $5,000,000 worth more of British goods than the United States did. India alone, in 1868, took as large an amount of British goods as the American Union, such country taking about $105,000,000 worth per annum.

Girls should learn to keep House

No young lady can be too well instructed in anything which will affect the comfort of a family. Whatever position in society she occupies, she needs a practical knowledge of household duties. She may be placed in such circumstances that it will not be necessary for her to perform much domestic labor, but on the account she needs no less knowledge than if she was obliged to preside personally over the cooking stove and pantry. Indeed, I have thought it was more difficult to direct others and requires more experience, than to do the same work with our own hands.—Mothers are frequently so nice and particular that they do not like to give up any part of the care of their children. This is a great mistake in their management, for they are often burdened with labor, and need relief. Children should be early taught to make themselves useful; to assist their parents every way in their power, and to consider it a privilege to do so.

Young people cannot realize the importance of a thorough knowledge of housewifery; but those who have suffered the inconvenience and mortification of ignorance can well appreciate it. Children should be early indulged in their disposition to bake and experiment in various ways.—It is often but a troublesome help that they afford; still it is a great advantage to them. I knew a little girl who at nine years old made a loaf of bread every week during the winter. Her mother taught her how much yeast, salt and flour to use, and she became quite an expert baker. When she is disposed to try her skill in making simple pies or cakes, she is permitted to do so.—She is thus, while amusing herself, learning an important lesson. Her mother calls her little housekeeper, and often permits her to get what is necessary for the table. She hangs the keys by her side, and very musical is the jingling in her eyes. I think before she is out of her teens, upon which she has not yet entered, that she will have some idea how to cook.

Some mothers give their daughters the care of housekeeping, each a week by turns. It seems to me a good arrangement is the most useful part of their education. Domestic labor is by no means incompatible with the highest degree of refinement and mental culture. Many of the most elegant accomplished women I have known have looked well to their household duties, and have honored themselves and their husbands by so doing.

Economy, taste, skill in cooking, and neatness of the kitchen, have a great deal to do in making life happy and prosperous. The charm of good housekeeping is in the order, economy and taste displayed in attention to the little things and these things have a wonderful influence. A dirty kitchen and bad cooking have driven many a one from home to seek comfort and happiness somewhere else. None of our excellent girls are fit to be married until they are thoroughly educated in the deep and profound mysteries of the kitchen.—Presbyterian.

Many years ago an intelligent boy was sent to school with others of his age. But his teacher could not make him learn his letters, and flogged him again and again in old fashioned style. Still the boy could not or would not distinguish A from B, and he was finally given over as incorrigibly stupid. Yet he was bright enough in many things outside of books, and though he could not learn to read, he was not behind his mates in other knowledge that came within his power. It was not until he had attained his majority that, putting on a pair of spectacles from accidental curiosity, he discovered how the words and letters, which always before had appeared blurred, indistinct masses of a greyish color, looked separated and clear, and knew how it was that he had been flogged in childhood, and had never learned to read. He availed himself of his new knowledge with promptness; and is now a successful business man in Buffalo. Children are too often blamed and punished in cases when, if proper investigation was made, they would be found entirely innocent of any fault. The above incident recalls many similar ones which have come to our knowledge. Not long ago a lady remarked that, when a little girl, she was often reproved because her work was not thoroughly done. Her mother, wisely believing in the expediency of instructing her daughter in domestic duties, committed to her each morning, the care of certain rooms; but seldom were the sweeping and dusting performed well enough to suit the mother's critical eye.—She found crumbs on the floor, dust on the table, and cobwebs on the walls, where the child could find none. Of course she was often reproved—so often that she felt quite discouraged. Years afterwards, when she discovered for herself that nothing was plain and distinct to her vision a few feet distant from her eyes, she understood why it was that when a child, she could never see the specks of dirt that her mother's eye so quickly discerned.

POOR TRAY IN A NOVEL AND DISREPUTABLE BUSINESS.—New York thieves have in training a number of dogs for summer operations. They are taught by repeated endeavors to rush into a room and seize from a counter a parcel and quickly bring it to the master. Their counter is made to resemble those made in banks, and the parcel is covered with yellow paper, and made to look like the packages of bank-notes that are exchanged from one bank to another. The design is to take or send by a confederate one of these dogs to the door of a bank or broker's office, where a parcel or package of bank-notes is seen to be lying on the counter, and send him in. The trained animal darts in and seizes the valuables in his mouth and rushes out to the place where he expects to find his master.

A Maine man gives his method of treating healthy horses as follows. "Let me inform humane men and hostlers, and all who hold the rein, that the way to save healthy horses is to take them from the carriage and whirl them rapidly round till they are giddy. It requires two men to accomplish this, one at the horse's tail. Don't let him stop. Hold him to the smallest possible circle. One dose will often cure him; two doses are final with the worst horse that ever refused to stir.

The Natural Products of Red River.

Continuation of the Subject—All the Necessaries of Life—Mineral Paints to Abundance—Pottery and Pipe Clay in Great Quantities—Beds of Porcelain Earth—Natural Sulphate and Crystallized Alum—Granite Rock—Slate and Lime—Gold, Silver, Copper, Iron,—The True Gold, however, is to be Developed by the Plough and Axe.

(From the Nor' Wester, March 27th.)

In continuation of this subject we would state that nature has undoubtedly provided us with a beneficial store of metals and minerals suited to the wants of a populous nation. Even were our country a homogeneous waste—and God grant it may be in good time—it would be essential to its prosperity that many of its natural resources should not be confined to any one locality. For instance in the matter of coal, or iron, or salt, this land could never thrive if its people were obliged to transport them from the more distant parts of the Dominion or from abroad. We shall, of course depend upon the export Provinces and upon Ontario, and foreign countries for many things, but our especial welfare depends upon our ability to produce the essential necessities of civilized life among ourselves; and the very best of evidence shows that in good time we shall be able to do so.

In our last issue we treated upon our coal, asphaltum, plumbago, gypsum, and salt:—and we shall now advert to a few more of our mineral products before proceeding to a consideration of our metals.

We have good reason to believe that mineral paints will be found in abundance in the country north of the Saskatchewan.

The Company's posts upon the Peace river obtain a good quality of yellow ochre upon its banks which yields a colour resembling Venetian red and Spanish brown by burning. The Company wash their houses with the yellow ochre, and trim the window and door frames with the red; thus giving a neat and tidy appearance to the exterior of their buildings. Chromate of iron has been found upon the banks of the Copper-mine river. This mineral is especially valuable for the beautiful pigments it affords, and according to Sir John Richardson it is only found in primitive formations, and occurs more plentifully in America than elsewhere; and as a consequence, it may be looked for between Lake Winnipeg and the Province of Ontario. Potter's clay and pipe clay are found in great quantities upon the banks of the Mackenzie; and from their association with bitumen and coal, it may confidently be looked for in many portions of the territory to the south of that river. And in this place we may also mention that beds of the valuable kaolin or Porcelain earth have been observed upon the Mackenzie nineteen feet in thickness. We have seen it stated somewhere, but cannot now lay our hands upon the authority, that alum in a crystallized form has also been seen upon the Mackenzie. Sulphur is said to be produced upon the Smoky river in a natural state.—

The geological character of this territory has been pretty well ascertained by the various expeditions which have been sent through it for one purpose or another; still the information thus gathered has never been presented in a popular form.

Not more than two or three out of every hundred of persons have had either opportunity or time to pour over the reports of various expeditions to the territory, even were such works generally accessible, and besides, the scientific nomenclature, running so profusely through such works, renders the information they profess to give of little practical value to the masses of the people. If some person would condense those various reports, and translate many of the Greek and Latin names into good English, he would make a very readable and saleable work, and at the same time confer a great boon upon this country and the outside public. People would not then be mystified by such terms as Coregonus Albus for white fish, Anser Canadensis for the Canada goose, and Prunus Americanus for the common wild plum.

But to revert to our subject. The primitive formation of rocks extends from Ontario to the eastern shores of Lake Winnipeg, consisting of granite, gneiss, micaschist, greenstone, hornblende and slate, etc. This formation ceases abruptly upon Lake Winnipeg, and the lime and sandstone formations as abruptly commence upon its western banks and extend, as far as is known, to the base of the Rocky Mountains.

Upon that formation is situated those immense prairie districts which have hitherto gladdened the eyes of the traveller, but are destined to afford homes for millions of people. The limestone formation of this country belong to several distinct geological epochs; and in many places upon Lake Winnipeg afford a fine exhibition of strata to the practical geologist. They are all rich in lime, and will afford a supply of that useful article of commerce to the future settlements between this and Lake Superior. As a building material it is peculiarly excellent, and the bird's eye variety takes a fine polish, and is extremely ornamental when used as copings around windows, doors and cornices of buildings built with other kinds.

A number of quarries of this useful building material can be opened and worked to advantage in various parts of this settlement. Sandstone occurs at a place called Grindstone Point, on Lake Winnipeg, about 70 miles from the mouth of Red River, and can be quarried to any extent. Its transportation to the settlement will be easy enough by water.

Granite is just as abundant upon the eastern shore of the lake, and has hitherto been only used for millstones, supplying the most of the mills in the settlement.

The next subject in order is that of our metals. We have been asked, where is our nearest gold? and our answer is that we do not know. When we are the older Provinces opening out new fields almost every month, it is hard for us to state where gold may not be found in this country.—There is no metallic substance which is so universally diffused as gold. It seems capable of being found almost everywhere, and continually presents itself in the most unexpected localities. The matrix of natural source is supposed to be in the primitive rocks, unless it has been washed away in comminuted particles into subsequent formations by the floods and submergences of the various geological epochs. Paying diggings of fine gold have been found upon the Saskatchewan and its branches, but, as yet, no gold has been traced in the immediate neighbourhood of the Rocky Mountains. In fact, between of primitive rocks and has most probably been denuded; as the highly polished surfaces of many of the exhibited show;—of whatever overlying strata may have been formed, by the action of the great protozoary submergings of this portion of the continent; these did any whatever water and icebergs could transport to the immense plateau lying to the westward of Lake Winnipeg.

Abundant evidence of glacial action upon the hard surfaces of the granite and gneiss are to be seen in many places, and especially at the foot of the lake, where the rocks are polished as if by art, and grooved by these parallel strata, well known to the practical geologist, and all having the same bearing by the compass. We mention these things more particularly, as by them the denudation is proved, and to make it apparent that in all this we see an evidence of the provision of Divine Providence in balancing the wants and productions of one portion of our country by the converse in another portion. Unlike the Saskatchewan valley, the region east of the Lake will not support a large agricultural population, but is in our great Bank of mineral deposit and is ready to honour the drafts of the practical miner and mineralogist to almost any extent. There will be found the matrix of the gold which has been disseminated over the Saskatchewan valley; and there will be found valuable silver mines, and copper, and other useful metals.

This is not a matter of mere assertion or of loose conjecture upon our part. The critical test of time and exploration (prospecting for metals) will bear us out.—Richardson says, in speaking of this portion of the country: "Toward the south end of the lake, and in the narrows, arenaceous (sandy) deposits appear in the immediate vicinity of granite, trap rocks and chlorite slates, having a close resemblance to those of Pigeon Bay of Lake Superior, where argentiferous (silver) veins occur. It is, therefore, an interesting quarter for exploration by the practical miner."

Gold is being found at Vermillion Lake in Minnesota, not south of the boundary; it is known by the Indians to exist upon Rainy Lake, and nuggets of no inconsiderable value have been exhibited as brought from that neighbourhood. Miners and others have detected it near Lake Winnipeg and there can be little doubt but a properly conducted search will find gold and silver in great quantity. In fact, we confidently expect that any day will bring the report of some such discoveries of the precious metals.

Upon the Saskatchewan gold is collected by the ordinary "rocker" and quicksilver; and the mining pays as long as the proper season lasts, which is during the time of low water. The true gold of the Saskatchewan, however, lies in the rich loam of its prairies, and in its coal and forests, and will be developed by the plow, the crowbar and the axe.

We have endeavoured in these articles to adhere to the truth as near as possible, and we would not wish to have any one misled with the idea that gold can be obtained in any great quantity upon the Saskatchewan; although mining will pay in connection with some other employment during winter and the time of high water. Parties can do well out there by agriculture and mining in the summer, and by trapping and trading in the winter. There are indications of nugget gold at points west of here in what are called the Riding Mountains, and near Beaver creek. The world will be astonished some day by remarkable gold discoveries nearer than that however.

Iron is abundant without doubt, as its oxydes discolour the strata in hundreds of places along the rivers, the lakes, and wherever they are exposed to view; but where the deposits may be situated we are at present unable to state, with certainty. In 1867 we found a fine specimen of iron ore on Lake Winnipeg, some 70 miles from the mouth of the Red River. This specimen weighed several pounds, and was deposited in a lump of decomposed quartz. It un doubtedly came from the stratum of drift in the bank above; but whether it was torn from a bed of ore in its original situs upon the eastern shore of the lake, or whether it was impregnated with the metal near the place it was found we are unable to say; but our opinion favours the latter supposition, as the clays, and other earths are discoloured with iron close at hand.

IAMATOLOGIA!

CHEERFULNESS.—Don't be afraid of a little fun at home. Don't shut up your houses lest the sun should fade your carpets; and your hearts, lest a hearth laugh should shake down the musty cobwebs there. If you want to ruin your sons, let them think that all mirth and social enjoyment must be left on the threshold when they come home at night. Young people must have fun and relaxation somewhere. If they do not have it at their own hearth-stones, it will be sought in other and less profitable places. Therefore, let the fire burn brightly at night, and make the home ever so delightful with all those little arts that parents so perfectly understand. Don't repress the buoyant spirits of your children; half an hour's merriment around the lamp and firelight of home blots out the remembrance of many a care and annoyance during the day, and the best safeguard they can take with them into the world is the unseen influence of a bright little domestic scene.

HORSES SAVED.—The lives of thousands of horses have been saved during the past year, and the credit is due to "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy." This preparation is being extensively used, and exists from all the highest praise. Nothing of the kind has ever before been half as successful or given such universal satisfaction; it cannot be equalled. We can confidently recommend it, and would advise all who own horses to keep a supply of it on hand—it may be the means of saving your horse's life. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co., is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., Proprietors for Canada. Sold by all Medicine Dealers. 37

At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since Ex-President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to excite the ire or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbours, they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; an immediate outbreak was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had taught all nations. "In time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

Is not this a lesson to us to fortify our Southern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of rheumatism, coughs, colds, cholics, bowel complaints, and all other diseases incident to this climate by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," Can be had of any Medicine Dealer for 25cts per bottle

THURSDAY, APRIL 22, 1869.

We have received a map of the Dominion, showing the location and comparative size of the "Free Grant Lands" now offered by our Government. The end of a boy's thumb would blot out the whole "free grants" from this county, and the entire "free grants" do not exceed a square inch on the map.—It will look like a ten acre plot to the peasants of Britain, who will wonder where any number could find building ground on it for huts to live in. Mr. White may try to explain, but they will look at the dot on the map in astonishment if told these are thousands of acres there. Surely our government could afford, with so much money on hands, to get a map 7 x 9 inches at least, if not feet, and let the Commissioner take a few of them with him to stick up in hotels, or keep for exhibition. We advise those who have not seen the "free grant" lands on the map to try and see them and be satisfied that our government really have lands to be given away; but we advise all to use microscopes or they will hardly see the spot.

A Bobcaygeon correspondent of the Victoria Warder says that on Saturday, two boys were playing about the Saw Mill, Bobcaygeon, the one named Willie Hamilton and the other, Ritchie. Hamilton was caught on a shaft going at the rate of 200 times per minute; Ritchie, trying to save him was also caught and both were wound round—their feet striking the beams and ground, so that their boots and socks were literally torn off them. Hamilton has both legs and arms broken, one leg in two places. Ritchie had the flesh torn off and the joints pulled apart. The boy Ritchie is not expected to recover; Hamilton it is hoped will. It is said that Ritchie was caught while attempting to save the other boy.

Miss Rye is now engaged in a scheme to bring the Arabs girls of London while they are young to Canada and the United States, and have them adopted by farmers and others who will do so. The scheme may benefit the unfortunate children that are without proper treatment and guardians; by being properly employed they may be saved from a life of infamy and shame But are there not a few in the cities of Canada that require similar treatment? What is being done to save them from the inevitable result of their continuance in their present ways? Is there no Canadian Miss Rye to take the matter in hands in our cities?

Buckley, who was accused of complicity in the McGee murder, was tried at Ottawa on the 16th instant, and acquitted. This is the Buckley that reports said had become insane. It will soon be seen how true this may have been. Any connection with the murder failed to be shown, and in consequence the Judge ordered him to be acquitted.

Mr. Howe is elected by a majority of 320. Repealers will not croak very much now. It is a pity that Mr. Howe had to be bought to join the Coalition; had he done so at first, or had he remained in honest opposition he would have been respected—what, it is to be feared, he is not.

PETER'S MUSICAL REVIEW for April is to hand, and, in addition to fifteen pages of select reading matter, contains the following new music: Ain't I Sweet? A lady's comic song. By T. Brigham Bishop. Rest, Darling, Rest. A beautiful lullaby. By E. C. Ilsley. I'm Still a Friend to You. Song and chorus. By Will S. Hays. He wipes the Tear from every Eye. Sacred Song. By H. P. Danks. Forest Glade March. By Chas. Kinkel. Damask Rose Waltz By E. Mack. Golden Sunset Mazurka. By J. Harristown. Music is generally considered expensive, but when such a quantity is furnished for the sum of thirty cents, it ceases to be a luxury, and even the poorest may possess it. Our musical friends will do well to examine this work, and we feel confident that thirty cents, sent to the publishers for a sample copy, will yield them as large a return for their investment as any similar outlay they can make. Send for a copy, or get your news-dealer to get one for you. It is issued by J. L. Peters, music publisher. Box 5429, New York, at the low price of $3. a year, or 30 cents for single copies.

STRABISMUS: ITS PATHOLOGY AND TREATMENT. By A. M. ROSEBRUGH, M.D.—This is a pamphlet of fifteen pages, illustrated by three figures, in which Dr. Rosebrugh treats at length on the causes of strabismus, or cross-eye. He mentions that it is a remarkable fact that although no affection of the eye has attracted more attention than that of squint or cross-eye, it was not until the year 1838 that the first successful operation was performed for its relief; and that it is only within the last six or eight years the true cause of squint has been fully known, and its treatment placed upon a scientific basis. Dr. Rosebrugh points out that it has been satisfactorily demonstrated by the examination of a very large number of cases that squint depends, as a rule, upon an optical defect, which, if scientifically treated at the outset by the use of proper spectacles, will prevent the development of the squint. The treatise is concluded with a minute description of the modern operations that are performed for the relief of the different varieties of confirmed cross-eye.

HUDSON BAY TERRITORY.—Letters in the Nor' Wester, and from ministers and others residing in the territory, assert that there is abundance of minerals—gold and coal—in the new country. These, the new arrangements will enable the company to select.—The one-twentieth of the whole will prove large enough to cover all the important mineral lands and places of wealth and importance, which the future will reveal they have been far-sighted enough to know all about it.

BLACKWOOD'S EDINBURGH MAGAZINE, for March. Contents:—Historical sketches of the reign of George II; Doubles and Quits; New Zealand and its gold fields; The North-men, heathen and Christian; A whist reminiscence; Stage morality and the Ballet; The arts in the Household; or decorative art applied to domestic uses.

Statistics of the recent English elections show that the Marquis of Herrington paid about $7 apiece for each vote he received.—John Bright got it cheaply, paying only about twenty-five cents for each of his voters

On the 16th instant, in the Imperial Parliament, a motion to go into Committee on the Irish Church Disestablishment Bill was carried by a majority of 126.

Many rich offerings were in preparation in Rome for presents to the Pope on the event of the sacerdotal jubilee. The commission of hospitals had a massive silver mineral desk which does credit to Roman workmanship. It is surrounded by statuettes of Saints Peter and Paul, with the Madonna Immaccolata in the middle, in a golden niche, the each of which is set with twelve beautiful sapphires.

The trial of Count Jean Dzialynski, accused of high treason, has just been commenced before the High Court of Berlin. The Count (a principal proprietor in the Grand Duchy of Posen) had been condemned to death by default in 1864 for having aided in the insurrection in the kingdom of Poland. He lately surrendered voluntarily to take his trial.

It is said in London that the Marquis of Bute's income has been greatly exaggerated, and only comes to a miserable "hundred thousand" a year. Another titled and wealthy Protestant—the Prussian Prince Von Schonaburg—has, on the other hand, joined the Romish Church, so that after all it has two adherents who jointly command three hundred thousand a year.

SPRING ASSIZES.

The Court was opened on Tuesday; Justice Adam Wilson, presiding.

The Grand Jury are:—W. Clarke, Esq., Foreman; and Thos. Bradburn, Robt. Brown, Thos. Bell, Jas. Burgess, Jas. Campbell, Michael Costello, Henry Carveth, Wm. Hall, Thos. G. Haslitt, Wm. Hudson, C. Irwin, Robert Kingan, Michael Leahy, Thos. Milburn, Wm. Mopez, Porter John C. Preston, Jos. H. Walton, Ed. Chamberlen, Esqs.

The Judge addressed the Jury in very few words on the late changes in law and on the matter of having Juries or not, also on the number of pages, 15 in all.

The list of Petit Jurors was then called.

The first case was:

Court vs. Robertson, on a promissory note. Undefended. Verdict for plaintiff.

The Second,

Bradburn vs. Morrow. This was also on a note of some years standing. There was some remarks between the Lawyers and the Judge, on the meaning of the terms "Rate per cent," in which the court ruled that the words were used merely to define or limit on what sum interest might be calculated without referring to time. Defendant also set up the plea that the note was outlawed on the grounds of each year lasting one day in calculating by the month, therefore the note was four days outlawed.

The objections were not considered valid by even Defendant's attorney. Verdict for plf. for £16 3s 3d with interest.

Crawford vs. Johnston.—Weller, for plf; Dennistoun, for deft. (On a note.) Referred to arbitration.

McFarlane vs. Kincaid.—H. Cameron and Mr. Edmonson, for plf; S. Smith, for deft. This was a suit brought to recover possession of a note which plf. held was in the possession of deft. Plf. had sold his stock of drugs to deft. and had taken cash—bank stock and a note at one year for $683, in payment. On this note several payments had been endorsed as early as September and October last—the note not being due till next August. At one time the plf. had got money and endorsed it on the note, but left the note behind him. He afterwards returned and got more money, and, as was set forth, at a different time got payment in full in cash and a new due bill for $150.—This due bill Cruikshank and Co. had collected for Mr. McFarlane. On the 30th of November Mr. Cruikshank then wrote to Dr. Kincaid for a note of $359, said to be in his (Dr. K's) safe keeping, and on Dec. 7th, 10th and 11th likewise, to which Dr. Kincaid answered that he had no such note. On the 11th of December it was published as lost, and now an action was instituted to recover it on the grounds that the Dr. had at some time told Mr. Cruikshank that he had it.

The only witnesses were Mr. Cruikshank and Mr. R. J. Rush. Mr. Cruikshank's evidence was brought to prove that Dr. Kincaid had acknowledged having the note, and Mr. Rush's to prove that it was paid and that the due bill of $150 was the settlement thereof in full. The jury brought in a verdict for plf. for $357, payable next June, that is some time before the note is due.

WEDNESDAY.

The first case was

Chamberlen vs. Renfrew.—This is one of replevin to obtain the price of oak timber taken by Mr. Renfrew off a lot claimed by Mr. Chamberlen. It appeared that Andrew Cathcart had a lot of land near Mud Lake. In 1865 he sold it some way to Mr. Chamberlen, afterwards he (Cathcart) put on a nephew of his with the intention of said nephew, Daniel McBurney, buying the lot. McBurney sold Renfrew oak timber off the lot. Chamberlen seized and forbad Renfrew to take it. He, however, did take it; this happened in 1868. Chamberlen ejected McBurney, last year, and now brings an action against Renfrew for the timber.—Smith and Patterson for plf; H. Cameron, Edmison and Burnham, for deft. There were several witnesses sworn on this case, and occupied the court the whole of the day. Verdict for deft., Renfrew.

The Queen vs. James Murphy. Larceny—stealing a horse.

The Queen as. Daniel Shanahan.—Stealing a buffalo robe.

The Queen vs. Jean Baptiste Simard.—Larceny—stealing Mr. Leck's furs.

The Queen vs. George Graham. Stealing a cap out of Cronn's Hotel.

In the above cases true bills were found. The first three were arraigned and pleaded not guilty. Graham will be arraigned to day when the four cases will be disposed of.

In the case of the Queen vs. Mercier, there was no bill found.

There are not very many cases to be disposed of, but if they should each occupy as much time as the last one, they will cost the country a trifle.

County of Peterboro Rifle Association.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

To the Council and Members of the County of Peterborough Rifle Association.

GENTLEMEN,—I have the honor to present the first Annual Report of the above association.

During the year just ended, the Association has been very successful, more especially, considering that it has been the first year of its existence. The number of names on the roll at present is 200.

As will be seen by the financial statement (published elsewhere) we have, after paying out the large sum of $346.50, the sum of $29 still in the Treasurer's hands and about $15 worth of ammunition: there are no outstanding accounts against the Association. This favorable state of the finances has been the result of careful and judicious management on the part of the Council of the Association.

The Annual Match was held in Peterborough, on the 25th and 26th days of August, at which the sum of $180 was distributed in prizes. Among the prizes competed for were the following: Rev. Mr. Clement, President of the Association, $20; Judge Dennistoun, $10; A. H. Campbell, Esq., $10; Geo. Edmison, Esq., a silver watch, value $25; R. Hamilton, Esq., a silver cup, value $10. The thanks of the Association are due these gentlemen, and many others who contributed liberally, but whom our limited space will not allow us to mention.

The number of competitors present was 65. The rifle almost altogether used was the Snider, all the prizes being won with it.

At the Dominion Rifle Match held in Laprairie, on the 15th September and following days, the Association was represented by 12 of its members, some of them our best marksmen, 3 of whom won prizes and 2 of them first class badges.

In the Battalion Match in which nearly every Battalion in the Dominion was represented, the 57th Peterboro Battalion, composed of members of the Association, was very nearly successful in carrying off the prize, being only one point behind the winning Battalion. Peterboro made 144, the Quebec Battalion, 145. The names of the six competitors who represented Peterboro so nobly are, Captain J. Z. Rogers, Captain Green, Ensign Johnston, Sergt. Brown, Sergt. Campbell and Sergt. English. All honor to them.

A Match was also held by the District Association, at Cobourg, at which nine of our members were present. Some of them were here also successful, four of them carrying off prizes.

I would beg to call the attention of the Association to the necessity that exists of procuring a new range, the one at present in use not being a good one. No doubt plans can be done without much difficulty under the provisions of the new Militia Act, which is more favorable to Rifle Associations than former Acts.

New targets have been promised by the Government, and no doubt will soon be sent.

With the countenance and support of the people of the town and county which were so liberally bestowed last year, and which we feel assured will be as liberally bestowed this year, and with the assistance from the Government and Dominion Rifle Association which we have been promised, there can be no doubt that success will still attend the Association, and the object for which it was organized, namely, a greater proficiency among all classes in the use of the rifle, will be achieved.

The subject of amalgamating with the District Rifle Association has been under consideration by the members of the Council, and will with other matters of importance be brought before the Annual Meeting to be held on the 4th May next.

WM. N. KENNEDY, Capt. & Adgt.,
Secretary.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

The Parliament of Canada was opened on the 15th at Ottawa. At about 3 o'clock, His Excellency proceeded to the House.—The streets on the occasion were gay with flags. His Excellency's carriage was drawn by four greys; Lady Young and others having preceded it. There was a large concourse of the members and citizens present. The Commons being summoned, His Excellency read the following speech from the throne:—

Honorable Gentlemen of the Senate,—

Gentlemen of the House of Commons.—

I have great satisfaction in having recourse to your advice, and I rejoice to think that on this, the first occasion on which I have had the honor of addressing you, we may congratulate ourselves on the aspect of public affairs at home and abroad, on the prevalence of peaceful counsels amongst nations, and on indications of agreement and tranquility favorable alike to the development of foreign commerce and the prosecution of domestic industry

The great scheme of Confederation was successfully inaugurated under the auspices of my predecessor.

It is to me a source of pride to find my name in honorable association with the rising fortunes of the Dominion of Canada, and I shall count it a happiness, as well as a duty, to cooperate, to the utmost of my ability, in furthering your efforts to strengthen the ties that bind the different provinces together, and to ensure the attachment of the people to the soil, by the enactment of wise and equal laws.

Your efforts in these directions seem now, more than ever, likely to be called into action, inasmuch as the terms upon which great accessions are offered to the Dominion will be submitted for your immediate consideration.

In consequence of the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos' despatch of the 5th August of last year, stating that His Grace proposed to enter into negotiations with the Hudson's Bay Company, as to the terms on which they would be willing to surrender their rights and claims in the North-West Territory, Lord Monck sent home to England two members of the Privy Council as a deputation to watch the course of the proceedings and attend to the interests of Canada.

The Conference in London, and the correspondence on the subject have been brought to a definitive issue by the proposal which, after a full review of the circumstances, Earl Granville made on the part of Her Majesty's Government for the consideration of the people of Canada and the Hudson's Bay Company.

I have received the intelligence that the Hudson's Bay Company has, after some deliberation, decided upon accepting the terms laid down by the Secretary of State for the Colonies.

I have directed that the report of the mission and all the papers connected therewith, shall be duly laid before Parliament, and I commend them to your serious consideration in view of the great importance of the subject no less than in the hope that this long vexed question may be closed without further delay.

I was much gratified by communications from the Governor of Newfoundland, expressing the desire for admission into the Union which prevails amongst the inhabitants of that Colony, and especially by his dispatch of the 20th March last, covering copies of Resolutions which have been passed by the Council and Assembly, and which set forth the conditions they consider it desirable to advance.

These documents shall be furnished at once for the information of Parliament, and I hope that before the close of the Session I may be in a position to submit the details of a provisional arrangement for your consideration.

It will be a sensible pleasure to me, as well as a subject of general congratulation, if at some early day the fine Colony of Newfoundland, unrivalled as the nursery of hardy seamen, and inexhaustible in its wealth of Fisheries becomes part of the Dominion.

In accordance with the suggestion of Her Majesty's Government, an earnest attempt has been made to allay the discontent unhappily existing in Nova Scotia. The papers connected with this subject will be submitted for your favorable consideration.

In continuance of the course commenced last session, Bills will be presented to you for the assimilation of the Criminal laws existing in the several Provinces. No greater boon can be conferred on a County than a well defined code of criminal law of general application and easy ascertainment.

Among other measures, Bills will be presented to you for the establishment of uniform and amended laws respecting Parliamentary Elections Bankruptcy and Insolvency, and Patents of invention and discovery.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons,—

The estimates for the expenditure of the coming financial year will be submitted to you.—They have been framed with every economy compatible with the efficiency of the Public Service. I have also desired that the finances accounts of the past year shall be laid before you.

Honorable Gentlemen of the Senate, and Gentlemen of the House of Commons,—

The charters of several Banks are drawing to a close, and the important subjects of Banking and Currency will be brought under your notice.

In considering these questions, which so deeply affect, not only the important interests of Commerce, but the daily transactions of life, I feel assured that you will endeavour to admit such principles as, in their application may ensure the greatest measure of safety to the Public, without curtailing the facilities required for the encouragement and extension of Trade.

I have enumerated a variety of topics, but they are of moment and press for decision within the limits of the Session. I commit them in all confidence to your deliberate judgment, earnestly hoping that a blessing may attend your counsels and enable you to discharge, with dignity and effect, the great trust to which the order of Providence has called you.

In the House of Commons, no business of course was transacted previous to the summons to wait on His Excellency. After their return from the Senate Chamber, the following new members were introduced:—Mr. Amos Wright, (West York), introduced by Messrs. Mackenzie and Holton; Mr. Pelletier, (Kamouraska), by Messrs. Joly and Tremblay; Mr. Picard, (York, N. R.), by Messrs. Connell and Burpee; Dr. Lasalle, (St. Maurice), and Mr. MacDougall, (Three Rivers), by Messrs. Langevin and Sir John A. Macdonald.

Sir John A. Macdonald then introduced a Bill respecting the administration of oaths of office.

The Speaker informed the House, that, to secure accuracy, he had obtained a copy of His Excellency's Speech delivered to both Houses, which he now proposed to read.

There being general cries of dispense, the Speech was held as read.

Sir John A. Macdonald moved that His Excellency's Speech be taken into consideration to-morrow.—Carried.

Sir John moved that the usual Standing Committee be appointed.

The motion was agreed to—the composition of the Committees being matter for future action.

Sir John next moved the ordinary formal motions respecting the privileges of Parliament, which were agreed to.

The House then adjourned at ten minutes to four o'clock.

On the 16th the House met at three o'clock.

Mr. Sing[illegible] of Algoma, moved the adoption of the Address, in which he referred to the acquisition of the Hudson Bay Territory as opening up a home for the young men of the Dominion, instead of going to the United States as at present. He advised passing a railway to the West; if we have no money to build let wild lands be given for the purpose.

Mr. Boulton seconded the Address.

Mr. Bolton, before putting the Address, desired to call the attention of the gentlemen on the treasury benches to the necessity of giving some explanation on the changes made in the constitution, in reference to the treaty with Mr. Howe, and several matters connected with the administration of the departments.

Sir John A. McDonald said such explanations were generally given after the speech from the throne had been dealt with. He defended the course taken by Mr. Howe, and declared that had session he (Howe) had not taken any side, being neutral. There was, therefore, of course, no inconsistency in joining the government; and this the more so, as the Imperial Government had made known that such a thing as repeal would never be heard of. He promised that all the papers would be left before the House. He further defended the vacancy in the cabinet to which Mr. Holton had referred. Mr. McDonald held that the department was in being, although there was no head appointed.

Mr. McKenzie said there was one other point The House had just been informed that the filling up of certain offices had been a matter of experiment. It would be desirable that the House should be informed concerning the two offices of Secretaries of State. Of course, this House was aware that the duties of both offices had been discharged by one person, the member for Dorchester.—The House was entitled to know it that honourable gentleman was to discharge the duties of both offices.

Sir John was glad his attention had been called to that subject. The office of Secretary of State had been created because the ingenuity was left for having a channel of communication between the Dominion and Provincial Governments. It was deemed desirable that the numerous questions which it was supposed would arise in this way should be disposed of by some one Minister. On the commencement of the new order of things, however, it was found that until the relative positions of the Provincial and Dominion Governments were ascertained, until they came to be clearly defined like those of old established Governments, a good portion of the subjects which would be ordinarily assigned to the charge of the Secretary of State, had to be disposed of by the Minister of Justice. So many questions arose in constitutional law and kindred topics, that he, as Minister of Justice, had been obliged to direct his attention to them. Therefore a great deal of the work which would eventually fall on some such officer as the Secretary of State, devolved at present on the Minister of Justice. All correspondence between the Provinces and the Dominion of course was conducted by the Secretary of State. For the present it was proposed that things should remain as they were, because it was clear that if there were any necessity for the offices, before the extension of the Dominion boundary, that necessity would be greatly increased the moment Newfoundland and the North-west became part of the Dominion. As he had stated before, the distribution of offices and power was of necessity to a great extent experimental in the Dominion. From the mover of the Address they had heard what the Government would be expected to do if they assumed the control of the North-west. The subjects which were numerous and of great moment, and this, along with the other circumstances in which they were placed showed how hopeless would be any attempt to sit down and form a more definite plan of administration. The number of duties thrown on the Government were such as might cause a very considerable distribution of and re-arrangement of the offices.

The first paragraph was then agreed to.

Mr. McKenzie admitted that the Address was so framed that little exception could be taken to it, but he wished to know if the mover of the Address had been authorized to make the statements he had in reference to providing for the factors of the Hudson Bay Company, who, they said, were not fit for any other business than that in which they had been engaged. He also considered the action of the Government unwise in choice of a route for the Intercolonial Railway, as being against the commercial and economical interests of the country; their policy would be fraught with evil to the country, to its trade and progress, and would increase the debt of the country immensely. He represented the Militia Law as a ridiculous farce; and a system entirely unfit for their new position had in too many cases been appointed, and the whole law was not calculated to foster a military spirit such as was sought for.

Mr. McKenzie then reverted to the pernicious system inaugurated by this Government, in allowing officeholders to retain their seats in the House without even requiring them to go before their constituents for re-election. He said they might just as well admit Judges and other such functionaries as the Arbitrator between the

A Horrible Tragedy.

The Georgia papers contain details of the horrible crime committed by a negro upon two little white girls in Dooly County. The two children, aged respectively eight and twelve years, and named Martha Holland and Emma Stancill, were passing on their way to school, when they met a negro named Needham Brown, aged 25 years. As they came close to him he leaped the fence, and seizing them in his arms commenced to kiss and fondle them, saying as he did so, that if they screamed or made the slightest resistance he would kill them. The youngest one, Martha Holland, frightened almost to death, did scream, and he instantly seized her, drew a knife from his pocket and cut her throat almost from ear to ear, severing wind-pipe and arteries. The poor little thing gave one groan and fell to the ground dead. The scoundrel then dragged the corpse a short distance and covered her with pine-tops. Returning to the other girl he gagged and bound her, and taking her to a thicket, threw her in. During the day he returned at intervals, and attempted to add another crime to the one already committed. He finally took a spade and went off, apparently to dig a grave, when the surviving girl, who had been picking all day at the rope that bound her wrist, succeeded in freeing herself, and, tottering to the nearest neighbor's house, told her story. The alarm was given instantly and the neighborhood was aroused. The negro was speedily captured and lodged in jail, but at night a mob assembled, took him out, and burned him to death.

NOVEL END OF A BREACH OF PROMISE TRIAL.—I know a case in which a most eligible damsel was pronounced by her friends as unfit to marry a certain young divine, because forsooth, she "was without a penny." He was weak-minded enough, after having proposed to her in form, to give way to their remonstrances, and also was strong-minded enough to bring an action against him for "breach of promise." The damages were laid at five thousand pounds, and she gained them in full. The impressional defendant who reaped nothing but ridicule from his former advisers, throughout this ordeal—which included a protracted cross-examination by Sergeant Valentine, was now brought to reason. He addressed the young lady even more fervently than before.—"I have behaved infamously," he owned, "but if you only forgive and forget, we may be happy yet.—The only objection which my friends has to you has been removed. They can no longer say that you are without a penny, since you have five thousand pounds of your very own.' And the happy pair were married accordingly.—Chambers' Journal.

NATAL.—Dr. Colenso, of Natal, recently met with a serious accident. Returning home after dark, from a visitation, in crossing a river near his residence his horse got into a deep hole, and the stream being swollen and the current strong, the Bishop was washed off his horse and rolled over some 30 or 40 rods. A Mr. Kirkman, who was travelling with him, succeeded in rescuing him, and at the latest dates Dr. Colenso had perfectly recovered.

Cardinal Cullen has addressed a letter to the Irish clergy urging them to educate their people against Fenianism, and into the duties of good citizenship, and thus to aid Mr. Gladstone in obtaining ameliorations, which will do so much to spread harmony and contentment throughout the land.

APRIL.—The Alabama claims were allowed to disturb too long the citizens of the two great Anglo-Saxon communities. The carelessness of one set of statesmen, the indifference of another set, and the cupidity or prejudice of another class, have combined to keep this question rankling in the great political system, like consumption in the human frame, which spends so rapidly until checked and expelled by the great BRONSONIAN REMEDY. THE LUMBER TRADE.—We cannot deny that we are suffering severely in our lumber regions for want of a market for coarse lumber. The Americans, on account of their troubles have not made any purchase in the Provinces the past year, and being able to compete with the North of Europe we can't ship it to England, but serious as this matter is, it is gratifying to know that the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" is a great favorite among our Lumbermen, for curing coughs, sudden colds, cramps in the stomach, burns, bruises, frost-bites, chilblains, &c., and they do not depend upon a foreign market for it, it is sold by all Medicine Dealers at 25 cts per bottle.

DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and readily that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package. HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and safe administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

KADOC, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 8th, 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ancles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonees Remedy; I believe it will cure you,

MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

Charge of the Brass Brigade.

Half a league, half a league, half a league rearward.
Right through the mire and dirt,
Much to its beauty's hurt,
Dragged the rich silken shirt,
Half a league rearward.
Half a peck, half a peck, half a peck, fully,
Hirsute and wooly,
Right into the liquid air
Rose up the pile of hair,
From other heads wandered;
While straddled upon it,
Rose the brave beaust—
Rode, though it wandered.
Curls to the right of it,
Curls to the left of it,
Curls to the rear of it,
Curls that were pinadored.

What though men shout "O fie!
Fortune you've squandered!"
There not to make reply,
There but to dress or die—
"Charge!" to the clerks they cry—
"Charge by the hundred!"

"SUM NATRAL HISTRY."

Josh Billings has been studying natural history, and has furnished the following "valuable" information:—

FLEAS.

The smallest animal of the brute creation, and the most peaky, is the flea.

They are about the bigness of an onion seed, and shine like a brau new shot.

They spring from low places, and can spring further and faster than any of the bug brutes.

They bite wus than the muskeetoze, for the bite on a run. One flea will go all over a man's suburbs in two minnits, and leave him as freckled as the measels.

It is impossible to do anything well with a flea on you, except aware, and fleas ain't afraid of that; the only way is to quit business of all kinds and hunt for the flea, and when you have found him be ain't thare.—This is one of the flea mysteries, the fakulty they have uv being entirely lost just as you hev found them.

I don't suppose there is ever killed on an average, during enny one year, more than 16 fleas in the United States ov America, unless there is a casuality of some kind; once in a while there is a dog gits drowned sudden, and then there may be a few fleas lost.

They are about as hard to kill as a flax seed is, and if you don't mash them as fine as ground pepper, they will start biuness on a smaller kapital jist as restiveroos as ever.

There is lots ov people who have never a flea, and it takes a pretty smart man to see one enyhow; they don't stay long in a place.

If you ever ketch a flea, kill him before you do ennything else; for if you put it off 2 minnits, it may be too late.

Menny a flea has passed away forever in less than 2 minnits.

BED BUGS.

I never seen anybody yet but what despised bed bugs. They are the meanest of all crawling, creeping, hopping or biting things.

They dasent take! a man bi da lite, but sneak in after dark, and chaw him while he is fast asleep.

A musketo will fight you in broad dalite at short range, and give you a chance to knock in his sides; the flea is a game bug, and will make a dash at you even in Broadway, but the bed bug is a garrotter, who waits till you strip, and then cut a mellow place to eat you.

If I was in the habit of swearing, I wood-out hesitate to cuss a bed bug rite to his face.

Bed bugs are uncommon smart in a small way; one pare of sen will stock a last mat-tress in 2 weeks with bugs enough tew last a small family a whole year.

It don't do enny good to pray when bed bugs are in season; the only way to get rid of them is to bile the whole bed in aque fortis, and then heave it away and buy a new one.

Bed bugs, when they have gone aul they intend to, are about the size of a blue jay's eye, and have a brown complexion: and when they start out to garrotte they are flat as a grease spot, but when they get thru garrotting they are swelled up like a blister.

It takes them 3 days to get the swelling out of them.

If bed bugs have any destiny to fill, it must be their stummucks but it seems to me that they must be made by accident, just as slivers are to stick into someboddy.

If they wus got up for some wise purpose they must have took the wrong road, for there kant be any wisdom in chawin a man aul nite long, and raising a family besides to follow the same trade.

If there is some wisdom in aul this, I hope the bed bugs will chew them folks who kan see it, and leave me be, because I am one of the hereticks.

Mrs. Caudle on the Velocipede.

"Caudle, I would like to know what makes your face look so red! You look as if you had been 'on a tight' for a week, I do declare this is too bad. Was there ever a woman in this world so—

Mr. C. explains—"Now, my dear, don't take on so. You know a new locomotion has been introduced in town. It is called a velocipede. I rode one of these in the hall to-night before coming home, and it is hot work, especially for beginners. Been drinking! No, I haven't drank anything for six months!"

Mrs. C.—"There, Caudle, just, just look at that! Torn the best pair of pants you had in the house!"

Mr. C.—"Now, you see, I rode the velocipede this afternoon, and another machine ran into mine, and before I knew it, my pants were torn."

Mrs. C.—"Ripped your coat, too, haven't you? You didn't want me to see that tear! But, Mr. Caudle, what's the matter with your hands? Why, they are all blistered up!"

Mr. C.—"Three day's riding the velocipede is enough to blister anybody's hands! but it's nothing when you get used to it! It happens to all beginners!"

Mrs. C.—"What's the matter now, Caudle? You limp as if you had been horribly injured!"

Mr. C.—"A slight bruise, only a slight bruise; keep me in the house only a day or two. You see Jack and he weighs 350 pounds, accidently drove his velocipede."

Mrs. C.—"Now, I would like to know where you've been all this blessed evening, Caudle! Here it is fifteen minutes to midnight and you've just come home to your lawfully wedded wife. No! you needn't say that you have been to the lodge, because it isn't lodge night."

Mr. C.—"No, my dear, I haven't been to the lodge. You see, in order to become an adept—"

Mrs. C.—"Now, Caudle, I know what you were going to say. You were going to tell me that you must desert me every night for six weeks while you learn to ride the velocipede! It wives had their way they'd burn every velocipede! And what was the matter with you last night? I couldn't get a wink of sleep! Your legs kept going up and down all night like pump handles! Velocipede motion, was it? Put your feet in stirrups and turn and that throws your knees up and down, does it? Now, don't tell me it's nothing when I get used to it, because that's something I won't get used to! It is bad enough to sleep with a man when he is quiet, but to have the bed clothes flapping up and down all night as regularly as that clock ticks is too much, velocipede or no velocipede. If you ride the velocipede another day, Caudle, I'll leave the house!"

And with this conclusion the lady ceased, finding her worthy spouse was already fast asleep.

'Wherever I go,' said a Yankee gentleman, remarkable for his State pride, 'I am sure to find sensible men from my own state.'—'No wonder,' said the gentleman he was addressing; 'for any man of that State who has any sense leaves it as fast as he can.'

Lynch law in Kentucky is made to apply to lazy husbands. An indolent blacksmith was recently tied to a tree and given sixty-two lashes, because he didn't support his family.

THE WINE-GLASS.

Who hath woe? Who hath sorrow?
Who hath contentions? Who hath wounds without cause?
Who hath redness of eyes?
They that tarry long at the wine! They that go to seek mixed wine! Look not then upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth its

when it
moveth itself

At

What causes Irish rows?—Pat-riot-ism.

New Music—The first utterance of a bran new baby.

'Jane,' said a wag, it's all over town.'—'What's all over town?' 'Mud.' Jane's eyes dropped.

A handsome young lady being asked if she ever gave a kiss, replied, 'No; but I often had one stolen.'

It is impossible to look at the 'sleepers in a church without being reminded that Sunday is a day of rest.

Silence is the softest response for all the contradictions that arise from impertinence, vulgarity and envy.

A Boston (Ala.) editor takes dogs in payment for subscriptions to his paper. Is he also a sausage maker?

When the trumpeter was desired to play louder, he replied: "You say, 'loud, louder,' but var ish de vind?"

Water is not a fashionable beverage for drinking your friend's health, but it is a capital one for drinking your own.

A bore, meeting Douglas Jerrold, said,—"Well, what's going on to-day?" "I am," exclaimed Jer. old, darting past the inquirer.

Persons about to rescue women from drowning are warned not to seize them by the hair; for in that case the hair alone would be rescued.

Are you the fellow what's going West?' inquired a cabby of a gentleman, the other evening; 'cause I'm the gentleman what's to drive if you be!'

A lady in Lowell, Mass., who kept crape on the knob of her house door since the assassination of President Lincoln, removed it on inauguration day.

"Off she goes," said a lady, speaking of the train as it was starting. "You have mistaken the gender, madam," said a gentleman, 'this is a mail train."

Corsets are like opposition steamboats. They reduce the fair, and they should always be encouraged by economical people, because they have a tendency to lessen waist.

"I say, did you see it done?"—"No, I was not an eye witness, but an ear witness."—"A near witness, and not a sight witness! That's what I call a distinction without a difference."

A stump speaker exclaimed: "I know no north, no south, no east, no west, fellow-citizens!" "Then," exclaimed an old farmer in the crowd, "it's time you went to school and larn jography."

'Ah, Jemma,' said a sympathising friend to a man who was just too late for the train, 'you did not run fast enough.' 'Yes I did,' said Jemmy, 'I ran quite fast enough, but I did not start soon enough.'

A tipsy fellow got out of his calculation, and was dozing in the street, when the bells roused him by their ringing for fire. 'Nine, ten, eleven, twelve, thirteen, fourteen,' cried he. 'Well, if this isn't later than I ever knew it.'

An exchange says that a farmer cured his daughter of the Grecian bend by throwing water on her, and then laying her in the sun till she "warped" back to the old place again.—Afflicted parents will please notice.

A housemaid, the other evening, slipped from a chair on which she was temporarily standing, and fell head foremost into a barrel of flour. To show the effect of mental agony, we will state that 'her hair became white in a single night.'

MAKING THE BEST OF IT.—'Captain, jewel, said a son of Erin, as a ship was coming on the coast in inclement winter weather, 'have ye a almenick on board?' 'No, I hav'n't.' 'Thin,' replied Pat, 'we shall have to take the weather as it comes.'

Doctor Solus, who was very angry when any joke was passed on his profession, once said, 'I defy any person whom I ever attended to accuse me of ignorance or neglect.' 'That you may do safely, doctor,' replied a wag; 'dead men tell no tales!'

A conceited coxcomb, with a very patronising air, called out to an Irish laborer, 'Here you bog-trotter; come and tell me the greatest falsehood you can, and I will treat you to a glass of whiskey.' 'By my word,' said Pat, 'an yer honor's a gentleman.'

A QUESTION SOLVED.—A company of young ladies lately discussed this question:—'What is the great duty of man?' One of them dressed a la mode from head to foot, contended that it was to pay milliner's bills. This was agreed to without a dissenting voice.

At a public meeting in a country town, an eloquent advocate of popular education thus delivered himself:—'Mr. Chairman, I rise to get up, and am not backward to come forward in the cause of education, for had it not been for education, I should be as ignorant as you are Mr. Chairman.'

An American young lady, the other day, in the course of a lecture, said, "Get married, young man, and be quick about it, too. Don't wait for the millenium, hoping that the girls may turn to angels before you trust yourself to one of them. A pretty thing you would be alongside an angel, wouldn't you, you brute!"

A THOROUGH-BRED GENTLEMAN.—A bob-tail coat, a penule paper collar, a white cotton waistkit, yeller trowsers without any cloth into the legs, shiney leather boots, a pair of yeller gloves, and inside of 'em awl a thing got up in imitation of a man, but as nonsenseterers say, poorly executed, and not kalkerlated to deseve. Moustach indispensabul, and brains onnecessary. Fine specimens on exhibition.—Josh Billings.

A pleasant story is told of a rather aged lady who has recently married a young and fast man, quitting him at the station when he was going on expage for some important private affairs. After an embrace of the most loving character she put her head into the carriage and said, "Dear Charles, remember that you are married." To which he replied, "Dear Caroline, I will make a memorandum of it," and at once tied a knot in his handkerchief.

Uncle Bill Todd was a drover from Worcester county. Being exposed to all weathers, his complexion suffered some, but at the best he was none of the whitest. Stopping at a public house, a man rich in this world's goods, but of notoriously bad character, thought, as Uncle Bill came in, he would make him the butt of a joke. As the black face of the weather-beaten man appeared in the door-way, he exclaimed, "Mercy on us, how dark it grows! Uncle Bill surveying him from head to foot, coolly answered, "Yes, sir; your character and my complexion are enough to darken any room."

Chaptanks had his wife arrested for assaulting him with a fire-shovel while at his devotions. It was an aggravated case. But Mrs. Chaptanks asked to be heard, and she said that little Choppy "didn't dare give her any of his sauce in his talk; but he abused her in his prayers, and on this occasion he was on his knees, with a crowd about the door, gallared there by his "hollerin" and "a callin" on the Lord to forgive this black-hearted woman; "make her tell the truth, O Lord," he hollered, "and make her quit gaddin" about and "lyin" to the neighbors and I couldn't stand it, and just took him a swipe with the flat of the shovel, and I'll do it again."

SLEIGHING WITH A GIRL.—Of all the joys vouchsafed to a man in life's tempestuous whirl, there's naught approaches heaven so near as sleighing with a girl—a rosy, laughing, buxom girl; a frank, good-natured, honest girl; a feeling, flirting, dashing, doting, smiling, smacking, jolly, joking, jaunting, jovial, poser-poking, dear little duck of a girl. Pile up your wealth a mountain high, you sneering, scoffing churl, I'll laugh as I go dashing by with my jingling bells and girl—the brightest, dearest, sweetest girl; the trimmest, pepest, neatest girl; the funniest, finest, fi-nest, fairest, roundest, ripest, roguishest, rarest, spunkiest, spiciest, squirmiest, squarest, best of girls, with drooping lashes, half concealing amorous flashes—just the girl for a chap like me to court, and love, and marry, you see—with rosy cheeks and clustering curls, the sweetest and the best of girls.

GOSSIP FOR THE LADIES.

HINTS AS TO DEPORTMENT.

Parisian ladies walk very much on their toes, with the waist elevated behind and sinking in front. The empress, with whom originates the fashion, executes it charmingly. The heels of the satin boot being very high, and the soles extremely thin, the torture becomes easy enough, and can be acquired without much practice. A high authority announces that in the new style "the air of the visage is to be bold, no longer wearing that expression of simpering timidity which suited with the long curls down the neck. The chin is projected forward, and the forehead thrown back, while the eyes are kept wide open, hard and round as possible; the lips are in general pale—coral coloring is quite gone out of fashion—and the expression of the mouth to be that of weariness and scorn. In consequence of the raising of the coiffure, the ears, so long neglected, have become an object of attention, and may now be ornamented with pink or white, as may be required. They are brought forward, or forced backward, according to the urgency of the case, and it is astonishing to find what expression may be given to the countenance by dint of a little management. Blue eyes and fair hair are still considered indispensable to a reputation for beauty, and black eyes and fair hair are scarcely tolerated; those who are unfortunate enough to possess them being compelled to use every kind of stratagem in the way of powder, paint and dust, to conceal their disgrace. The elbows must be rather squared, not rounded, and brought forward as much as possible, in order to make the chest look hollow, and add to the consumptive look bestowed by the pale lips and flushed cheeks imparted by the absence of all coloring in the one case, and the exaggeration of its application in the other. Let no young lady dare to appear in fashionable society unless she adhere with the utmost strictness to these rules."

Discoveries in the Rock of Gibraltar.

The remarkable rock of Gibraltar, a grey, compact marble, which rises from 1400 to 1,500 feet above the Mediterranean, has long been famous for its curious caves. Recently, pretty thorough explorations have been made of some of those caves under the direction of Captain Brome of the British army. One of them, known as the "Martin's Cave," opens on the eastern face of the rock, and was evidently an ancient sea cave, though now upwards of 700 feet above the Mediterranean. A month was devoted to the exploration, and, curiously enough, there were no evidences of any previous exploration of this cave. The explorers first excavated from three to six feet of earth along the south side of the cave. This revealed to them a stalagmite floor, on which were found portions of the lower jaw, supposed to be human, and a considerable quantity of bones of animals, and birds and fishes; also, broken pottery, rude and ornamented; handles and pots; stone axes, flint knives and flint chips; worked bone, sea shells, land shells and water-washed pebbles. In a small chamber off the north side of the cave, were found two ancient swords, and a small enameled copper plate, beautifully made and brilliantly colored, with a design upon it representing a bird in the coil of a serpent. These relics were referred to the eleventh or twelfth century. In another large cave, "St. Michael's Cave," were found numerous human remains, stone axes, flint knives, etc., etc. On the north side of this cave, by breaking up the stalagmite floor, other caves were discovered, which extended some 450 feet in a north-westerly direction, the very existence of which had before been unknown. The explorations are still in progress. But they already seem to demonstrate that at some remote period of time the caves of Gibraltar were all inhabited by a race of men having uniform habits of life.

STRANGE OCCURRENCE.—We have been informed of a very strange occurrence that lately took place near Cold Springs. It appears that Mr. Matthew Rosevear, who resides on Lot 15 in the 5th con. of this township, had a cow, a very fine animal, that took sick some time ago, and lingered apparently in great agony for some days and finally died.—The symptoms of disease were so extraordinary and unaccountable that Mr. Rosevear decided to have her opened and examined. Nothing could be discovered in the stomach, but upon opening the chest a snake and a live lizard were discovered inside the diaphragm and in close proximity with the lungs and heart. The mystery of the cow's death was of course explained, but how did the reptiles come there. They must have been received into the stomach and afterwards worked themselves through into the cavity of the chest, but how they came to be received into the stomach in the first place is a mystery. The occurrence is one of the strangest that we have ever heard of.—Cobourg Sentinel.

REVIVALISM IN ABERDEEN.—For a fortnight past a remarkable work has been going on among the fishers of Aberdeen. During the last week numbers of strong men, young and old, have been prostrated, and have declared they saw visions—they meanwhile, crying unto the Lord to have mercy upon them. Some have cried out that they see departed relatives in heaven, and reply to the beckonings of those relatives that they are coming. Their eyes are fixed, their lips quiver, and they lie on the ground, their limbs being quite rigid and motionless. This is declared by the converted fishermen to be the genuine work of the Spirit. The revival work still continues. The fisher-men went to sea the first time on Tuesday for a fortnight past. They have not been eating or sleeping with regularity. Edinburgh Courant.

ALLEGORY.—A humming bird met a butterfly, and being pleased with its beauty of person and the splendor of its wings, made an offer of perpetual friendship. "I cannot think of it," was the reply, "as you once spurned me and called me a crawling dolt." "Impossible!" exclaimed the humming bird; "I always entertained the highest respect for such beautiful creatures as you." "Perhaps you do now," said the other, "but you insulted me when I was a caterpillar. So let me give you a word of advice—never insult the humble; it is wrong in itself, and they may one day become your superiors."

Queen Isabella, who, upon her arrival in Paris, seemed to care very little for the French theatres, has now become a passionate play-goer. It costs her nothing to gratify that passion. Most of the Spanish absolutists now living at Paris have boxes at one or more of the theatres; and when Queen Isabella wants to go to one of them she writes to the box-holder as follows:—"I, the queen, command you to let me have your box for to-night. I shall be pleased to reserve two seats in it for you and your wife."

Poetry.

THE SWALLOW'S SONG.

"Come, love, let us swiftly go,"
Says the tender mother;
Countries fair invite us so,
Soon this land will sink in woe;
Come and seek another,"

"Leave my pitchplace!" straight replies
Little twit, scarce listening,
Eager more to seize a prize,
As the gnats in myriads rise
In the sunbeams glistening.

"Why, I cannot fly so far
Distance so appalling;
Where you high and glittering star
Drives his midnight airy car,
I am sure of falling."

"Nay, my love, I've seen you rise
Like an arrow darting,
Chasing painted butterflies;
Try your strength toward yonder skies,
Bear the pain of parting.

"Parting soon or late will come,
Here we've nothing lasting;
Short our sojourn, 'tis our doom,
Better stretch your vigorous plume,
And be onward hasting."

Little twit then raised its head,
Stretched its twittering beak and said:
"I will be by mother led;
Yielding now I come, I fly;
If I linger I will die;
Many venture—so will I."

Is this then a swallow's voice?
'Tis like a Christian mother,
Balancing our present joys
With you azure heaven's joys
This world and the other.

Let me then prepare for bliss,
Where the Saviour entered,
Promptly, lest the day I miss;
Join the cloud of witnesses
Who the journey ventured.

At the bird's voice will I rise,
Take the gentle warning.
Win the Saviour's glorious prize—
Glorious crowns of victories.
At the judgment morning.

THE UNFORGIVEN SISTER.

It was a pretty scene in the rich parlor that winter afternoon. A little girl with shining golden curls, and radiant eyes in which glistened a world of love and beauty, sat upon a richly embroidered cushion, which she had thrown from the sofa. In her lap she held a little dog, and by her side lay a wreath of bright hot house flowers. With these latter she was decking the bright silver collar worn around the neck of the former, with many a crow of delight as the little dog snapped playfully at the flowers.

Yet at that moment the door opened, and one made her appearance therein who did not see the beauty of the picture. Her first exclamation was:—'Why, Minnie, you naughty, naughty girl!' What are you doing?'

The sunshine was gone from the child's face in an instant. She jumped hurriedly up from her seat, on the cushion, with a look of sorrow and fright on her face, while the little dog scampered beneath the sofa, and stood peeping timidly forth.

Little Minnie had not suspected until that moment, that the boquet she had taken belonged to her sister; and even then she did not know how rare and costly it was; although she knew that she had done something wrong, and felt very sorry for it. So after standing timidly a moment in the centre of the room, where she had risen from the cushion, she approached the other and said:—

'Dear sister Edith, you will not be angry with me, will you? Please forgive me I did not mean to do wrong.'

'No, Minnie,' was the reply of the other.

'I shall not forgive you! Indeed you have been very naughty, and I do not love you!'

Not love her! Not love the frail beautiful bud, the pride and light of the house! Ah, Edith Somerville! less than human you must be, to stand there, and say that, with those beseeching, tearful eyes upturned to yours!

But Edith was very much vexed just then and heeded not the pleading look that she drove away from the sinless little face—She was too much taken up with thinking of her boquet. It was one just sent from the green house, and which she was to wear at a grand ball that evening. So she bent angrily down to the floor, and commenced gathering up the flowers, finally catching hold of the little dog's leg, and pulling him roughly from his hiding place beneath the sofa, to get those which were in his collar.

'Please sister, don't hurt my dog!' said the little Minnie, with tremulous lip, 'He has not done anything very naughty.'

This said in the kindest of tones, still further irritated Edith, and she replied rather sharply:—'Go into the nursery. You are very naughty, and I do not love you!'

Minnie tried to say something more—but the swelling of her throat choaked her, and she went very silently from the presence of her sister Edith, to cry bitterly at her thoughtless act, and her sister's cruel rebuke.

Meanwhile Edith busied herself in preparing for the ball. At last she was ready and then grouped the flowers together in her bosom, not without noticing that the loveliest bud was crushed and broken.

At the garden gate, just as she was stepping into the carriage, she heard a pleading voice behind her, and looking back, saw little Minnie standing half way down the walk, the bright December moon shining full and radiently down upon her. She had run out bare headed to ask once again her proud sister's forgiveness. Very pretty she looked in the moonlight, her bright hair sparkling in its soft beams.

'Please, Edith,' said the timid voice—'Please say you will forgive me before you go, I am so sorry!'

Who but one beat on gratifying her own pleasure at all hazards, could have withstood this second appeal? Yet so will pride and self-love harden even the least obdurate hearts, unless religion sheds its peaceful and benignant influence there, to counteract the baneful wickedness of the former. Although her heart softened a little as she saw the frail child standing just at the other side of the gate, yet she thought it would not do to show sisterly feeling now, after the spectacle of the afternoon, and thought, moreover, a little discipline was needful; so she only said:—'There, there; run into the house Minnie. You'll catch cold.—Don't worry me now about my forgiveness. You've been very naughty, and I don't think you've had time to repent properly.

And, with these heartless words, she stepped into the carriage, the footman closed the door, and away they rattled down the street.

Edith did not have the pleasant time that she anticipated. Somehow, a little mouslit face in the gravelled walk constantly appeared between her and the brilliant combination of light that flashed on all sides in the ball room, and a little childish voice, that left pleasant, tender feeling, seemed, to continually ring in her ears, and drown the music that swelled around her on all sides.

When at last the ball began to draw towards its close, Edith hailed it with delight, inasmuch as it would enable her to forgive and kiss the little sister to whom she had refused that boon a few hours previous.—But she soon recollected, with a pang that she had promised to go home with her aunt Lady Hamburg, to Kew, after the ball and stay a couple of days. How long a time that seemed! How far off was the propitiation thus placed!

Edith spent two miserably restless days at the house of her aunt, and then started to seek again the shelter of her own roof. She paused an instant at the gate almost dreading to go in, yet could not tell why. She knocked at the door nervously, yet Hope all the time whispered that Minnie, would be the first to hear the noise. But no Where could she be? Where the little form that usually bounded to meet the elder sister? All silent. No one to meet her. Even the Kitten, that usually frisked about her in such joy, hardly noticed her; now merely raising its head and opening its great yellow eyes, as it lay on the lounge. Was she so great a criminal then? Ah! how the conscience lashes the soul when a wrong actually has been done! Poor Edith suffered enough then to have been spared the great retribution that was to follow, if it had not been ordained otherwise.

Edith still stood in the centre of the room, listening to the whispering of that dreadful foreboding, when another door opened and her mother stepped softly across the threshold.

Ah, Edith! she said starting at the unexpected sight, and a soft smile playing over features that looked wan and careworn; I am glad that you have come. We were just on the point of sending for you.

Why? almost gasped she. Is anything—is Minnie——

Minnie is very ill. The doctor says her life hangs on a very slender thread. She has the brain fever.

Oh, how monstrous my wickedness seems to me now! Let me see her at once, and ask her forgiveness for——

Alas! it would be useless. She knows no one, and understands nothing that is said to her.

But I must see her.

Not just now, When you are so discomposed. Everything must be very quiet around her.

But—but—how long has she been so ill? inquired Edith, in an unsteady voice.

She was taken the very night you went away. We missed her shortly after you had gone, and could not find her for a long time. At last she was discovered quite by accident, sitting in the arbour near the gate, sound asleep. She had been erring about something, we thought but she was so sleepy we did not question her, and in the morning she was out of her, mind. She keeps continually calling you, and very piteously beseeching your forgiveness for, something as she seems to have done.

My forgiveness! groaned the unhappy Edith. It is I who would ask her's. And she sat down in the arbor on that cold night, and went to sleep! Oh, how shall I ever forgive myself?

Then, with many a groan and flood of tears, Edith told her mother the story, sparing herself in no particular.

You did very wrong, Edith, was all the mother said, although heart was sorely tried. She is very sensitive and the least thing affects her. Her wrong was at most a negative one, and yours a positive. If she should never recover, you——

Never recover? screamed Edith. But she must! I should——

Nay, my daughter, said the mother, calmly. Do not add impiety to your sins. She is in the hands of a higher Power than ours. If He wills it, she may still remain with us; if not, she will only have gone where she will have escaped a great deal of the sin and suffering of this world.

Edith went to the bedside and passionately repeated little Minnie's name, coupling its fervent utterance with a piteous appeal for forgiveness; but the tones awakened no response save a vacant stare of the large blue eyes now so black in the fever of delirium. Then, a moment later, the lips moved and said:—

Sweet sister Edith, please do forgive me. I know you do love me if I was naughty.

All that dreary night and the next day Edith watched by the beside of her little sister, asking her, in tones of entreaty, to be forgiven; but the fevered lips pressed so often, gave no response. The next night, Edith was so weary with constant watching that her mother insisted on her retiring, saying that Minnie was much better, and would probably be quite comfortable in the morning.

But, alas for poor Edith! no more peace came in sleeping than in walking hours.—In her fevered dreams, Minnie was ever at her side, the same sweet faced, soft toned Minnie, but with a sad, tearful, tenderly reproachful countenance. Two or three times Edith awoke with heavy sobs swelling up from her heart, only to sink again into the same easy slumber. When she at last fairly awoke from the sleep that is the latter part of the night had been heavy, and almost a stupor, the bright sun was shining into her window, and was already high in the grayish wintry sky. Startled by the lateness of the hour, Edith sprang up and hurried on her clothes, all the time wandering how the little sufferer was, and praying that she might be conscious, so that she might again hear those sweet tones in accustomed conversation, and hear them lisp out a forgiveness. In the passage, Edith met her mother, and asked in tones that were painfully and passionately earnest how Minnie was.

The voice of the mother came sad singularly sweet to Edith, as she replied:—She is out of all pain this morning, and is sleeping quietly. Come; let us go and see our darling.

Edith's heart bounded with delight, and her step was electric as she started with her mother. But a sudden misgiving and faintness stole over her as she entered the room, and glanced at the couch. Then her mother led her gently to the bedside, and folded down the white sheet that lay over the little pale face.

Beautiful, even in death, was the pure, sweet little face, now silent and placid!

A moment only Edith stood gazing and then, like a cruel remembrance from some the memory of the last words Minnie had spoken to her.

'I hate Edith, and I'm glad I'm going to leave her.'

And then came the mockery of her own heartless, cruel answer. For an instant her brain reeled, then the warm blood gushed from her mouth and nostrils, and she fell heavily to the floor.

When she was returned to consciousness, she was lying weak and helpless upon her couch, and familiar faces were grouped around. She shuddered when she thought of the scene that left such a piercing impress upon her memory, and closed her eyes in deep anguish. Late in the day, when she asked how soon Minnie's funeral was to take place, they told her that the snow was lying deep upon her grave, and that she herself had been unconscious for three weeks and had been given up by all.

It was a long time before Edith was again the blooming girl she had formerly been; but when the time did come, there was a sweetness with her bloom that had never been noticed before and a soft grace that became her well, even though it had never rested there before.

And best of all, those days were blessed ones, in at least one respect; for they humbled the proud Edith, and covered thoughts from worldly things, to rivet them to others heavenly.

She sometimes shudders even now, as she thinks of the past days, and reflects at what a dear price her salvation was purchased—the early death of poor little Minnie!

"Ante-Natal Infanticide."

The New York Medical Gazette thus strongly speaks on the crime of abortion. It is our duty to call attention to the fact that ladies with whose ease and amusements the indelegant function of child-bearing interferes, have adopted a convenient code of ethics, which attaches no blame to the extinction of fœtal life in its earlier stages. Devout church-going dames who shudder at the crushing of a beetle, feel no compunction in killing their young, provided that the deed be done within the first two or three months after gestation, and information of new and effective means of slaughter soon spreads from one to another, until their armamentarium exceeds that of most respectable physicians. A quarter of a century ago, no woman would have dared to confess the things which wives now speak of lightly, and commend as "prudent" measures. The fact is, that as advancing civilization brings luxury in its train, too many women are forgetting that motherhood is their highest and holiest mission and subordinating the duties of life to its pleasures, they seek the married state for its social advantages, but they are unwilling to assume the responsibilities which marriage should entail. Hence they leave no means untried to avert the very aim and object of their being, and if, despite their efforts, nature refuses to be controlled, the children that are born are liable to be left to the vicarious maternal offices of hirelings. For this crying sin of our age it is difficult to devise a practical remedy. None will suffice, we fear, until public opinion shall brand as infamous the taking of human life even at its earliest stages—doubly infamous, when the murder is done by her who, of all the world, is most solemnly bound to guard the trust imposed on her by nature—until woman shall learn that "mother" is the most honourable title which their sex can bear, and that the wife who indulges passion and destroys its fruits, is not very far above the level of the wanton whom she despises. To suppress the grosser horrors of the abortionist's trade, a revision of the law is needed. As it now stands, the actual perpetrator of the crime is alone amenable to punishment (and experience has shown how seldom his conviction can be secured,) while she who instigates the act, goes free. He who hires an assassin to kill his enemy, is justly held responsible for the deed of his agent, and the same rule should apply to the case under consideration. Let it be made a felony to induce abortion (save in certain specified instances, wherein at least three qualified physicians shall certify its necessity, owing to deformity or disease) at any stage of pregnancy—let the mother who submits to abortion be held not only as particeps criminis, but as the principal offender—far guiltier than the mercenary tool whom she employs—let such a law be executed to the letter, regardless of person or of social station, even if its penalty involve the translation of a few fair aristocrats from their boudoirs to a common prison, and our word for it, a marked improvement in morality and increase of population would soon be the results."

A NEAT SWINDLE.—Some few days ago a respectable looking young man went to a well known hotel in Kingston and took a room. After getting the key he deposited an open satchell with the book keeper for safe keeping, having in it twenty 10 dollar rolls of silver. After remaining about a week at the house he went for a weeks travel into the country, taking his trunk with him, asking the book keeper to retain his silver and his room for him. As he did not turn up at the end of three days the confiding book keeper became anxious, and examined the contents of the satchel, when he discovered that he had been acting guardian angel to a score of small pieces of broom handle neatly put up in paper, and loaded with lead. He is very anxious to have an interview with the owner who so far has neglected to come after his property.

People who pony up are not necessarily equestrian in their tastes.

The Dominion to the North of us.

(New York Tribune)

It cannot be denied that if the efforts of the Imperial and Dominion Governments are successful in cementing a union of the British North American Provinces, the result will be a very strong empire. When we speak of the strength of this prospective empire, however, we must not be understood as meaning a strong governmental system by army and ship of war, and supported by bold and able statesmen, for in all these things it would probably prove weak enough, but as strong in possessing the resources of an extensive and fruitful territory. Within a few days the cable announced the settlement of the ... Bay Company's Territory, by which that rest region is to be ceded to Canada. That is now two centuries since the Company was formed, and although its claim to territorial rights has, of late years been denied by many eminent lawyers in England, it has never been practically disputed. That claim is now to be extinguished, upon the payment of £300,000 sterling, and already the Canadians are talking of providing some sort of a government for the Red River Settlement, and taking measures to check American encroachments along the western frontier. Canada's best defence against the Americans is the good faith of the United States; but in regard to this region, it is really as valuable as one of our own North Western States. For years the country has been systematically misrepresented by the Hudson's Bay Company, and its value and importance, even now, are only imperfectly known.

Simultaneously with the settlement of the North West, question in the assessment in the Legislature of Newfoundland to join the Confederation, and an agent is now on the way to Ottawa, to negotiate with the Dominion Government for the acceptance of the terms proposed by the authorities of the Island. These terms, though not entirely acceptable to Canada, are not so unusual as to interpose insuperable obstacles to the end in view, and if agreed to, either with or without modification, will probably be ratified by the people of Newfoundland at an election intended to be held in November. Should the movement result in the transfer of the Province to the Dominion, Labrador, which is a dependency of Newfoundland, would of course become a part of the new empire, and Prince Edward Island would almost be coerced into adopting a similar course. The Dominion would thus gain control of the extensive fisheries of those islands, and the value of its resources would be greatly enhanced. Aside from its fisheries, Newfoundland is of little importance. The bulk of the people of the island live in a state of squalid and abject misery, which is often aggravated by the failure of the fishing voyages. But the minerals are now attracting some notice, and, if the mines should prove really valuable, the poor of Newfoundland might reap a more certain subsistence under the fostering care of the Dominion than they have ever been able to obtain in their half-independent condition. Annexation to the United States is a thing not desired by the people of this country, unless reciprocal interests dictate its necessity in the case of any of the Provinces, and even then it would be a subject of grave deliberation. The American people will not interpose any obstacles in the way of the consolidation of the British North American Provinces if their mutual interests dictate this policy and where, unlike the case of Nova Scotia, a yoke has not been put upon the necks of an unwilling people. If Newfoundland and the Dominion of Canada find reciprocal advantages in union, let them unite upon terms agreeable to themselves.

The Canadians seem to have a passion for real estate, and with such fair prospects for the acquisition of Newfoundland and the Hudson's Bay Territory, are just now directing their gaze westward, and predicting the annexation of the British Provinces. There too may come under the Government of the Canada politicians. An empire so great in extent and diversified in resources would form a theme for Dominion Day orations which even our own Fourth of July orators could scarcely rival.

A BAD STORY.

What entreaties for untasted seasons of drinking customs! Lately a young woman knocked at our door. Her good clothes were all draggled in the mire, and the traces of a night's debauch were visible in her otherwise comely countenance. It was sad to see her, but sadder still to hear her story. She was on the morning before, a decent servant, with virgin, and character, and virtue and self respect, the respected child of respectable parents. She was afraid to face them; and now she stood a lost, shameless creature, begging for pity and shelter. She left her place, and on her way to another she met with some companions; they persuaded her to taste a little spirits, and then a little more, and still a little more, till, at first quickened, and then stupified with drink, she became insensible, and woke to find herself robbed and ruined. What a revolutions drink and three or four-and-twenty hours had wrought in her history!

Twenty years ago, while a clergyman was sitting at his book, on a beautiful summer, afternoon, he heard a foot on the gravel, and saw the shadow of a passenger on the glossy leaves, and beautiful flowers of a China rose-bush, which carved on the window screen. The person came, to say, that one calling himself an old college acquaintance was in the kitchen; and there—for he declined to enter the room—in old rusty black, out of the knees and elbows, with a long, wiry beard, a purple-red haggard face he traced the features of one whom he had known as a most accomplished student, and pride of his parents and family, and once the days of many.—Degraded in his own eyes, he would not lift up his head, nor speak, nor stay, but clutching at the offered charity, he hurried off, a man who might have adorned a pulpit now a vagabond on earth, cast off by all his friends to die by a dyke side, and be laid with no regrets, in a pauper's grave.

But three weeks ago on going up King street, a sudden start and rapid turning away of a face, called our attention to one who had reached the lowest infamy. In, but swollen and bloated features we recognized one whom we had known in better days, and had last seen when, five years ago, a friend prayed beside her mother's dying bed, in the garret story of a house on Yonge street. From her childhood she had been the widow's best earthly comfort—the little ewe lamb of her bosom—and we heard her mother, who blessed God for the fair opening of that flower, tell with tears of joy in their eyes, how Mary sang her hymns, and with what power she prayed to God in their lowly home. Happily now for her, the mother lies at rest in the lonely church yard; but her Mary, who from a Sabbath school scholar had grown into a Sabbath school teacher, walks on King street another victim added to the thousands—whose first fall often dates from festive seasons—who begin with a glass and end with a bottle. We are not the enemies, but on the contrary, the friends of every recreation and amusement, which can alleviate the spirits, and give a tone of cheerfulness to the mind and health to the body. These would help our cause instead of hindering it. In innocent sports, expeditions to the country, visits to museums, gardens, picture galleries, public buildings, let such amusements be sought and enjoyed.

A SENSIBLE ARISTOCRAT.—The Duke of Argyle is one of the clever men of Great Britain. As a statesman and writer on philosophical subjects he is equally worthy of admiration, while as a paterfamilias he is worthy of envy. He is but forty-nine years old, and has five sons and seven daughters. The oldest of these young people, the Marquis of Lorne, is now twenty-four, and the youngest, a daughter, is but five years old. The Duke has just put one of his boys to learn the tea business in one of the largest China houses in London.—Such a step was never before taken by so great a nobleman, and the event has caused a stir in the aristocratic world in England. It proves, however, that the Duke has more sense and less prejudice than generally belongs to his class. He appreciates the change that is coming over public affairs, and perceives that commerce is quite as important as politics or soldiering. The truth is that the noblest place for any man is that in which he can be most useful; and the Duke of Argyll merits the respect of the world for having so conspicuously recognized the value of this principle.

AN OLD TRICK REVIVED.—A French paper relates that as a farmer was in a cart driving to St. Bonnet-le-Chatteau (Loire), he was accosted by a Sister of Charity, who asked him for a seat. He consented; but in aiding the other to get up he became certain that the hand that he took was that of a man. Thinking it best to dissemble for the moment, he suffered the other to take a seat by his side, but on reaching a hill told his companion that they must alight to let their horse walk up the ascent. The pretended Sister got down first, which she had no sooner done than he gave the lash to his horse, and started off at full speed. The next moment he heard a shrill whistle, and in looking back saw that several ill-looking fellows had joined his late companion, and that the whole party were going across the fields to intercept him further on. He reached the town, however, in safety, and on examining his carriage found in it a basket left behind by the Sister, containing 500 francs in money, a pistol, and a pennard, the whole of which he deposited in the hands of the police.

FLIRTATIONS.—For every man whose heart is broken—we use the phrase current in its romantic sense among women, and which among men denotes the state of mind revealed by profuse smoking and spasmodic devotion to billiards—twenty have their eyes opened, and are on the whole considerably improved by the process. We forget to whom is due the credit of the remark, that a man's usefulness generally dates from the time he loses his interest in woman; but, without going so far, we are content to rest upon the conclusion of our own experience—that until a man has had one or two serious flirtations, he is not to be relied on for earnest effort.

Mr. Shaw, the well-known book auctioneer, has returned to Montreal from his book battle at Chicago, Cincinnati, &c. U. S. Collector Hall, of HUDSON BAY TERRITORY.

At an adjourned meeting of the general court of the Hudson Bay Company, in London, on the 9th of April, the following motion and amendment thereto were put. The motion was carried by a large majority.

"That it is expedient to accede to the terms proposed, and to surrender to Her Majesty's government all of this company's territorial rights in Rupert's Land, and in any other part of British North America not comprised in Rupert's Land, Canada, British Columbia, and that the governor and committee be, and are hereby, authorized to make such surrender, on being assured that the terms have been agreed to by the Government and Parliament of Canada, provided that the acceptance of the terms by the Government and Parliament of Canada shall have been signified to them by Her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonies, within six months after the passing of this resolution, and that for that purpose the governor and committee cause to all such measures as may be found necessary for effecting such surrender, and for securing to the company the rights and reservations to which, by the terms of the letter from Sir Frederic Rogers, this company will be entitled."

Mr. L. W. Boone said he rose to propose an amendment. He hoped that he might be permitted to preface it by a few remarks. His amendment, he believed, was in accordance with the determined feeling of a large portion of those present.—(Hisses.) To be the advocates of such a proposal as that before them was to pronounce a verdict on themselves. It was a suppender on the interests of the company. If they depended upon their charter they were safe. Any remarks having a tendency to confuse the judgment of the shareholders, he looked upon it with suspicion. If those to whom they had trusted their persons, surrendered the power of the company, it was madness. The amendment he had to propose was as follows: "That the shareholders, while entertaining no doubt of the wish of Earl Granville to be impartial and being anxious to comply with the wishes of Her Majesty's Government to assist Canada to extend her dominion to the Pacific, are yet compelled to respectfully decline the acceptance of the proposal submitted to them, of the interests."

AURORAL DISPLAYS.—On Thursday night between ten and eleven o'clock a most beautiful phenomenon, the aurora borealis, covered the greater portion of the heavens, and was observed by hundreds of curious people. It was the most brilliant of these frequent displays which has taken place for years. Brilliant bands of red and green light, reaching from east to the western horizon, as far south as the eye could reach, suddenly changed into knots over head, which sent forth rays in every direction, like the fellowes of a wheel. These streamers were very bright, and nothing grander than the whole sight could be pictured in the imagination. Those who were out late enjoyed a remarkable sight, and those who were not so fortunate as to see it have a deep loss to regret.

Telegrams from New York, Philidelphia and other American cities give glowing accounts of the display. The aurora current effected the telegraph wires east and west, almost suspending operations, being the greatest since the electric storm of 1859. At both places mentioned the telegraph lines were worked without the aid of batteries for some time.

It was rumoured in London quite recently that the Duke of Cambridge has quarrelled with Mr. Cardwell, the Secretary of State for War, and although Commander-in-Chief, a Royal Highness, and a cousin of the Queen's had been very severely snubbed by his plebian superior. He returned it would appear, to carry out some of the proposed reductions determined upon by the present economic Ministry.

The steamer Ueida, en route for St. Louis, with discharged soldiers from the various posts up the Missouri river, struck a snag on the 24th inst., about thirty miles above Sioux City, and, while backing, her boiler exploded, killing and wounding a large number. Fifty persons are reported missing. The steamer Undine left Sioux City immediately for the wreck with a number of physicians.

People recently arrived in St. Louis from New Mexico, and army officers from the Plains say they anticipate the worst Indian war this summer ever known. The Indians are concentrated. They will sell their skins, get their ammunition, arms, powder, and lead, and when the grass is strong, about July, they will make a general warfare upon the whites.

George Clark, a young man about 18 years of age, son of Dr. Clark of Ingersoll, whilst out pigeon shooting on Wednesday, 14th inst., accidently shot himself. He had laid his gun down against a log, and in taking it up by the muzzle the hammer caught, it went off, the whole charge entering his left lung just above the heart. Death ensued immediately.

The extraordinary abundance of pigeons this year is likely to be attended with a corresponding increase of accidents. A young man named Clarke, killed by a discharge of shot in his lungs at Ingersoll; a boy named Spinks wounded at Woodstock by a burst gun, and another boy, Cowgle, head shot off at St. Catharines—are among the casualities of last week.

The sugar season is now nearly ended all over. Farmers in the neighbourhood of Ieon, in the townships of Southwold and Dunwich, have been making large quantities. Some have two tons, some a ton and a half, some one ton, and some less. In Yarmouth, too, there have been very considerable quantities made.

Absalom Harvey, the young man who was said to have shot and wounded his father, at Fergus, on the 19th March last, was tried at the Guelph Assizes, and acquitted. His mother swore positively that he was not the person who fired the shot, but refused to say who did.

It is rumoured that John C. Breckenridge will go into the Kentucky Legislature at its next session in place of Preston who now holds the seat for Fayette County, but who will give way to Breckinridge.—The health of Breckinridge in good, and he is worth $60,000.

Upon embarking recently for Algeria Marshal McMahon said to the officers who accompanied him to the steamer:—"I shall soon return. Before the 31st of May the cannon will have thundered on the bank of the Rhyne and those of the Danube."

The prospect of Beaverton soon becoming a railway terminus has given an impetus to building. The first sod on the Beaverton extension is expected to be turned this week.

PARLIAMENTARY.

April 22nd. 1869.

A petition for amendment to the charter of the Huron and Ontario Ship Canal Company was presented by Mr. Harrison. The petition was read. Also a petition for the repeal of the 5 per cent duty on imported books; this will hardly be effected. The whole sale book-sellers are supposed to be getting it up for their purposes.

The Bagot election committee reported, but considered that there was nothing alleged sufficient to render the election void:—They said: "as there is no allegation of knowledge on the part of the member as to the alleged spiritual influence said to have been exercised at said election, wh ch said spiritual influence, if properly alleged and true, would of itself, in the judgment of the Committee, be sufficient to render the election absolutely null and void." Priestly influence in their opinion would be sufficient cause for upsetting an election.

In reply to a question concerning the employment of a person to endeavour to secur a Reciprocity, Sir J. A. Macdonald said the Government had no such person or persons employed.

There appears to be some intention of making Dominion day a statutory holiday.

A committee has been appointed to enquire into the working of the act imposing a duty on shingle bolts, stave bolts, pine, oak and spruce logs.

Sir J. A. Macdonald informed the House, in answer to a question of Mr. Bourassa, that there had been no correspondence on the subject of a Reciprocity treaty.

The public accounts are promised in a few days.

Senator Burreau moved for an address to His Excellency for documents relative to the trial of Priest McMahon of Fenian raid notoriety, with the intent of asking for his release from Penitentiary. The motion was granted.

Sir. J. A. McDonald refused to give any information relative to filling up the vacancies in the Cabinet.

Sir. J. A. has introduced a Bill for assimilating the laws of the different provinces.—A Bill relative to Insolvency is also introduced; in their present stage it is useless to more than refer to them.

Mr. Boswell has also introduced a Bill to limit the rate of interest to 7 per cent.

In reply to Mr. Bodwell, Sir John A. Macdonald said the government did not intend to change the postage law.

In reply to Mr. Thompson, of Haldimand, Sir John A. Macdonald said the government did not intend to make newspapers from the office of publication free by post.

The fact is, there is nothing of importance transpiring at the Capital. The members are preparing business, but hitherto little has been done.

Mr. Galt has moved for the correspondence and cost relative to the Fenian raid, and in doing so referred to a certain resolution of a Washington Senator, relative to obtaining Canada as compensation for the Alabama claims. The producing of these papers will bring to our information expenses of the raid and will show how ready Canadians are to bear those costs rather than have anything to do with our American cousins.

Hon. Mr. Rose moved the reception of the report of the Committee of the Whole on the resolution declaring it expedient to confirm the agreement made between the Government and Great Western Railroad Company, with reference to the debt due by that Company to Her Majesty.

Mr. Oliver said he had read the copy of the agreement, and failed to see any reason for the reduction to be allowed the Company. He found that the Company was solvent and wealthy, and if so, why should the Government lose the large amount proposed to be written off. The net balance due the Dominion on the 1st January, 1869, as he found it in the statement submitted, was $4,396,885 27. From which it was proposed to strike off the sum of $1,143,984; making that amount a deal to a. This, he thought, was too much to lose at present.—In saying that he was actuated by no feeling against that Corporation. On the contrary, he believed that if any Company in the country ought to get an an allowance it was the Great Western, but he held that none of the commercial undertakings should be upheld by compulsory taxation on the people. Besides the finances of the Dominion were not at all in such a flou ishing condition as to allow them to relinquish this large amount. By a return brought down to the House it was apparent that five or six million dollars of Intercolonial Railroad funds had been used to retire debentures and floating debt overdue, and bearing interest at 6 and 7 per cent. The monies deposited by the Insurance Companies with the Government had also been used by them.

The report was received and a Bill introduced founded on the resolutions.

OUR CRIMINALS.

It is a pleasing feature in the records of our late courts in this county, that there are no grossly aggravated crimes, such as are too often recorded in connection with cities and sometimes with frontier towns. The scum of American cities infest those Canadian towns and cities that are easy of access to them, and following the training they receive across the lines, they ply their arts in their new positions.

As our towns increase in population we may expect crime to increase also,—the number of criminals being largely increased by young boys and too often girls coming into contact with those hardened in vice and profligacy.

The present system of punishing crime is not calculated to remove it, nor even to lessen it. The young person convicted of crime is put into jail for three, six, or twelve months, as the case may be, and during that time has positively nothing to do. Idleness, it is well known strengthens with being indulged, and at the end of the period of confinement, the person is set afloat again on the world with his mind averse to work for a living, and the idea strengthens into a habit by a period of confinement, where he is well provided for and kept clean and healthy at the public expense. He has found that imprisonment is not the monster represented; he considers it only a bug-bear to frighten children, and the result of his trial of it only strengthens his determination to make a living without work, by hook or by crook. Almost all experience proves, that few, very few, are ever reclaimed from vice by the present system of punishment. Confinement in Penitentiary has just the same effect, if not somewhat worse. The only good resulting from our present mode, in general, is, that the country is relieved from their presence and depredations during the period of their imprisonment, and this is not to be lightly thought of.

In our Jails there is no way provided for making criminals earn their own living.—They have neither wood to cut, nor water to draw. There is no convenient method of having them break stones for the streets even, and when any work is to be done even on the Jail premises, men are hired to perform it, from the consideration that it cost as much to watch them if employed as to pay for the work entirely. Thus the very idea of making everything pay, prevents the carrying out of any system of making criminals work. If it should cost as much to watch them as to pay for the work, what of it? would not the end proposed, punishment of crime, be better effected, thereby?

There can be no doubt but that their work could be utilized if there was legal machinery provided; but a false humanity shudders from the idea of treating Criminals harshly. Making them work however need not be harshness, they should not be abused, but most assuredly they should be compelled to work as hard as the laboring man who has to provide his own living.

FALLEN WOMEN.

This is a class of our fellow beings for which nothing, or almost nothing, is done. Men effect their ruin, but do little to restain them. The history of all who inhabit houses of infamy and prostitution to-day, is: seduction, desertion, alienation of friends, poverty, crime, present and eternal ruin; and the hard-hearted wretch who causes this shudders not, stands the streets with as high a head as if murder was not written on his brow, is as honored in society, as respected in his social position as if the blood of a victim was not crying for vengeance. Our object now, however, is not a homily on this kind of crime, but to draw the attention of the more humane and merciful to some way of reclaiming such unfortunate creatures, or if they cannot be entirely reclaimed, at least an effort can be made, and let the success of the work be left to be recorded hereafter.

By the present jail statistics, 13 cents a day provides a reasonable supply of wholesome food for every prisoner committed to the jail This amount therefore would suffice for daily provisions in any calculation that we make. At present the jail matron receives a yearly allowance for her attendance to the female prisoners; a very small sum added to this allowance would ensure her services towards directing the industry of unfortunate females that might be confined in jail. Their labour would do more than pay their way. Under the proper management of a wise matron from 25 to 30 cents at least, could be earned by every female. In the old jail there is abundant room, we are informed, for a magdalen asylum, where they might be away from the other prisoners, and where they could be taught to support themselves and to cultivate self-respect. The Sheriff informed us, lately, that very many of those who have been committed for drunkenness and prostitution, at their dismissal ask what are they now to do. No one will employ them; to die with hunger they cannot, and to get away from their old companions is an impossibility if they are set adrift again; and under the circumstances, their return to crime is not to be wondered at.

Can there be nothing done for those miserable creatures? Not a few of them perhaps desire to reform, but cannot from their position, and return to old associates. There can be no doubts but that their own industry properly directed would support them and leave a balance to their credit at the end of every year, which sum might be kept to give them at any time it should be thought wise to do so. There would be no difficulty in getting the aid of several pious ladies to direct so good an undertaking. The commencement of such a work in Peterborough would arouse other towns to go and do likewise. If there are any means required at first the literality of the people of Peterboro will not be found wanting in this matter. Rooms in the old jail can be obtained by applying to the Sheriff, no doubt.

The object will recommend itself to the humane, and especially to the female portion of our population; and we strongly urge the claims of those "poor unfortunates" to the consideration of all who wish to raise the fallen, to help the weak, to save a fellow-being from ruin, to diminish crime and to prevent the terrible effect upon others of association with crime.

THE CROPS.—Spring has at length made its appearance, and farmers are busy plowing and sowing. The fall wheat looks quite healthy; no complaints of winter-killing are heard of in this section of the country. The weather is favorable, there being but little, if any frost yet. The quantity of spring crops will hardly reach that of other years, on account of the short time to get the grounds ready and crops in. The farming community, however, are in a position to make the best of every moment, and they will do so.

SPRING ASSIZES.

THURSDAY.

The Court met at 9.30 a.m.

PRESENTMENT OF THE GRAND JURY.

The Grand Jury on Thursday made the following presentment, and were discharged:—

County of of Peterborough,
Spring Assizes, 1869.

To His Lordship Mr. Justice A. Wilson.

The Jurors of our Lady the Queen present: That they have examined the Court House and Jail, and find that the manner in which the rooms are kept reflect credit upon the Sheriff and those under him.

That it is much to be regretted time should be lost, and great expense incurred by sending to the Assizes petty cases of Larceny, and would suggest that it is desirable that cases of this kind should be disposed of in a summary manner by a Magistrate in the first instance, under all circumstances.

That the present change in the law permitting civil cases to be tried and disposed of by a Judge—without the intervention of a Jury—is in the opinion of the Jurors aforesaid likely to give great satisfaction to the country at large.

That the Jurors aforesaid, have perceived with regret the absence of proper machinery for securing the attendance at the Assizes, and before Grand Jurors, of witnesses from a distance, in criminal cases: difficulty having been experienced by the Jurors aforesaid, in the case of Simard, owing to an important witness being in the penitentiary, and others in Belleville, no steps apparently have been taken to have them present.

In conclusion, the Jurors aforesaid congratulate your Lordship on the smallness of the Criminal Business at this Assizes, and the trivial nature of the cases which it has been their duty to enquire into.

All of which is humbly submitted.

W. CLUXTON, Foreman.

Grand Jury Room,
22nd, April, 1869.

Geo. Graham, a lad of about 16 or 17 years, was arraigned on the charge of stealing a cap from Croft's Hotel, (the property of a Mr. T. A. Davidson, of the Township of Mariposa) and pleaded "not guilty." Mrs. Croft testified to Graham having entered the bar room about ten o'clock, the night on which the cap was stolen. He also asked to be kept for the night, but was refused, when he left in a hurry. Suspicion fell on the boy and a warrant was issued for him, but before the constable could execute it Graham returned with the cap saying he had taken it while drunk. Mrs. Croft's evidence went to show that he was not drunk. The Jury rendered a verdict of guilty, with recommendations to mercy on account of his age.

He was sentenced to ten days in jail at hard labour.—a sentence lenient enough, considering the poor excuse (drunkenness) offered in palliation of his crime. Sidney Smith for prisoner.

The Queen vs. Daniel Shannahan, (of Ennismore) was the next. Shannahan is also a lad of 15 or 16 years. He was accused of stealing a horse, the property of Geo. Calbert, also of Ennismore. He took the horse to Bobcaygeon and left him at a kind of boarding house kept by a McEmeir; he also left orders to feed him half a bushel of oats daily until he returned for him. His pretence was that he was going to Mr. Hickie's, to have the horse work in the shanty with a horse of Hickie's. Mr. Calbert got track of his horse and followed him and got him at Bobcaygeon. He obtained a warrant for young Shannahan, who had given his name as Garry, and Mr. Gifbe arrested him 30 miles back of Bobcaygeon.

The Jury in this case also brought in a verdict of guilty, strongly recommending the lad to mercy on account of his age. He was sentenced to 6 months in jail, at hard labour. S. Smith, for deft.

The Queen vs. James Murphy—For stealing a buffalo robe and for assault. He was put on his trial for the assault, on which he pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to pay to Her Majesty a fine of $50 and give security for keeping the peace toward Mr. Lehane, the prosecutor, under a penalty of $400—himself $200, and two sureties each $100—and to lie in jail until the fine be paid, and satisfactory surety given.

Stock vs. Gilmour & Co.—This was a case for damages for taking timber off two lots, number 24 and 25 in the 16th concession of Chandos, the property of the plf.

The witness Horan, employed by Messrs. Gilmour & Co., proved to cutting timber on these lots in the winter of '67-68, and also in the winter of '68-69, in all about 230 trees. It was held, however, that the present suit must be in reference to what was cut before the 21st of January, 1869, the day on which the writ in the suit was issued. The two Horans and Michael O'Brien gave very straight-forward evidence, but one witness, Lane, had evidently a bad memory(?) on all matters touching the case in question.

The defence was based more or less on the plea that there was no such man as Peter Stock, the plf.; that Mr. John Carroll was the real plf.; that Mr. Stock, if he had existence, never was in Chandos, and hence was not a settler or justly entitled to a patent for said lands; that said lands were obtained under false pretences, and hence, that Peter Stock had no right to come to court at all.

The Horans proved performing the settlement duties—clearing 16 acres of land and building a house or shanty, 16 x 25.

Mr. Collins testified to the impossibility of going on the lots except in winter, for want of roads and bridges, and to the impossibility of putting in crops on this account.

The Judge in charging the jury said, that they must consider the crown patent good and valid, as far as this case was concerned, as to call that in question would be unwise and contrary to law, no matter how fraudulently obtained; while it existed uncancelled it was a good and sufficient deed. That this patent deed gave the holder the right to all the timber on the lots from and after the day of its being issued; that no license of a lumberman extended any longer than till the lands were patented; that Peter Stock, real or fictitious, as named therein, had a right to seek damages under that patent, and that the matter was to establish the amount of damages. He had also a right to damages for trespass from the time the lot was paid for. The whole charge appeared strongly in favor of the plf.

The jury rendered a verdict for plf., $3 per tree for 124 trees.

D. W. Dumble and H. Cameron for plf.; S. Smith for deft.

FRIDAY.

James Connors and J. Scott were brought before the court as lunatics, and after investigation, were both ordered to remain in custody. Judge Wilson said he would leave the matter of Scott in the hands of Mr. Denaistoun, County Judge. Jas. Connors, known as Professor Connors, desired to be out to be near Dr. Kinnear, on account of a sore finger for which he desired to get medical treatment. He agreed, however, to remain in jail.

Another lunatic, was dismissed.

Morton vs. Stone.—This was a case in which Mr. David Morton, of Otonabee, had replevined a horse from Mr. Stone, of Douro. Mrs. Stone had purchased the horse from one O'Neil, whom Mr. Morton had hired to go to the shanties. O'Neil got drunk and disposed of the horses—one to Mrs. Stone and one to Mr. Irwin, Mrs. Stone having given $30 in cash and her note, or rather Daniel Stone's note, payable to O'Neil only for $35.

Mrs. Stone proved to buying the horse at a fair price, and also to her asking to get her money and note from Morton when he first demanded the animal.

O'Neil had given $17 of the money to Mr. Plaus, of Lakefield, and the note, from whom Mr. Morton got this sum and the note to go and try to get back his horses.

Mrs. Stone also tried to establish the fact that O'Neil had power from Morton to sell the horses if he could. The chief part of the defence was, that Daniel Stone, the deft., did not buy the horse, and Mrs. Stone did—he being 30 miles from home at the time. To this it was answered Mrs. Stone was the chief party anyway, and bought and sold and managed the business generally.

That Mr. Morton was bound to offer to return the money and note when he demanded the horse. To this it was replied that he did offer all he got.

The third plea was that Morton, when he went to Irwin for the other horse, partly admitted O'Neil's having leave to sell the horses by his (Morton's) saying all right.—To this it was replied that Morton's reply was just a careless one, to which was added "we'll see about it." The Judge in his charge held that Stone was liable for the act of his wife as his agent—she being accustomed to do business; that Morton would be bound to offer the return of the money and notes if he had been the party who sold the horse to Mrs. Stone, but his servant having sold the horse, Morton had a right to him, whether he offered the equivalent given for him or not, and that although Morton had the equivalent in his pocket she had no right to suppose he had, and hence no right to demand it back. Morton's keeping the money in his possession for a time appeared not to strengthen the case.

The jury, however, rendered a verdict for Morton. Weller & Hatton for plf; S. Smith for deft.

The case of the Queen vs. Simard for stealing furs from the store of Mr. Lech, furrier, was put off till June. Some witnesses have to be brought from the Kingston Penitentiary.

Cost for each prisoner per day 13 cents.

The chief crimes are 'drunk and disorderly' and 'leaving employment,' a few for larceny, and one or two for assault. The number received as lunatics is large, being 8, and as nothing can be done in the jail for the proper treatment of that class of individuals, it is to be regretted that there is not room in the public asylums, where they could receive medical attention suited to their condition. Perhaps we may hope for better things when those new buildings are erected.

GREAT AUCTION SALE.—We would call attention to the auction sale of Electro-plated Ware, &c., of Mr. Reid. This gentleman visited us last year and sold large quantities of goods. He gave general satisfaction then in all his transactions, and again solicits an examination of his goods before sale.

TEACHERS' MEETING.—The Teachers' Class will be held in the Union School on the 2nd Saturday of May. Subjects—Reading, from 66th to 77th page. Grammar, "The Coral Reef." Algebra, from 96th to 98th page inclusive. Arithmetic, Logarithms. Euclid, from 16th to 32nd Prop., first book.

HOW TO MAKE CRIMINALS PAY

A correspondent of an American paper throws out some hints on this subject that deserves at least a passing notice. He suggests a kind of reformatory, to be erected over a stone quary or iron mine, with suitable protection against escape—on the plan of a work house. Here he would have the criminal convicted to hard labor made work 12 hours a day; he would treat them kindly, have them taught by means of night schools and lectures. He next proposes to pay them a rate per day, according to the sum they could earn over and above the charge of keeping. The following is his scheme:—

"With 50 cents a day for his work, over and above the charge for his keeping, until his indebtedness shall be paid off, which is to arise by the payment of premiums varying from $100 to $500 on the delivery of an offender, according to the degree of the offence, from vagrancy up to burglary, including gambling, prize-fighting, adulteration of food, breach of trust, stock stealing, and the like. The correspondent hopes that the offer of such bounty would "demoralize the demoralizers," and would incite "the rogue to catch the rogue." The amount should be charged to the debit of the prisoner, to be paid off by the credit of fifty cents a day, over his board and keeping, for his work, which, he believes, would be worth two dollars, and, in the case of some individuals, even twice that amount, and thus the asylum would be the gainer. He believes that the money drawn from the Treasury by the payment of these could be well spent, as it would save the public thousands of dollars in property, to say nothing of breaking up the missionary efforts of rogues among their companions. It would be a thousand per cent. better than to invest the money in building more penitentiaries. It would stop the supply from which penetentiaries are fed; it would make every rogue a detective on his confederate for the sake of the bounty, and, what is a still better reason it would pay its own way.

SPRING FLOODS.

Montreal has suffered from the floods this season to a greater degree than has been the case for many years. Griffintown suffering most of course. The people could not leave their houses for several days. Many of them were compelled to seek refuge in hay lofts and other elevated places. Those whose stoves were on the under floors were forced to leave them there and protect themselves against the cold as best they could. When the police passed along, it was in boats, canoes, or other rafts; and the people went on planks or pieces of timber, whatever they could get. They found several parts in which on the streets, the water was seven feet deep, preventing any escape except by means of boats or rafts. In the back streets and lanes, many were suffering from want of food. Several whole families were found, who had got no food for 24 hours. The police and city authorities did all in their power for those requiring assistance, by taking them bread; but it is easily understood how many would be neglected, perhaps unwittingly. At several other places in both Upper and Lower Canada, the freshets have done vast damage, carrying away dams, bridges, etc.

This County with all its water is generally free from the effects of sudden freshets; our streams are rapid and well protected by banks. Floods are most destructive when they flow through level tracts of country, or where the dam work consists of earth. The ice getting out of the creeks before the raising of the water has also prevented damage being done. The river here has not been as high for several years, but it has abundant room for escape.

ONE MORE VICTIM.

Died, on Friday morning at the Stewart House, Wm. Carr, aged about 48 years.—Deceased went to his bed in his usual health, but in the morning was so ill that Mr. Uin thought it prudent to call in a physician, but his efforts were unavailing. The deceased was hostler at the hotel, and was given to drink; this and irregular habits proved to much for his constitution, and carried him away. He leaves a wife and family; his friends are very respectable people, and reside in the Township of Clarke. He was about three weeks at the Stewart House.

This is another warning to young men who are not afraid to indulge in the "curse of Canada." The writer knew the deceased when a young man, he then promised fair to be a respectable, industrious member of society; like too many others he began to tipple—take a glass with a friend, nothing more. This social glass ended in the destruction of its participant: Intoxicating liquors lead to bad company, ruin of family hopes, and end in death.

The Printers of Montreal are at present on a strike. The publishers are therefore asking forbearance on account of the difficulty of getting matter enough set up. They appear willing to work their way without the members of the "Union,"—they deserve to succeed. They are already paying good wages. The cost of living, too, is less than it was during the past years, and hence the absence of any necessity to try to compel employers to give more than they feel able to pay. Unions, too thought of worn out, infirm or suffering members, are good; but Unions, formed for the object now sought by the Montreal Typographical Union, are bad, being calculated, in the end, to react injuriously. One uniform rate of wages always injures the good workmen, by bringing them to the level of the poor hands. It would certainly be as well to let every man make the best bargain he could with his employer, then the worthy man will get good wages, while those who do not deserve as much will be compelled to take what they can get. There should be common sense enough among Types to know that it is unjust to try to compel an employer to pay a poor hand more than he is worth.

MISS RYE'S "GUTTER" CHILDREN.—A Mr. Chesshire in a letter to the Times represents Miss Rye's schemes of bringing "gutter" children of London to America as unwise and impracticable. In its stead he advises sending boys from the reformatories and filling their places by "gutter" girls, who could thus be prepared for emigrating. This has more common sense about it than Miss Rye's scheme.

CONCERT.—A concert on a grand scale will be given by Mr. Rackett, Bandmaster, on Friday evening, May 7th. From the array of names of ladies and gentlemen who will lend their assistance on the occasion, a musical treat may be looked for.

A paper styled the Imperialist has been started in the United States. It is opposed to Republicanism of every form. Is Grant making an effort for empire? Perhaps he may attempt a Protectorate before his term of office expires.

A NEW JOURNAL IN TORONTO.—The Evening Tribune recently made its appearance in Toronto. It appears to be well conducted, and is to be somewhat after the style of the Montreal Witness—religio-political. It has a good work in view, the stemming of vice, and the propagation of truth. A work which we would fain believe the press of the Province is engaged in. We wish the Tribune success.

Frank Leslie's Lady's Magazine for May has be n received. It contains some beautiful Colored Fashion Plates and the usual Patterns. This excellent gazette of fashion takes a first place among the periodicals of the class. The reading matter, too, is very attractive. "The Flower of Marseilles," a beautiful plate in oil colors accompanies the May number.

The Daily Telegraph is now greatly enlarged and improved; equal in size to the Leader and Globe. Being of the same political creed as the Leader, that paper will have to look well to its laurels. The Telegraph is working hard to supplant it in the affection of the Conservative party.

HYDROPHOBIA.—A man named Wralt, of Dundas, died of Hydrophobia on Monday last. He was bitten by a dog that was supposed to be rabid, a few days previously.

The Post Office at Waterdown was broken into on the night of the 25th, and $155 dollars extracted. The robber made his entrance by a cellar window.

Y. M. C. A.—The regular Public Monthly meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association will be held in the Templars' Hall, on Monday evening next, at 8 o'clock.

The following, in reference to the St. Catherines Grammar School, under the management of Mr. King, our late Principal, we clip from the St. Catharines Constitutional:—

OUR GRAMMAR SCHOOL.—It affords us much pleasure to state that our Grammar School is now in as thoroughly efficient state as its well wishers could desire it to be. A considerable sum has lately been expended in refitting, painting, and otherwise adorning the whole building, and it now appears an ornament to our flourishing town, instead of the shabby disgrace it had been for so long a period. The late action of the Trustees in engaging as Masters to co-operate with the Principal, two such thorough and respectable teachers as Mr. Elliott and Mr. Potter, has been crowned with success. Each of these gentlemen had a flourishing private school that weakened the Grammar School, which is entitled to the support of the whole community, as the community is taxed to render it as efficient as possible, and should therefore benefit from its advantages. One of these schools, Mr Potter's, has already been transferred to the Grammar School, and the other will speedily follow. As it is, there are now over 100 pupils on the roll, and there will soon be a considerable addition to that number. M. Gagnieur takes the French classes as usual, and we trust that the military drill, which was formerly kept up with great success, will be restored. We congratulate Mr. King on the thoroughly efficient position of the school over which he presides so ably, and trust that under his judicious supervision it may soon arrive. In accordance with the provisions of the new school act, at the dignity of a Collegiate Institute. We believe that we shall see it occupying that position before another year has passed away.

GRANBY, Quebec, April 22.—A number of citizens, who were looking at the flood from the principal bridge in this place, were drowned. The water, which is very high, having undermined the masonry of one end of the bridge, it gave way, and the end of the bridge fell about 25 feet, sliding the people who were on it into the water, which is running swiftly at that point. One or two, who were on the bridge, escaped, and 12 persons were drowned:—Mrs. S. C. H. Miner, her mother, and eldest daughter; Mrs. John Bradford, her sister, son, and daughter; Mrs. Z. Harvey, Patrick Hack, one of the leading magistrates; and E. H Gilmour and son.

Dams and bridges are going all along the river. The water is very high.

THE QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY.—The day fixed for the celebration of the Queen's birthday in England has, by Her Majesty's command, been changed from Saturday, May 29, to Wednesday, June 2. We doubt not that the same day will be adopted here, on which Canadians demonstrate the continued respect and admiration in which they hold the character and functions of the Queen.

[The fixing of the day in London depends upon a variety of contingencies that do not in the least affect the other parts of her Dominions. The 24th of May will be the day celebrated in Canada, and the chap who wrote the above is an ass].

No testimony speaks higher of Jacobs' Liquid than its merits deserves.

A HEARTLESS SWINDLE.—We gather from a letter of the Rev. George Young, Methodist Minister at the Red River, recently published, that some recently births have been played off on the poor sufferers there. He says:—"In a few cases, we have heard of down-right roguery in connection with the 'relief' provisions which have come in. All thanks to the noble hearted donors, for their most generous and timely acts; but all assure, and that of heaviest pressure, be on those who have tried to make gain out of this so much needed 'relief' to the diminishing of its quantity. One barrel marked flower was found to contain 'sharps' or 'middlings,' worse still, a barrel marked 'pork' contained the poorest and most bony beef, and worst of all, one barrel marked 'prime mess pork' contained a few pieces of swine flesh on top, and then the carcass of a poor, ill-

TAX ON KNOWLEDGE.—An effort is being made throughout the Dominion to have the duty on books removed We believe it is not in keeping with general British practice to tax the bible, and other works of an instructive and useful character; and yet such a tax was imposed in Canada at the last session of the Dominion Parliament. With a view to having this outrage removed, petitions are being prepared for presentation to Parliament during the present session.

Twenty years experience in using Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers have proved them to be the most effectual remedy for coughs, and irritation of the throat, caused by cold, or unusual exertion of the vocal organs; public speakers and singers will find them most beneficial. The entire freedom from all deleterious ingredients renders Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers, or Cough and Voice Lozenges, a safe remedy for the most delicate person, and has caused them to be held in high esteem by all who have used them. Sold by all medicine dealers at 25cts per box.

DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and certify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hord & Co. is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers.

At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since Ex-President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to excite the ire or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbours, they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; an immediate outbreak was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had taught all nations. "In time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

Is not this a lesson to us to fortify our Southern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of rheumatism, coughs, colds, cholics, bowel complaints, and all other diseases incident to this climate by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," Can be had of any Medicine Dealer for 25cts per bottle

APRIL.—The Alabama claims were allowed to disturb too long the citizens of the two great Anglo-Saxon communities. The carelessness of one set of statesmen, the indifference of another set, and the cupidity or prejudice of another class, have combined to keep this quasi casus rankling in the great political system, like consumption in the human frame, which spreads so rapidly until checked and expelled by the great SHOSHONEES REMEDY. For sale by all Druggists.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and safe administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

KANOC, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th, 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ancles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonees Remedy; I believe it will cure you,

MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this 26th day of February, 1869.

A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

AIN'T I SWEET.

From "Peterd Musical Monthly," for April.

My good mamma, she feels so sad,
And says I am a flirt,
Because I go to promenade
All in my walking-skirt;
She thinks I ought to be ashamed
To go out in the street,
With clothes, she says, all fussed and fixed,
To show my little feet.

We want the sanction of the gents
In all our style of clothes;
And yet I love to please mamma,
But more to please the beaux.
And ever thus you'll find it is,
When ladies walk the street;
They'll try and manage some good way
To show their pretty feet!

Our bonnets now are but a "mite,"
Though "mighty" dear they cost;
Beneath our furbelows and bows
Our little forms are lost;
The tiny heels upon our shoes,
They are so gay and neat,
And solely made, you may be sure,
To show our handsome feet!

With parasol above me held,
And our "mamma" to see,
I fascinate the darling men
Wherever I chance to be.
"Oh! what a charming, lovely girl!"
I hear them oft repeat;
To make their hearts go pit-a-pat.
I show my pretty feet!

CHORUS,

Ain't I sweet, ain't I sweet?
I know I'm sweet and have a right
To promenade the street,
And glad I am there is a style
To show my pretty feet.

Wanted a "Leedle Drunk."

'I want to get a drunk,' said a Teuton the other day to a person he met on the street: 'where I gets um, hey?'

'Want to get drunk? Well, I reckon you can get that at any saloon in town, where lemaine is sold. There is a place over the way for instance,' pointing to a saloon across the street.

Teuton went across to the saloon. Saloon keeper sat out a glass mechanically, with a look which seemed to say, well, what is it?'

'Can I get drunk here a vile?'

'Get drunk's you're mind ter, if you only pay for it,' was the reply. 'Got wiskey I'll warrant to fetch you, if you drink enough of it.'

'Se nicht ver stay. I don't want to get drunk; I only want to buy von leedle drunk.'

'If you only want a little drunk, better go and drink red wine. Don't keep it here—keep stuff for big drunk—that's all.'

'Nein, nein, nein: I want a drunk to geep in mine clothes, to lock up mine key up, unt to take me along vea der rilroad car travels in me to New York all a vile.'

'Oh, you want a trunk? Why didn' you say so in the first place? There is a trunk store over the way, if that's what you want.'

'Yah, dat is right,' and Teuton shot across the street to secure his 'leed le drunk.'

UNPLEASANT REFLECTIONS.—A few miles from Little Rock, Pa., lived a family who had in their employment a daughter of Erin. The lady having cause to doubt her honesty had a mirror hung in the sitting-room, so that while idling away her time in her boudoir, she could watch the movements of the unsuspecting Biddy in the kitchen. One day while watching her make away with a large quantity of choice preserves, she rushed into the presence of the unsuspecting girl.

How dare you eat up all my nice preserves in this way?

Although she still held the jar and spoon, she replied,—

Sure, misses, you must be mistaken, I've not tasted the first blessed mouthful; I was only fixin' them for tay.

O, Biddy! how can you deny it for I saw you from my room? Look, and she pointed to the glass that reflected the centre of her cosy boudoir, in that glass I can see all you are doing in the kitchen, and I saw you eat my preserves. If this occurs again I shall discharge you.

Biddy stood in amazement, staring at the glass a few moments, then rubbing her hand over her forehead as if trying to comprehend the extent of the magical glass, cried out,—

Ooh, and sure! its meself that has been watching (in the same place), an I've my opinion that if the master was to see how you welcome that same gentlemen partner of his in your own private parlor, 'twould be you self that would be afther bein' discharged.

It is not unnecessary to add that the glass was removed, and Biddy kept at an increased salary.

A TOUCHING LOVE STORY.—At the mature age of fourteen, I had become a being of dark imaginings, on whom the freshness of the heart had long ceased to fall like dew, in consequence of my entertaining a fruitless passion for a charming cousin of mine, who was only seven and a half years older than myself. One fine September morning, when I was about to return to school, I came to the fatal determination of declaring my passion; and, with that view, ran her to earth in a summer-house, which overlooked the lake in her father's grounds. I rushed in, and fell on my knees before her (I remember to this day how the grooves, with which the place was paved hurt them), and blurted out my love in an incoherent speech, which might have lasted three minutes, or three-quarters of an hour, as far as I am able to state at this distant period. I love to think of her now with a moderate amount of gratitude, because she did not laugh; but, helping me up, and kissing me on the forehead, she said, "Poor, dear boy; and so you are now going back to Winchester, are you? Mind you are good at your lessons; don't get flogged, which would grieve me very much: and here's half a sovereign for you, and—and I think you had better not keep the carriage waiting." To this day I cannot help thinking that it must have been excess of emotion which caused me to run away as hard as ever I could, with the coin safely stowed away in my waistcoat pocket.

WHAT KILLED HIM.—A few years ago, when Judge Gould, of Troy, lately deceased, was holding court in that city, a prisoner was being tried before him for wilful murder, in causing the death of a man by a pistol shot. An eminent physician and surgeon was on the stand as a witness for the defence.

The prisoner's counsel, adroit lawyer, attempted to show that the man, who lived some little time after being shot, might have died from some other cause, and examined his witness after this style:

'Doctor, would not such a thing cause death?'

'Oh, yes, sir.'

'Well, doctor, might not this man have died from such and such causes?'

'Oh, yes he might'

'This is quite sufficient for us,' exclaimed the defendent's counsel, with an air of triumph, twirling his eye glass.

Judge Gould turned on his seat, beat his large, keen, penetrating black eyes full on the witness, and said a little sharply:

'Doctor, you have now told us what might have caused this man's death; what did cause his death?'

'The bullet, sir,' answered the witness. This ended the case.

Here is the wail of "Jim's" "Lost Love:"

I met her by the cellar door—
The look she giv was cold and stern
Her eyes looked pitchforks into mine—
And mine looked pisen into hern.

For we had loved in days gone by;
Her daddy said that I might take her;
But, alas! for my dreme of wedded bliss,
She got up and got with a Dutch shoemaker.

No more girls for me if I knows it—
No more frauds me luv to dim;
In the words of the poet, "Not for Joseph,"
And he might have added, "Not for Jim!"

When Mrs. Robinson published her "Sappho and Phaon," she wrote thus to Boaden, the newspaper editor:—'Mrs. Robinson would thank Mr. Boaden for a dozen puffs for 'Sappho and Phaon.' By a mistake of the postman, this note was delivered to Mr. Bowden, the pastry cook, who sent her this answer:—Mr. Rowden's respectful compliments to Mrs. Robinson, and should be very happy to serve her; but as she is not a regular customer, he cannot send the puffs for the young folks without receiving the money.'

LOST!—A small lady's watch with a white face; also, two ivory young ladies' work boxes. A mahogany gentleman's dressing case and a small pony, belonging to a young lady with a silver mane and tail.

A HEART.

I have a heart to give,
Who'll take it—
Behold it from every woe,
And will not break it?

I have a heart to lose,
Who'll win it—
Find out the depths of love
Now hidden in it?

I have a heart to give,
Who'll have it?
From trouble and from care
Who'll save it?

I have a heart to lose,
Who'll reach it?
To love him back again
Who'll teach it?

Heathenism and the Female Sex.

"Heathenism teaches us that the woman has no other God upon earth but her husband. If he be aged, drunken, degraded, or a debauchee, she must still regard him as her God, and obey him with her life, spying no defect in his character. The wife who wishes to perform a sacred ablution must wash the feet of her lord, and drink the water. She is made to think that longing after a better state is impiety toward God. Nothing but the up-setting of this whole system and the introduction of a new one, will bring her any relief.—Rhe is at present shut up beyond the hope of redemption.

"In proportion as woman throughout the world is distant from the cross of Jesus Christ, in the same proportion is she unhonored, unestimated, downtrodden, and made the slave and the drudge of man.—And it is equally true that just in the degree in which woman is near the Atonement, and the doctrines of Evangelical Christianity, is she honored, intelligent appreciated and loved, so that she fills the exalted mission that God confers upon her. When I read the unworthy attacks sometimes made upon Christianity by women who meet in conventions to talk of their rights, spurning the hand of mercy that has elevated them, and forgetting the Bible to which they owe their all, I have wished for such women a residence of a single year in India, that they might learn that Jesus Christ, the incarnate God, is their best friend, and that the Bible is the highest chart of "woman's rights" that ever was or ever will be given. No contrast can be greater than that of the teaching in this respect of the religion which is the faith of a hundred millions of Hindus, and that which tells the husband that he is to love his wife with supreme affection, such as Jesus Christ has towards His Church, and to treat woman as God's best gift to man." Daily paper.

The Practical Sense of Rules of Table Etiquette.

Among the rules of social etiquette, many of which are undoubtedly trifling, a good number will be found to be based on a sound common sense. Consider, for example, that rule of the dinner table, do not ask twice for soup. This appears at first sight both silly and arbitrary. It is a very sensible ordinance, and is to be justified by the laws of health and the general comfort and convenience. The soup, being a fluid substance, can easily be absorbed in small quantities, and, thus taken, is a good preparature for the solidities of the dinner. If, however, the stomach is deluged with it, the appetite and digestion become weakened and there is neither the inclination to eat nor the power to digest the more substantial food essential to the due nutrition of the body. As for the convenience or comfort of the single-plate rule, no one can deny it who has looked upon an army of hungry guests whose eager appetite for the coming roast is compelled to an impatient delay by some social monster capable of asking for soup twice. The cook in the meantime is, of course, thrown out in his calculations, and the dish, when it does come at last, is either spoiled by overcooking, or cold from being withdrawn so long from the fire. The guests thus are not only tried in temper by a protracted expectation, but baulked of their anticipated enjoyment. The advantage of not putting the knife in the mouth will be obvious, we suppose, to all who are conscious that one can cut and the other is capable of being cut. There is an excellent chemical reason for that other table rule which forbids the use of a knife of steel with the fish, the ordinary sauces of which combine with that metal, and produce a composition neither wholesome nor appetizing.—Harper's Bazar.

PLUCKY PRIESTS.—An English officer who had lately visited Easter Island, in the Pacific, relates that he found there two Roman Catholic priests, who had exercised a most wholesome influence on the unsettled inhabitants. The first priest came alone, about three years ago. As soon as he landed he was robbed, and was to have been killed and eaten, but the chief interfered, and chose to have him for his slave. The next who came was a Frenchman, a most resolute looking man, with a very powerful and determined cast of physiognomy. The moment he landed they crowded down and endeavored to stone him, but he got near them and struck the first fellow he came across such a blow with his walking staff as to stun him on the spot, then walked unmolested through the crowd of swarming savages now thoroughly cowed, and since that he has never but once been molested but has them well in hand on the whole. Of course the first thing he did was to procure the liberation of the other priest, and the two have impressed on the minds of the people the idea that if they kill and eat either one or the other a ship will come and destroy them.

HOW WILL LADIES RIDE THE VELOCIPEDE?—This has been a question of interest lately, but the problem has been solved by the fashion-makers, so that the amusement of velocipeding will not be interdicted to the fair sex more than that of skating. It is thiswise: "Let the outer dress skirt be made so as to button its entire length in front; the back part should be made to button from the bottom to a point about three eights of a yard up the skirts. This arrangement does not detract at all from the appearance of an ordinary walking costume. When the wearer wishes to prepare for a drive, she simply loosens two or three of the lower buttons at the front and back, and bringing together the two ends of each side, separately, buttons them in this way around each ankle. This gives a full skirt around each ankle, and when mounted, the dress falls gracefully at each side of the front wheel."

A SEDUCER SHOT BY A WOMAN.—On Saturday evening, at Jarrettsville Hartford county, Md., Miss Cairns shot and killed Nicholas McComas. About twenty persons were seated on the porch of the village hotel, Miss Cairns suddenly appeared, and drew a pistol and fired three shots at McComas. The alleged cause of the murder was seduction. Miss Cairns had previously sued McComas for breach of promise of marriage.

DON'T CROWD.

Don't crowd! the world is broad enough
For you as well as me;
The doors of art are opened wide—
The realm of thought is free,
Of all earth's places you are right,
To choose the best you can,
Provided that you do not try
To crowd some other man.

What matter, though you scarce can count
Your piles of golden ore,
While he can hardly strive to keep
Gaunt Famine from his door?
Of willing hands and honest hearts
Alone should man be proud;
Then give him all the room he needs
And never try to crowd.

Don't crowd, proud Miss! your dainty silk
Will glisten none the less
Because it comes in contact with
A beggar's tattered dress;
This lovely world was never made
For you and I alone;
A pauper has a right to tread
The pathway to a throne.

Don't crowd the good from out your heart,
By fostering all that's bad;
But give to every virtue room
The best that may be had;
So each days record such a one
That you may well be proud;
Give each his right, give each his room,
And never try to crowd.

The Prairie du Chien Courier vouches for the occurrence, in that city, of the following amusing incident:—A little boy of some six years ran from kitchen to parlor, crying at the top of his voice: "Mamma! mamma! papa and the hired girl are fighting. Papa has got his arms around her neck and is choking her real hard, and the girl bit papa twice right in the mouth!" It is unnecessary to state that the lady of the house brought that row to a close in a hurry, and that the girl is looking for a new place.

Three bishops one day met a Jew on the highway. Thinking to rally the meek old man, first one accosted him with, 'Good day, Father Abraham; another said, 'Good day, Father Isaac; and the third added, with a sneer, 'Good day, Father Jacob.' The Jew humbly uncovered his head and replied: 'I am neither Father Abraham, nor Father Isaac, nor yet Father Jacob; but I am Saul, out seeking my father's asses, and behold, I have found three of them.' The bishops bowed their heads in shame, and went their way.

A young man asked an old man for his daughter in marriage. The answer was:—"Go into the orchard and bring in a number of apples. Give me one half of the whole number and the mother half of the balance and half an apple over, and to the daughter one half of the remainder and half an apple, and have have one left for yourself, without cutting an apple, and then, if she is willing, you can have her." He solved the question.—How many did he bring?

An itinerant dissenting minister recently delivered the following extraordinary piece of advice, as to the best mode or means of avoiding temptation. When you see a dog coming down the street, if you pick up a stone and pretend to throw it he'll cut sad run, he'd understand geology. Just the same if you see the devil coming at you, drop on your knees, and he'll cut and run, he'd understand knee-ology.

CHANGES.—A young lady, in a class studying physiology, made answer to a question put, that in six years a human body became entirely changed, so that not a particle which was in it in the commencement of the period would remain at the close of it. 'Then, Miss L.,' said the young tutor, 'in six years you will cease to be Miss L. T—' 'Why yes, sir, I suppose so,' said she, very modestly looking at the floor.

KNEETHER.—A shoemaker received a note from a lady to whom he was particularly attached, requesting him to make a new pair of shoes; and not knowing exactly the style she required, he dispatched a written missive to her asking whether she would like them to be "A round or Squire Toad?" The lady indignant at this rash specimen of orthography, replied, "Knether."

AN IRISH PILOT.—A merchant brig got a pilot on board on the south of Ireland, to take her into Cork. It become stormy, and the pilot quite lost the reckoning. 'You're a pretty pilot truly,' said the Captain, 'not to know where we are!'—'Och, my dear,' replied the pilot, 'show me the Old Head o' Kinsale, and I'll tell you where we are in an instant!'

At the Morning Star Sunday School, in New York, a teacher asked a little boy if he knew what the expression, "sowing tares" meant? "Courth I doeth," said he, pulling the seat of his little breeches around in front. "Therath a tear my ma thewed. I tared it thilding down hill."

A New Hampshire editor, who has been keeping a record of big beets, announces at last that, 'the beet that beat the beet that beat the other beet, is now beaten by a beet that beats all beets, whether the original beet, the beet that beat the beet, or the beet that beat the beet that beat the beet beet.

A cowardly fellow having kicked a newsboy the other day for pestering him to buy an evening paper, the lad waited till another boy accosted the "gentleman," and then shouted, in the hearing of all bystanders: "It's no use to try him, Jim; he can't read."

A Troy paper dresses down Miss Kellogg in the following style: "No woman can have the elements of greatness whose soul is not above paint and powder, insane hair, tight lacing and bare arms, and a boneless, nerveless, jelly quivering gait, combined with a brainless head.

A Troy paper announces that 'the Lansingburg authorities are after parties who don't clear their sidewalks with a sharp stick.' It fails to explain why they object to the use of shovels.

"My boy," said a distinguished merchant to his son, who was meditating matrimony. "be sure, in making your selection, to get hold of a piece of goods that will wash."

An advertisement in a country paper sets forth that a 'servant is wanted who can take care of children and pigs.' Pleasant association of darlings and duties.

It was a wise body who, in Wisconsin, lately resolved that, temperance is a natural virtue, and indispensable to raise men up the level of other animals.'

Why is the horse the most humane of all animals? Because he gives the bit out of his mouth, and listens to every woe.

Pretty girls are a great blessing to themselves, but they promote a great deal of foolishness among the sterner sex

'You seem to walk more erect than usual, my dear sir.' 'Yes, I have been straightened by circumstances.'

Beautiful thoughts in the mind mould the countenance in beauty; strive then to think nobly.

What wind would a hungry sailor wish for at sea? A wind that blows food, and then chops.

Why is a married man like a candle? Because he sometimes goes out at night when he ought not to.

When is a lane dangerous to walk in? When the hedges are shooting, and the bullrushes out.

Poetry.

A HOME PICTURE.

Ben Fisher had finished his hard day's work,
And he sat at his cottage door;
His good wife, Kate, sat by his side,
And the moonlight danced on the floor.
Too moonlight danced on the floor—
Her beams were clear and bright
As when he and Kate, twelve years before,
Talked of love in her mellow light.

Ben Fisher had never a pipe of clay,
And never a dram had he;
So he loved at home with his wife to stay,
And they chatted merrily;
Right merrily they chatted on, the while
Her babe slept on her breast,
While a chorus rogue with a rosy smile,
On his father's knee found rest.

Ben told how fast his potatoes grew,
And the corn in the lower field,
And the wheat on the hills had grown to need,
And promised a glorious yield;
A glorious yield in the harvest time,
And the orchard was going fair,
His sheep and his stock were in their prime,
And prosperity everywhere.

Kate said her garden looked beautiful,
Her cows and calves were fat;
That the butter that morning that Tommy churned,
Would buy him a Sunday hat;
That Jenny for "Pat" a new shirt had made,
And that, too, by the rule,
That neddy the garden could nicely spade,
And Ann was absent at school.

But slowly passed the toilworn hand
Through his locks of grayish brown—
"I tell you, Kate, what I think," said he,
"We're the happiest folks in town."
"I know," said Kate, "that we all work hard;"
Work and health together I've found,
For there's Mrs. Hall does not work at all,
And she's sick the whole year round.

"They're worth their thousands, so people say,
But I never saw them happy yet;
'Twould not be me who would take their gold,
And live in a constant fret;
My humble home has a light within,
Mrs. Hall's gold could not buy—
Fix healthy children, a merry heart,
And a husband's love-lit eye."

I fancied a tear was in Ben's dark eye—
The moon shone brighter and clearer];
I could not tell how the man should cry,
But he hitched up by Kate still nearer;
And he leaned his head on her shoulder there,
And took her hand in his—
I guess (though I looked at the moon just then)
That he left on her lips a kiss.

Selections.

JOHN HENTHORN'S TRIAL.

THE DARKNESS THAT PRECEDED THE DAWN.

One by one the charges were read over.—He, John Henthorn, stood charged with having stolen a handsome gold watch, four other articles of jewelry, and some bank notes from Ebenezer Grant, commercial traveller; and he was charged on the second count with having the above mentioned articles in his possession, knowing them to have been stolen. He was only a lad—just eighteen; he had no friends in the great city, which seemed to him so hard-hearted, at that moment to be continuing its business with the same eager roar as ever, while he stood on his trial. He had no friends! Yes, he had a dear little friend, his sister, Lucy. She was standing by, listening to the person who read over these charges in a hard, dry, matter-of-fact style, and then asked her brother—yes, though she could hardly believe it, it was her own brother John who stood there in the dock, between two policemen—asked her brother whether he was guilty or not guilty.

She listened eagerly for John's reply. She saw his mouth open and make an ineffectual effort to form the words. At length it came with a gasp: "Not guilty."

Little Lucy breathed more freely. Her little finger was laid upon her lips; her thin face was paler than ever, but her eyes were bright and anxious—no, not so much anxious as watchful and eager. She knew now—for she had heard her brother speak—that John was innocent; and though she knew—for she was nearly famished—how sore John might have been tempted by necessity, yet John's word had been passed, and John was innocent.

John was innocent; but John must be proved innocent. She knew that the gentlemen ranged in rows before the judge were all clever lawyers, who could prove that John had stolen nothing; so she slipped down from the crowd among which she was standing, and being so small, passed unobserved to the corner of the lawyers' seats. She watched all their faces for a long time. Some of them were busily engaged turning over great masses of paper and parchment; others were sitting moodily, with their hands upon their foreheads, briefless barristers who were meditating on the inequalities of the world, and how it was that "that densely stupid Fumbletrump had his hand full of cases," and they, "who could beat his head off at billiards, or any other gentlemanly employment," were left briefless. Among those unhappy and involuntarily idle barristers, was one who had for fourteen years frequented the courts, and never met with that treasure—a brief. He had no connection—no one to give him a start. His little fortune was ebbing slowly away. He had managed to pick up a few pounds in a variety of ways. He had sometimes communicated the first intelligence of an appalling accident, which he had been fortunate enough to witness to the daily papers, and had received a few shillings for his trouble. But bit by bit his little capital—the careful, hard-earned savings of a loving father, the vicar of a little country living—dwindled away. He was thinking with head between hands—thinking bitterly of his unprofitable life; he contrasted his own position of compulsory idleness and unavoidable gentility with the industrious and grateful toil of the day laborer. He pictured the rough-handed men returning from his work—tired, but not exhausted—the merry faces and the hearty greetings—the crowing children and the radiant faced wife. He thus thought of himself, Edmund Carew, returning to his lonely chambers with pale face and dejected spirit; and Edmund Carew was about to curse the day of his birth, when a light finger was laid upon his elbow, and a face paler and sadder than his own looked up at him.

"Will you make the judge let my brother off."

"Who is your brother, little woman?"

Little Lucy pointed to the dock.

Now, by some means or other, Edmund Carew's ears had heard the charges against the lad in the dock, and his memory had retained the outline of the case, though his mind had been occupied with harrowing his own unhappy lot. He looked up at the lad and saw a fine, manly-looking young fellow confronting the whole court. In a moment a lesson was taught to the young lawyer. Here was a youth, friendless in a great city and yet keeping a good heart in the presence of a most crushing and cruel trial. The sight lent fresh courage to the briefless barrister's heart.

The judge spoke:

"Have you any counsel?"

"No my lord," said John.

"Then, Mr. Featherbrain, I think—"

"Pardon me, my lord," said Edmund rising, "the prisoner was not aware, but I am instructed by his friends to undertake his defence."

His friends? John looked around him in amazement. His friends! yes the barrister had said his friends; but he could not understand it; for he could not see his little Lucy standing by the barrister's side.

The case then commenced. The counsel for the prosecution called his witnesses. The claimant of the articles, the watch, the boots and the bar-maid at the inn, were all called to prove that John Henthorn must have been the thief. It appeared that John had been in the habit of frequenting the "Blue Boar," in the hope of meeting with some employment, as the "Blue Boar" was a rendezvous for persons seeking tutors, travellers, agents, etc. The claimant of the goods was described as a commercial traveller; he had met the prisoner at the inn, and had some conversation with him. He deposed to having lost his watch and other articles he gave the number of the notes, and identified the watch and jewelry.

The ghosts, bar-maid and waiter were called to prove that the first witness had a watch when he arrived at the "Blue Boar." The waiter noticed "particular," as the clock in the commercial room had stopped, and he had asked the gentleman to be as good as to give him the "hexact" time.

The bar-maid proved that the commercial gentleman and the prisoner had talked a long time together at the bar; that the commercial gentleman had taken a few glasses of spirits, and had gone straight to bed, after John Heathorn had left the inn.

"Was the commercial gentleman intoxicated?"

"No, sir, not that; but he was careless-like in his manner when he bade the prisoner good night."

"When did the gentleman first mention his loss?"

"When he came down the next morning."

Police constable 112 Z was called to prove that the watch and other articles were found by him at the prisoner's lodgings, at No. 137 Zebedee street.

While these witnesses were being examined, an old gentleman had made his way into court. He now sat beside Edmund Carew; he wore a large pair of gold spectacles, from beneath which there beamed a pair of benevolent-looking eyes. He never looked about him, but kept his eyes fixed on the witnesses, as one by one they filed into the box.

Edmund Carew cross-examined the witnesses for the prosecution. His interest was aroused; he was working for another: his own troubles were forgotten, others beside himself were friendless; it was a new joy to him to find some one whom he, helpless and useless, could befriend. He threw his whole mind into the case, and he cross-examined with keenness and vigor, and the parchment-faced attorneys nodded now and then at one another.

Mr. Ebenezer Grant lost his nonchalant manner and his tone of supercilious indifference, as the young barrister pressed home a few pointed questions. The bar-maid ceased to be coquettish, and the waiter to be positive.

Finally the barrister declared his intention of calling witnesses for the defence, and began by calling upon Mr. Bleskinsopp.

When Mr. Bleskinsopp entered the box poor John Heathorn gave way altogether.—He leaned forward, buried his face in his hands and sobbed, and Mr. Bleskinsopp's voice trembled a little as he described himself as the senior partner in the firm Bleskinsopp, Fussel, & Fudge, attorneys. He identified the watch and notes and other articles as his own. He deposed to having given them into the charge of the prisoner on the afternoon of the day on which the robbery was alleged to have been committed.

Would he tell the court the circumstances under which he had entrusted these articles to the prisoner?

Yes. He was commenced on the day he spoke of to attend a large and important meeting in the city. He left his office about noon, and on his way to the place of meeting he turned into the "Blue Boar" to get some lunch. He met the prisoner in the common room; got into conversation with him. While there he discovered that he had brought his watch and notes of value and some few trinkets with him; he had done it unintentionally, as he made it an invariable rule to leave all articles of value behind him when he attended public meetings; he gave them to the prisoner to take charge of.

"Did you tell the prisoner your name?"

"No."

"How were you to receive your property?"

"I agreed to call at the prisoner's lodgings in Zebedee street."

"Did you call there?"

"Yes, and heard from the landlady that Mr. Heathorn had been arrested."

The counsel for the prosecution here asked a question. "Excuse me, Mr. Bleskinsopp, was it not rather a foolish thing to entrust such valuable property to a total stranger?"

Not when you have studied men and their faces as long as I have. An honest man carries his character in his face.

The watchmaker was called to prove that he sold the watch to Mr. Bleskinsopp about a month previously.

A clerk from Mr. Bleskinsopp's office was called to witness the numbers of the notes, which had been drawn from the bank early on the day before the robbery, and the numbers entered in his private pocket-book, according to custom.

Mr. Ebenezer Grant would gladly have closed the trial at this stage, but his patience was deemed to a further trial.

An inspector in the detective force was called, and he gave evidence as to the character of Mr. Ebenezer Grant, and in the course of it a slight history of the commercial traveler's career came to light. He was a traveler, but the firm for which he traveled was not to be found in the directory. Before he left the court he was arrested on more than one charge, and there was some talk of indicting him for perjury.

John Heathorn was acquitted, of course, and he and Lucy were invited, together with Edmund Carew, to dine with old Mr. Bleskinsopp. And then John Heathorn told his story. After receiving the watch and notes, he remained at the "Blue Boar," in the hope of hearing of some employment. While waiting he met Mr. Ebenezer Grant, who had been most prodigal of his promises to get John employment. John admitted that he was very much taken with his companion, and that he had confided too much to him. He told him of the curious old gentleman who had entrusted his property to him; he showed him the watch and the notes, and Mr. Ebenezer Grant had taken a great deal of interest in the story, and had examined the watch and the notes, and pronounced on the quality of both. He had endeavored to persuade John to give them up to him to keep; he had declared he knew the old gentleman quite well, and when he found that this tack was unsuccessful, he made hints which John did not understand then, but the meaning of which he now understood fully, viz: that they should go off with the money and divide the spoil.

John then told more of his own history. How his mother had died when he was young, and his father only lately, leaving his sister and himself totally unprovided for; how they had sold the little furniture in the cottage, in the little country town where they lived, and he had come up to town to seek their fortune, and how all their little fund was spent.

When the little dinner broke up, I think everybody went home happier. It was not because he had made a good start in his profession, for he was hardly aware of that; that he had been interested in the case and had forgotten himself; it was not because Mr. Bleskinsopp had compelled him to take one of the bank notes as a fee, declaring that the case was his own, and Edmund Carew his barrister; it was not because he had made the acquaintance of the senior partner of an influential firm of city lawyers—I think the happy faces of the brother and sister whom he had befriended made him feel happy; but this I know, that when he reached his lonely chambers they did not seem so lonely as usual; a fragrant memory seemed to be present; a fresh, fairy-like form seemed to move about them; and when he fell asleep he dreamed that a light finger touched his elbow, and two bright little eager eyes were gazing into his.

Mr. Bleskinsopp went home happier.—He was alone old man. He had a benevolent heart; but he was odd. People thought him a stern old man; but they did not know of the sweet home he had when young, and how in a week the old home had been broken up, and he had been sent to the care of an old aunt, full of precise kindness, and sharp, prudent and saving ways, they did not know of the uphill fight he had endured, and yet how he had forsaken many a pleasure and many a gain, that he might go home and watch by the side of his sick old aunt, who had been the making of him; still less did they know the story of the old Bible, which his aunt had read so regularly to him when he was a lad, and which he had read so regularly to his aunt when she was an invalid; they did not know of that night when the sternness of the aunt had forsaken her, and the story, of a loving Savior's death had laid hold upon her heart, and he learned to see that there was more reality in that word than he had ever thought of, and when to his room to read and pray, but not to rest. They did not know how the bright and happy truth had drawn upon him, and how the had changed in all but the cold, still manner that he could not change; for though the heart was warm and tender and beat within, there was needed something without to draw forth the kindlier manner.

John and his sister went home happier that night; for John's misfortune had proved his success, and he was to go to Mr. Bleskinsopp's to-morrow, and commenced his occupation as a clerk there at a fair salary.

'John,' said little Lucy, as she bade her brother good-night, 'I have thought of a nice text for to-day.'

'So have I, Lucy.'

'What is yours, John?'

'No, tell me yours first, Lucy.'

"When my father and mother forsake me, the Lord taketh me up.' And now yours, John.'

"I have been young, and I am now old, yet never saw I the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread.' That's the text that came into my mind when Mr. Bleskinsopp told me I could go to him as a clerk. I remember our dear father's text, Lucy, and how he were himself out trying to help others.'

Then they parted for the night, and little Lucy knelt beside her tiny bed in that dingy little room, and thanked God for his care, and prayed a blessing on the good old man and the noble young man who had befriended them on that day.

There was a wedding some years after this, when Edmund Carew, Esq., Q. C., was married to Lucy Heathorn, only sister of John Heathorn, Esq., of the firm of Bleskinsopp & Heathorn; and a very happy wedding it was, and people remarked that old Mr. Bleskinsopp looked the merriest of the party till the bridegroom went away, and then it was noticed that he coughed a great deal, and muttered to himself, and wiped his spectacle glasses very often.

REMOVING TAN.—It is said that tan may be removed from the face by mixing magnesia in soft water to the consistency of paste, which should then be spread on the face and allowed to remain a minute or two. Then wash off with castile soap-suds, and rinse with soft water.

To prevent hydrophobia the bite must be bathed as soon as possible with warm vinegar and water, and when this has dried a few drops of muriatic acid, poured upon the wound, will destroy the poison of the saliva, and relieve the patient from all present or future danger.

POTATOES MULCHED.

We observe that many of our Western friends are advocating the mulching of the potato crop with straw, thus obviating the expense of ordinary culture. We quote from Colman's Rural World, of February 20th, a description of the method:

"To raise a good crop, I am of opinion that the potatoes ought to be planted either in March or about the last of May or first of June. For covering the potatoes any rotten straw will do. The ground must be dry and high—wet, flat land won't do—and well ploughed and harrowed; poorer land should be lightly manured. The furrows should be very shallow and near together, say two feet or less; the potatoes may be planted in the furrows at the common distance and covered very lightly with the hoe or a small corn-plough. As soon as the potatoes make their appearance above ground, so that they can be seen all along the rows, they should be covered with straw to the depth of about sixteen to twenty inches, and as even as possible. I believe that to harrow the potatoes lightly before covering them with straw would be beneficial. Very late potatoes might be planted and covered a little deeper. Nothing else has to be done then until fall; then, of course, to dig the potatoes, the straw has first to be removed. Some plant their potatoes in this way: When the ground is ready for planting, they walk over the patch and drop the potatoes as near together as they desire, and step on them lightly with one foot in walking, and then haul straw right away to cover the potatoes. But I prefer the first method. Now land, the first year in cultivation and planted to potatoes, I would not cover with straw."

This may do where straw is as cheap as in Illinois; but with Eastern farmers, where straw is worth from fifteen to twenty dollars a ton for paper-making, the case is quite different.

PROFIT IN POULTRY.

Mr. A. F. Hitchcock, Wilton, N. Y., has had an agreeable experience in poultry-keeping, and furnishes the following facts and figures:

"In the year 1868 I kept 8 hens one half the time I had 9—sewage, 8½ and 1 rooster. I had, during the year, 1277 eggs, which averaged about 2½ cents and 1 mill each, making $26.81 total receipts for the year. The food cost about $1.15 each, making $10.93, which, deducted from the receipts, leaves $15.89 profits. This year I am keeping 11 hens and 1 cock. In January we got 100 eggs; in February, 70; and in March, 140—making 310 for the three months, which have averaged 27½ cents a dozen. Many of my neighbors hens have just begun to lay. During the summer and fall I kept my hens in an enclosure of about one eighth of an acre, to keep them out of my own and my neighbors' gardens. I have generally fed corn-meal, ground coarse and made into a dough, without water, in cool weather, and some milk in the summer. I give them mashed boiled potatoes, pounded bones, and occasionally meat in the winter, and wood-ashes ashes to wallow in. My fowls are Brahmas, mixed with other breeds—the hens dressing from three to four and a half pounds, and the cocks from six to eight pounds."

HOW TO REMOVE INK-STAINS.—Miss Shirley Care, "on a summer's day," arrayed in a robe of linen "striped with brown and white, and trimmed with many rows of braid," upset ink into her lap. Quick she rinsed the skirt in tepid water; still remained heartbreaking of doleful color. Those spots were then dipped in a solution of oxalic acid, hot. In a minute they faded, taking the original stripes with them.—Another rinsing in warm water and a wetting with diluted ammonia—lo! the primal beauty of the fabric is restored—"the dress is good as ever." Henceforth Miss Shirley Care "keeps high and sublime scourge over ink mishaps," be the robe she wears of the kind described, or wool or cotton.

THE FUTURE OF WHEAT.—The Chicago Tribune brings good reasons to the support of the argument that the price of wheat will be much lower during the coming year, and it concludes its article by advising holders to "prepare to look their loses in the face as gracefully as may be, and decide to let go, lest the chance of selling be denied its use. The supply is too abundant to admit of a scarcity, and sellers to the great world of consumers are too numerous to admit of the holders being able to dictate in the matter of prices.

The common practice of using pads or sheepskins under a horse's collar is objectionable, especially in warm weather, because it accumulates heat and makes the breast tender. A better way is to take a piece of thick and smooth leather, cut it out just the size of the collar, or a little wider, and let it lie flat on the neck and shoulders. It will lie smooth, while the collar itself moves about, and chafing will thus be prevented. It is also well to wash the breast of a working horse every night with clean water.

During last year there were in the United Kingdom of Great Britian, 43,852,000 acres under cultivation, of which 11,650,000 were devoted to corn's; 6,262,000 to vegetables; 5,830 000 to clover and rotation grasses; and 22,156,000 to permanent pasturage. England alone possessed 2,179,000 cattle and 21,930,000 sheep. In every 100 acres in England, 42 are pasture; in Wales 56; in Scotland, 23; and in Ireland, 64.

HORSE LINIMENT.—An excellent liniment for strains, bruises, sprains and "windgalls" is made in the following manner:—Take a pint of alcohol, quarter of an ounce Castile soap, quarter of an ounce of gum camphor, and quarter of an ounce of sal ammoniac, and dissolve. Then add one ounce of laudanum, one ounce of organum, one half ounce of mandrax and two ounces of spirits of turpentine. Bathe freely.

APPLE-TREE WORMS.—A correspondent disapproves the advice to "burn out" those pests. If your trees are young, he says, you will kill the tops. He recommends the following as a tested remedy:—Mix well a pint of new soap with a pail of moderately strong lye. Apply with a broom to the trunk and larger limbs. This will not only destroy the worms, but make the tree grow.

A USEFUL TABLE.

To all farmers in arriving at accuracy in measuring their corners as found in measuring fields under cultivation, the following table is given:

5 yards wide by 968 yards long contains 1 acre.
10 yards wide by 484 yards long, contains 1 acre.
20 yards wide by 242 yards long, contains 1 acre.
40 yards wide by 121 yards long, contains 1 acre.
80 yards wide by 60½ yards long, contains 1 acre.
70 yards wide by 69¼ yards long, contains 1 acre.
220 feet wide by 180 feet long, contains 1 acre.

THE PEARL.—The Talmud has a pretty story, touching us that those who believed in it esteemed but one object in nature of higher value than pearls. When Abraham approached Egypt, the book tells us, he bade Sara in a chest, that none might behold her dangerous beauty. But when he was come to the place of paying custom, the officer said:—'Pay custom?' And he said:—'I will pay the custom.' They said to him:—'Thou carriest clothes.' And he said:—'I will pay for clothes.' Then they said to him:—'Thou carriest gold.'—And he answered them:—'I will pay for gold.' On this they further said:—'Surely thou bearest the finest silks.' He replied:—'I will pay custom for the silks.' Then they said:—'Surely it must be pearls that thou takest with thee.' And he answered only:—'I will pay for pearls.'—Seeing that they could name nothing of value for which the patriarch was not willing to pay custom, they said:—'It cannot be; but thou open the box and let us see what is within. So they opened the box and the whole land of Egypt was illuminated by the lustre of Sara's beauty—far exceeding even that of pearls? Hence pearls are repeatedly used in Holy Writ, also for solemn comparisons, and to denote the highest degree of perfection. And yet this precious gem, fit to adorn an emperor and to lighten the beauty of the fairest of maidens, ochres and dies and varnishes in a day. It is but a few years since the crown jeweler of France solemnly applied to the Academy of Science for a remedy against this disease, caused probably by the decomposition of the membranes which form part of the pearl, and are, after all, linked to honey and corruption, like all animal matter, by contact with air. There was no answer given but the advice to preserve the precious gems as much as possible from the influence of light and air; and the Crown of Francestine since lost some of its most highly prized jewels. 'Behold all is vanity and vexation of spirit.'

ANIMAL TRADES.—Bees are geometricians. The cells are so constructed as, with the least quantity of material, to have the largest-sized spaces, and least possible loss of interstice. The mole is a meteorologist. The bird called the nine-killer is an arithmetician; as also the crow, the wild turkey, and some other birds. The torpedo, the ray, and the electric eel, are electricians. The neutilus is a navigator; he raises and lowers his sail, casts and weighs anchor, and performs other nautical acts. Whole tribes of birds are musicians. The beaver is an architect, builder, and woodcutter; he cuts down trees, and erects houses and dames. The marmot is a civil engineer; he does not only build houses, but constructs aqueducts and drins to keep them dry. The white ants maintain a regular army of soldiers. Wasps are paper manufacturers. Caterpillars are silk-spinners. The squirrel is a ferryman; with a chip, or piece of bark for a boat, and his tail for a sail, he crosses a stream. Dogs, wolves, jackals, and many others are hunters. The black bear and the heron are fishermen. The ants have regular day laborers. The monkey is a rope-dancer.

TO DESTROY RATS AND MICE.—One of the surest and most available poisons for this purpose is carbonate of baryta—a dry, white, tasteless powder, not adapted to mingle with any liquid. In using it, mix it up with good dripping and meal, or beat it up with the raw flesh of a fish, so as to make

The Irish Church bill was under consideration. Mr. Gladstone proposed that the names of Lord Monck, late Governor General of Canada, Justice James Anthony Lawson, and George Alexander Hamilton, L. L. D., be added to those of the commissioners of the Church Establishment in Ireland, constituted under the act.

A Disagreeable Accident occurred on Thursday, a short distance in Dundas, to Thomas, son of Stephen Johnson, constable of that town. He was bitten at the time poor Wyatt was, the wound being on the hand through a glove. He was reported some better yesterday. Several other persons were bitten on the same time, and their mental distress can easily be imagined.—Spectator.

Last week some persons entered the Wesleyan Methodist Church in Aylmer and carried off the organ, without consulting the clergymen. The Times gives a rumor of a little disagreement between the choir and the pastor, which may account for the removal of the organ.

Police Magistrate.—A petition has been in circulation for the last few days for the appointment of Mr. A. Bethune, Barrister, to the Police Magistrate for the town. The petition has been signed by a considerable number of the ratepayers.—Port Hope Guide.

Port Hope Boating Club.—The annual meeting of the Port Hope Boating Club, for the election of officers for the ensuing year, and the transaction of their business, will take place in Mr. D. Smart's office, on Monday next, the 3rd instant.

Don't Know What to Do. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better condition.' Now, we should be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and confess that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more quickly and for higher prices. The article is Darley's Canadian Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy. Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on every package. At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since Ex-President Fillmore is reported as having said, in the course of his reading to excite the ire or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbours, they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; an immediate outbreak was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the bugle which history had taught all nations. "In time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

Is not this a lesson to us to fortify our Southern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of rheumatism, coughs, colds, cholics, bowel complaints, and all other diseases incident to this climate by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," Can be had of any Medicine Dealer for 25cts per bottle

Two Questions Easily Answered.—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. Sold by all Dealers at 25

Ashb.—The Alabama claims were allowed to disturb too long the citizens of the two great Anglo-Saxon communities. The carelessness of one set of statesmen, the indifference of another set, and the cupidity or prejudice of another class, have combined to keep this question ranking in the great political system, like consumption in the human frame, which spreads so rapidly until checked and expelled by the great SHOSHONEE REMEDY. HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and the cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and self-administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box outlines the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

DARLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Colds and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind in every sense, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its part of the body and from whatever cause, has given it a place in every household and is fast superseding all other preparations of the kind. action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalising the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

KADOC, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th, 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866-7 I was taken with a weakness of the ancles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonees Remedy; I believe it will cure you,

MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

THE KINGS OF FRANCE.

Children! here are some verses giving the succession of all the monarchs of France, from Charlemagne to Louis Napoleon. What'll learn them first? There is figure poetry in the world, no doubt; and there are matters of French history better worthy of study than the mere order of the kings. But, then, some day you may wish suddenly to know after whom a certain French monarch reigned, and there may chance to be no historical encyclopædia in your pocket. What matter? If these verses are in your memory, you call forth Mr. King in an instant, and put him just where he belongs. You'll find them nearly as handy to have about you as "Thirty days hath November," etc.

In France first Charlemagne did reign,
Then Louis Debonnaire,
And Charles the Bald succeeded him,
While Louis was Charles' heir.

Another Louis on the throne,
With Carlomen we see,
But Charles the "Fat" soon takes their place,
Ruler of Germany.

And then the Franks chose brave Count Eodes
Then "Simple" Charles comes on,
Then Rodolph reigns for thirteen years,
Then Louis Fourth, Charles' son.

And next in order, King Lothaire third,
And Louis Fifth we trace;
These were the last of what is termed
The Carlovingian race.

And next arise the Capet line,
The first was Hugh, I ween,
And Pious Robert follows on,
With Constance, his proud queen.

And Henry First, and Philip First,
And Louis Sixth we see,
And Louis Seventh, called "Le Jeune,"
A cuttacherous king was he.

Philip Augustus now comes on,
A monarch fond of strife,
And Louis Eighth next takes the throne,
With Blanche, his royal wife.

Then Louis Ninth, the "Saint," appears,
And Philip Third, the "Bold,"
And Philip Fourth, the "Fair," is next
Among the kings enrolled.

And Loiy Tenth reigns for two years,
Then Philip Fifth we spy,
Fourth Charles the "Fair," and Philip Sixth,
And John the "Good," pass by.

Three Charleses, Louis Eleventh, and Another King Charles too,
And Louis Twelfth, the good and wise,
Then Francis comes to view.

Then Henry Second, Francis Second,
And Cruel Charles come in,
Two Henrys, Thirteenth Louis, and Then Cardinal Mazarin.

Louis Fourteenth, then Orleans,
Regent for seven years,
Louis Fifteenth, Sixteenth, and next
Great Bonaparte appears.

Louis, Charles Tenth, and Louis Phillippe
Are with the times that were;
Napoleon Third now rules o'er France,
Long live the Emperor!

A GOOD STORY.

A very amusing anecdote is told of an Irishman who happened to be in Paris a short time ago, while three crowned heads of Europe were there on a visit to his Imperial Majesty Napoleon. These distinguished persons were the Emperors of Russia and Austria and the King of Prussia. One day, having thrown aside all state ceremonial, they determined to see the sights of the beautiful city on the Seine, for their own delectation, and for that purpose they resolved to go incog, so as not to be recognised by the people. However, in their stroll through Paris they went astray, and meeting a gentlemanly looking person, who happened to be an Irishman, they politely asked him if he would kindly direct them to the Palais Royal.

"Faith, and that I will, my boys," says Pat, at the same time taking a mental photograph of the three 'boys.' "Take way, my heartties," and so they were conducted to the royal palace and the Irishman was about bidding them farewell, when the Emperor of Russia, interested and pleased as much by the genuine politeness of Pat (and what son of Erin was ever yet deficient in courtesy and politeness?) as by his private and witty remarks, asked him who he was

"Well," rejoined the guide, "I did not ask you who you were, so before I answer you, perhaps you may tell me who you may be."

After some further parleying one of the strangers said, 'I am Alexander, and they call me the Czar and Emperor of all the Russias."

"Indade," said Pat, with a roguish twinkle in the corner of his eye, and an incredulous nod of his head, as much as to say, 'you can't fool me, old fellow.' Then, turning to one of the others, 'And might I make bould to ask you who you be, my flower?"

"They call me Francis Joseph, Emperor of Austria."

"Most happy to make your acquaintance, Frank, my boy," says the Irishman, who, thinking he was hoaxed, and in his despairing effort to get the truth, as he conceived, out of any of them, turned to the third one, and said, "Who are you?"

"They call me Frederick William, and I am King of Prussia."

They then reminded him that he promised to tell them who he was, and, after some hesitation, and with a mysterious air of confidence, Pat, putting his hand to his mouth, whispered, 'I am the Emperor of China, but don't tell anybody."

A BRIDAL TOUR.

A few weeks since, there was a wedding on Baronne Street, New Orleans, celebrated with great eclat, and the newly-wedded set out at once on a bridal tour. The ceremony took place at four o'clock in the afternoon, and at five o'clock they were on board of a splendid steamer, bound for the Upper Mississippi. As soon as the vessel was under way the passengers crowded the saloon and mirth and revelry began to hold a festival. A dance was improvised and joy and merriment was protracted into the "wee small hours." Now it so happened that the berth next to our married friends was occupied by a lively little matron and her infant. Wishing to enjoy as much pleasure as possible, she had intrusted her babe to her servant, with instructions to put it to bed as soon as it went to sleep while she herself joined in the dance. By a strange mistake the servant mistook the state room and deposited the rosy infant in the bridal couch. Now when the hour for retiring came, the groom led his blushing bride to the door, and modestly waited outside for her to disrobe and retire. One can very readily imagine his astonishment, therefore, when the next instant he heard his name called frantically, and in accents of surprise.

Opening the door he looked in dubiously.

"What is the matter my love?"

"O Henry, look here!"

"Why, bless me, it's a baby!"

"Yes, but O Henry, how did it come here—do you think it's ours?"

"Well no!" replied Henry solemnly, "I think it almost too soon."

"O it certainly is, but then what shall we do?"

Just then the anxious mother was heard inquiring for the baby, and it was restored to her, very much to the relief of the young people.

THE GREEDY BOYS.—

When lovely woman stoops to frolick,
And runs the race, alas, too late,
What balm shall soothe her melee-collick?
What art shall set her back up straight?

The only thing for her disaster—
The only way her woe to end,
Is to apply a mustard plaster—
If she won't do it, let her bend.

Dr. Chalmers was once, during his sermon, annoyed by some dogs in church. He stopped, and ordered them to be turned out. When the service was over, one old woman said to another: "An' how did ye like Doctor the day?" "Ach! but he was gran'!" "The Lord forbid," she answered, "that I should his sin presumption! But wasn't he beanie on the dogs?"

A toll-gate keeper was brought before a magistrate for cruelty to his daughter. The little difficulty arose from a discovery made by the parents, that the girl, who was frequently left in charge of the gate, used to allow her sweetheart, a young butcher, to drive his wagon through free. "She never failed her beau.

The women who were to canvas, the new fashionable head-gear are clearly all men composite mentis.

SQUINTING.—The best remedy for squinting is the early use in the case of spectacles made in either of the following ways:—First by obtaining a spectacle frame without a glass on one side, and with the orifice filled on the opposite side with thin horn, through which a small hole should be cut in the centre. The object in wearing this is that the pupil of the squinting eye should be directed towards the centre to enable the child to see; by this means the muscle of the squinting eye is kept in a state of tension whilst the opposite is contracted. Secondly, a ground glass may be substituted for the horn, a small portion being left bright in the centre. Thirdly, a piece of sticking plaster may be put half over the glass of the spectacle that covers the defective eye. In probability, either of the above remedies will be found sufficient to prevent a confirmed habit of squinting. In any case an operation would at present be untimely, and with increased age surgical aid will probably be unnecessary.

USING A DIFFICULTY.—There is something particularly mean in the attitude of the United States towards Spain. The old nation is struggling against old common difficulties. It has just overthrown a tyranny at home, and endowed the popular voice with a power it never knew before. This effort has cost it dear, and it still reels from the effect of an encounter with a power ful and persistent party. The Church and the Bourbons are still linked in their efforts in favor of a re-action. At the same moment a revolution springs in Cuba; and it is just while in this double difficulty, one brought entirely in favor of these principles of freedom of which the United States claims to be endowed with a peculiar championship, that the Washington Government steps in threatening guns.—Free Press.

SUICIDE OF LORD CLONCURRY.—The English papers of the 6th inst. mention that Lord Cloncurry committed suicide on Saturday, at his residence, Lyons Castle Kildare, Ireland. His Lordship had been under restraint for some time, having recently twice attempted self-destruction by the most extraordinary means, but on Saturday he eluded the vigilance of his medical attendant and threw himself from his bedroom window; the result of the injuries he received being that he survived but an hour. The deceased peer (Edward Lawless) was the third baron, was born September 13, 1816, and succeeded his father in 1853. He leaves a widow and eight children, of whom four are sons and four daughters.

HOW SOON FORGOT.—So lately dead, so soon forgotten! 'Tis the way of the world. Men take us by the hand and are anxious about the health of our bodies, and laugh at our jokes and we really think, like the fly and the wheel, that we have something to do with the turning of the earth. Some day we die and are buried. The sun does not stop for our funeral; everything goes on as usual; we are not missed in the street; men laugh at our jokes; one or two hearts feel the wounds of affliction; one or two memories still hold our names and forms; but the crowd moves in its daily circle, and in three days the great wave of time sweeps over our steps and washes out the last vestige of our lives.

There is a familiar story of a Scotch woman who was engaged in bleaching linen, when a stranger accosted her by asking her if she attended the kirk. On answering that she did, he inquired why she went.—She replied that the preacher did her good. The stranger tested her memory by inquiries in regard to text and sermon; but she remembered nothing. "How, then, can it do you any good, if you do not remember it?" exclaimed the stranger. "When I put water on this linen," she answered, "I find that it all dries away; but I see that the linen grows whiter and whiter. So I forget the sermon; but it makes me better."

A REFLECTION.—It is an exquisite and beautiful thing in our nature, that when the heart is touched and softened by some tranquil happiness of affectionate feeling, the memory of the dead comes over it most powerfully and irresistibly. It would seem almost as though our better thought and sympathies were charms, in virtue of which the soul is enabled to hold some vague and mysterious intercourse with the spirits of those whom we dearly loved in life! Alas! how often, and how long, may those patient angels hover above us, watching for the spell which is so seldom uttered, and so soon forgotten!

The heirs of Noah Webster received $25,000 annually from the sale of his Dictionary. Harper & Brothers pay Marcius Wilson an annual copyright of $16,000 and the same house has paid Anthon, Barnes Robinson, Abbot, Motley, and Prescott, or heirs, upwards of $20,000 each; copyright on their works. Chas. Scribner & Co paid Headley $50,000 prior to 1859, and to Dr. Holland they have paid a larger amount.

CHEAP WAY TO CLEAN STRAW HATS.—Pounded sulphur, cold water and brush. Make a paste of pounded sulphur and cold water; wet the hat or bonnet, and cover it with the paste till you do not see the straw. Rub hard. Hang the hat up to dry. When dry, brush the sulphur off with a brush the straw gets beautifully white. This method is easier than the sulphur-bleaching box, and can be done very quickly.

An editor thus advertises his missing hat: 'The gentleman who inadvertently took our new beaver, and left an inferior article in its stead, will do us an indefinite kindness by returning ours, and he shall receive our warmest thanks and two apologies—an apology for the trouble we have given him, and the 'apology for a hat he has left us.'

As old gentleman was recently waiting for the cars in the depot of Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad, when looking over the great building, he exclaimed: 'Only think of it! But a little over thirty years ago I was offered eighty acres of land, on part of which this depot was built, for a sorrel horse and saddle, and I was blamed fool enough to keep the parrel.'

CURE FOR FOUNDERED HORSES.—Take a lump of alum the size of a walnut, powder it and dissolve in warm water. The horse must be drenched with this liquor, and it will throw him into a profuse prospiration, and he will soon be as well as ever. This should be done as soon as you ascertain his condition.

When young cattle are kept healthy and growing, lice never trouble them, but if they are neglected they are sure to be overrun with vermin. In such cases sulphur mixed with a little salt is the true remedy and easily applied. Sulphur is also good to prevent sheep from being troubled by ticks.

STARCHING SHIRTS AND COLLARS.—Allow one teaspoonful of good starch to each shirt and collar; take just enough cold water to wet the starch; mash it free from lumps, add a little more, and stir it well.

The proprietors of these Rooms are determined to produce effects second to nothing on the Continent.

We take Portraits in every style of this beautiful art, from Miniature to life size.

COOKED BEEF.—The Scientific American informs the ladies that if cooked beef is to have corned beef juicy after it is cold, and not dry as chips, they should put it into boiling water when they put it on to cook, and they should not take it out of the pot when done until it has become cold.

Plant young trees both in your orchards and gardens. They cost less in actual price, in freight, and in planting, than older trees. Never choose standard apples, pears, plums, or cherries more than two years old, and dwarf trees one year old.

TO COLOR DEAD OR SLATE COLOR.—Smoke berries and copperas; a dozen bunches of berries and a teaspoonful of copperas to a pail of water, mist color, according as more or less strength is colored in it.

DANGEROUSLY ILL.—The life of Mr. Justice John Wilson is despaired of. His health has declined rapidly of late, and his medical advisers now say his death may be sudden, or he may linger, but there is no doubt his duties will end fatally. The cause is over exertion in the discharge of his judicial duties.

All virtuous young people have delicate sensibilities; and they cannot be handled without withering. Mothers! Do you "know enough to go in when it rains?"—Then keep your daughters out of "promiscuous" dancing.

It is said that if a sheep or colt is covered with a rubber or leather spread, or thick blanket, and tobacco-smoke be made under this covering, every tick and nit will be destroyed in half an hour or less.

The Italians have discovered a process by which asbestos can be spun into thread, by hand, with the common distaff. The cloth and paper made of this material are not inflammable.

Who wrote the most—Dickens, Warren, or Bulwer? Warren wrote 'Now and Then,' Bulwer wrote 'Night and Morning,' Dickens wrote 'All the Year Round.'

More than one-fourth of all the fruit trees planted in this country die or fail to yield fruit for the simple reason that they are not properly cared for.

When the heart is pure, there is hardly anything which can mislead the understanding in matters of immediate personal concernment.

Chickens may be relieved of lice by making them sleep on pine shavings. The turpentine in the pine does the work.

Stock confined in stables should have a sod of earth a foot square, once a week, or what they will eat up clean.

Introduce changes into your reading and studies. Who reads but little at a time, retains that little the better.

Let our repentance be a lively will, a firm resolution. Complaints and mourning over past errors avail nothing.

Dr. Johnson used to say, "He who waits to do a great deal of good at once, will never do any."

Leached ashes are undoubtedly the best manure that can be applied to old orchards or sandy land.

He is a farmer who keeps his farm from running down. He who does not is a protected farmer.

The Island of Jersey is the garden of England for early potatoes; an acre is worth $800.

The annual fruit production of the Ohio valley is estimated at $5,000,000.

The Vineland Agricultural Society offers a premium for the best roots.

Peach and plum trees are in blossom at Augusta, Ga.

Riches got by deceit cheat no man so much as the getter.

Riches got by fraud are dug out of one's own heart, and destroy the mind.

If industry is at least no more than habit, it, at least, an excellent one.

All good principles must stagnate without mental activity.

A gentleman went to a masked ball quite unexpectedly, arrayed in a gorgeous costume. An acquaintance addressed him: "Glad to see you here; but did not know you were to come, sir." "Tecumseh be blowed," ejaculated the disguised man. "Don't you know your English history? I'm the Duke of Buckingham."

The ear is a queer organ. A hungry boy hears the word for dinner with no difficulty, whereas, if it is to run of an errand in the rain, his ears are almost closed. So too, Miss Browngush, is keen when the question is popped by young Honeymoot, but never hears mother when she screams to have her dust things in the parlor.

A Dutchman was relating his marvelous escape from drowning, while thirteen of his companions were lost by the upsetting of a boat, and he alone saved. "And how did you escape?" asked one of his hearers.

"I tid not go in de pote," was the Dutchman's placid reply.

Quibble, reading that "it has been decided in the Court of Queen's Bench, in Dublin, that a clergyman in the Court of England can legally marry himself," observes that that might be very well as a measure of economy, but even in the hardest times he would rather marry a woman.

Before Dr. Chalmers achieved renown, a benevolent lady asked a poor woman if she ever went to church. "Oh ay," she replied; "There's a mean ca'd Chalmers preaches here, and I whiles gang in and hear him, just to encourage him, puir body!"

A coffin-maker was asked whom he was making for, and mentioned the intended.—"Why, he is not dead, man?" said the querist. "Don't you trouble yourself," replied the other; "Dr. Coe told me to make his coffin, and I guess he knows what he gave him."

The penalty for walking on a railroad track in England is ten pounds," said one, while discussing the numerous fatal accidents on a railroad. "Pooh!" replied uncle Jerry, "is that all? The penalty in this country is death."

Whether rings are pleasant, depends upon where you wear them. A young lady who had just got an engagement ring is happy beyond narration; while a young chap who has got one of black and blue around his eye, is by no means cheerful.

"Never put off till to-morrow what you can do to-day," said an advising mother to her little son. "Well, then, mamma, let me eat the raspberry pie that is in the cupboard," was the child's precocious reply.

A hospital for "women who have become disgusted with their husbands" is to be established in Cleveland. But where on earth will they find a building large enough?

A surgeon whose wife is a great scold, being asked what he thought would be the greatest triumph of the surgical art, replied: "To take the jaw out of a scolding woman."

Let a young woman take the degree of A. B. that is A Bride, and she may hope in due time to be entitled to that of A. M.

"I say, Pat, are ye eskape?" "Divil the eskape." "This, be after finding me a quarther." "I'm eskape, be jabers."

Mosquitoes never trust—they invariably pass cent their bills in advance.

Why is an old maid invisible?—Because she isn't-a-parent.

The largest nuts in the world are called elephants.

Wanted, a life boat that will float on the sea of troubles.

Why is a madman like two men? He is one beside himself.

BEAUTIFUL! SPLENDID!

Is the verdict given by all who use Henry's Kapras Hair Gloss. It makes dry, harsh, stiff hair soft, glossy and beautiful. RHEUMATISM and all other aches and pains leave the body on application of Jacobs' Rheumatic Liquor. We will warrant it to cure Burns, Frost Bites, Chilblains, Sore Throat, Lame Back or Side, Sprains, &c. None of the cures it has effected are almost too wonderful for belief. Many have been saved by it from impending death, and restored to life and health. No family is safe a day without it; hundreds of valuable lives and thousands of dollars may be saved annually by its use. As a preventive of contagious diseases, nothing ever before invented can compare with it.

We authorize all dealers to refund the money if it does not give entire satisfaction.

Poetry.

Nothing at all in the Paper To-day.

Nothing at all in the paper to-day!
Only a murder somewhere or other—
A girl who has put her child away,
Not being a wife as well as a mother.
Or a drunken husband beating a wife,
With the neighbors lying awake to listen;
Scarce aware he has taken a life
Till in at the window the dawn-rays glisten.
But that is all in the regular way—
There's nothing at all in the paper to-day.

Nothing at all in the paper to-day!
To be sure there's a woman died of starvation,
Fell down in the street—as so many may
In this very prosperous Christian nation.
Or two young girls with some inward grief
Maddened, have plunged in the inky waters;
Or a father has learned that his son's a thief—
Or a mother has been robbed of one of her daughters.
Things that occur in the regular way—
There's nothing at all in the paper to-day.

There's nothing at all in the paper to-day,
Unless you care about things in the City—
How great rich rogues for their crimes must pay,
(Though all Gentility cries out "pity!")
Like the meanest shopboy that robs a till—
There's a case to-day, if I'm not forgetting,
The lad only "borrowed" as such lads will—
To pay some money he lost in betting,
But there's nothing in this that's out of the way—
There's nothing at all in the paper to-day.

Nothing at all in the paper to-day
But the Births and Bankruptcies, Deaths and Marriages,
But life's events in the old survey,
With Virtue begging, and Vice in carriages:
And kindly hearts under ermine gowns,
And wicked breasts under hodden grey,
For goodness belongs not only to clowns,
And o'er others than lords does Sin bear sway
But what do I read?—"drowned! wrecked!"
Did I say?

Selections.

Spencer Carlton's Love Story.

CHAPTER I.

'Mamma, I do think that the report Aunt Julia heard must be true,' said Laura Carlton to her mother, looking up from a long foreign letter she had for some time been busily engaged in reading.

'What report, my dear?' asked her mother, who was equally absorbed in the 'fashionable intelligence' contained in the 'Morning Post.' 'Your aunt hears so many reports that I never place much reliance on them.'

'Of course I mean all she told us about Spencer—that is the only report of the smallest interest to me,' replied Laura, rather provoked at her mother's indifference. 'Annie Travers has written to me from Rome, and at the end of her letter asks me if she is to congratulate me on my new sister, whose extreme beauty is a constant topic of conversation now at Rome.'

'Spencer would certainly have told us himself if it had been true, my dear,' replied Mrs. Carlton, looking rather perturbed. 'Let me hear again all that Miss Travers says.'

Laura obeyed, and Mrs. Carlton listened attentively.

'I had almost forgotten, Laura, what your aunt did say—that Spencer was epris with a lovely American girl, who was supposed to be rich, was it not? I never gave it a thought. Spencer has been so often epris with lovely girls before now.'

'Yes,' said Laura; 'but he has written so seldom, and his letters have been so unsatisfactory, that I have an instinct that this is true; and you will allow that my instincts are generally right, mamma.'

'I really scarcely know what to think,' returned her mother. 'If this girl is both rich and beautiful, as your aunt says, it is probably the best thing dear Spencer could do. I will write at once to your aunt, and inquire more, and especially whether she heard the report from any reliable authority.'

Laura stood gazing through the window long after her mother left the room. There was nothing attractive in the bleak, dreary land-scape before her, made yet more dreary by the slight sprinkling of snow which had already covered the ground. Yet Laura gazed on it that day with an inexpressible feeling of affection. She loved the wide-spreading valley, the old trees under which the deer were grouped, the tall elms near the house in which, from her earliest infancy, she had watched the rooks building their nests; the terraced garden upon which the windows of the room in which she lingered had been made to open, so that in summer they almost entirely lived in it. This garden was both the pride and delight of her mother's life; and now she might perhaps be called upon to part from it all! It might be passing into the hands of another—one to whom it could not have the slightest interest! She might have to uproot all the bright and pleasant things that had gathered round her young life, and try to plant them in another home. But would they bear to be thus transplanted? would they not wither and die in another soil? No place, she fondly thought, could ever be compared with this; and, indeed, Etheridge Castle was a beautiful old place, which had been the property of the Carltons for several centuries.

Mrs. Carlton had lost her husband many years, and had been left with a son and daughter, to whom she entirely devoted herself, and who were the one comfort and support of her widowhood. Spencer was the eldest, and of him it is enough to say that he thoroughly fulfilled the idea of one who was the only son of his mother, and she was a widow. He had distinguished himself at Cambridge, and his early manhood was full of promise. He was tall and handsome, with that combination of strength and tenderness which is so especially attractive to women. His mother was mistaken in saying that Spencer had so frequently 'lost his heart to pretty girls,' for beyond an occasional momentary fascination, when the advances were more on the lady's side than on his, no woman had even taken his imagination captive, much less his heart. But this year his sojourn at Rome effected a great change; and though he had not as yet confided his secret to any one, there was not a thought of his heart or fibre of his being that was not given up to the keeping of another.

He had been at a ball in the house of one of the Italian noblesse, and, having become rather weary of the aimless life he was leading, was standing at the doorway speaking to an old friend of his intention to leave Italy rather earlier than usual and return to England, when a young girl came up the wide marble staircase leaning upon her mother's arm. Spencer Carlton gazed at her with a sort of wonder. He had never imagined that the earth contained anything so exquisitely beautiful as that girl's face.

'What is the matter?' asked the old General to whom he had been speaking, as Spencer Carlton stopped short in the midst of a sentence. 'What do you see?'

'Who is that?' he whispered, as the lady and her daughter passed them.

'That girl? Her name is Ellerton, I believe. She is the beautiful American that every one is raving about. Surely you have seen her before?'

'Never. Who is she? Do they live in Rome?'

'I believe they are only just come. No one seems to know anything about them. Some say the girl is an heiress, others that she has not a son, and that her mother has brought her here in the expectation of her making a great marriage. There seems to be something rather mysterious about them.'

'Can you get me an introduction to them?'

'I dare say I can. Why, my dear fellow, you seem "struck all of a heap," as we used to say, and look as if you were in a dream. Here is La Contessa Callino. She knows every one. We will ask her to get you an introduction to these American ladies.'

'Are they here alone? Has she no father or brother?'

'Which do you mean—madame or mademoiselle? I really do not know. I will take you to the contessa to make your own inquiries,' replied the General, considerably surprised at Spencer's manner. 'Come with me.'

'Not yet—another time, perhaps,' he said, in a low voice, with a strange misgiving in his heart, and feeling as if some invisible power was holding him back from rushing on to his destiny.

'Why, God bless my soul, Carlton, you are suddenly bewitched—mesmerized! I don't know what has happened to you. Are you dreaming? If you want to be introduced to these Americans, it can only be done now; I am not going to stay here for ever, if you are.'

Spencer Carlton made no reply, but followed General Wenlock into the next room, where the Contessa Callino was chattering, as only Italian ladies can chatter, to a group of men that surrounded her. She received him most graciously, and at once acceded to his request, though she warned him that Mrs. Ellerton was very chary of increasing her English acquaintance. 'Still, for you——,' she said, with a bow and a smile which could have but one, and that a most flattering, interpretation.

'What is the use of her having such a beautiful daughter, if she only wants to shut her up?' said the General, bluntly; 'and she must like to know English people better than foreigners.'

'Do you expect me to take that as a compliment?' answered the Contessa, laughing. 'However, I will forgive it, and will show my generosity by introducing your friend to this new beauty at once. Here they are; going down to the supper-room, I suppose.'

She took Spencer Carlton up to Mrs. Ellerton, and introduced him.

'Blanche is tired, and cannot dance again,' said Mrs. Ellerton, rather stiffly, with a very foreign accent. 'This is her first ball, you know.'

'Is Mrs. Ellerton a Frenchman?' he asked, in surprise, after they had passed through the room and gone downstairs.

'A French Canadian. She usually talks French, I believe. She always speaks as if her daughter were extremely delicate, but I can see no signs of illness about her.'

Spencer followed the mother and daughter down stairs, and soon learned from the young lady all he wanted to know. She was not especially shy, but frank and child-like, and told him how her mornings were spent in riding in the Campagna, and her afternoons in walking on the Pincio.

'So that I may hope to see you every day,' he said, with a look in his eyes which, though it brought no blush to the girl's face, evidently made the mother think it was time to interfere.

'Blanche's life is scarcely so idle as she says,' said Mrs. Ellerton, gravely. 'She is obliged to be out in the air a great deal, but when she is at home I expect her to study.'

'I may call at your house and see if you have recovered from your fatigue?' he said, looking inquiringly at Mrs. Ellerton, while he put Blanche's cloak carefully over her shoulders.

Mrs. Ellerton hesitated; but while he had been talking to her daughter she had been making inquiries about him, the replies to which were too satisfactory for her to wish to receive the advances of the handsome young Englishman coldly.

'I will promise not to interrupt her studies, Mrs. Ellerton; so you will, I trust make an exception to general rules,' he said gaily.

He stood looking after the carriage long after it had driven away, and then wandered slowly home, to dream of Blanche's lovely face, and to long for the morrow and the chance of seeing her again.

CHAPTER II.

I wish it were possible for me to describe Blanche Ellerton as I saw her a few weeks after she had made acquaintance with Spencer Carlton.

It was a bright and sunny morning, such as Italian mornings often are, even in the middle of winter. Blanche was sitting on the floor, surrounded by different pieces of coloured silk. Occasionally a strong beam pierced through the outside blinds, which were carefully closed, and rested on her head, tinging her soft brown hair with a golden hue. Though she was very fair she had not the jade look that often belongs to fair people; indeed, her marked eyebrows and long eyelashes gave a character to her face; and those wonderful large grey eyes, that seemed as if some hidden fire was burning behind them, completely took away from her any appearance of insipidity.—Every one spoke of her eyes as wonderful. People did not say they were lovely or beautiful, but always wonderful; and, in truth, her eyes looked strange and out of keeping with that small child-like face.—There was a happy smile on the girl's face as she examined one bright-coloured silk after another, and her mother sat watching her with a less anxious expression than usual.

'Why, Blanche, your whole heart seems wrapped up in your dress to-day. You have let the morning slip away so that now you will have no time for your ride.'

'I am so sorry, mamma; but I do care about my dress, as I may choose it myself, and this ball is to be such a good one. It is given for the Russian Princes. I should like to be very fine,' said Blanche apologetically.

'So that a Russian Prince may fall in love with you or your gown, and carry you off to St. Petersburgh. You would not like that, Blanche.'

'Of course not, mamma. I shall never marry.'

'Did you never see any one that you thought it would be possible to marry, Blanche?' asked her mother, curiously.

'Certainly not; at least I don't think so. But now I only care about my gown, and you think that so foolish, mamma.'

'No, not at all. I wish you to be well dressed, especially as the Principessa Valerio has been so kind and civil. I wonder if this will become you,' said her mother, holding a rich green silk, embroidered in gold, up to the girl's face.

They had been to busily engaged to hear the door open and a visitor announced; and both mother and daughter started when a voice said close to them—

'Not green; she must not wear green,' and Spencer Carlton stood beside them.—

'How you frightened me!' said Blanche, laughing. 'I hoped you were some one come to take these away. They have sent me half the shop to choose from, you see.'

'Have you chosen?' he asked, looking at her with undisguised admiration. 'I wish you would let me choose.'

'We are so perplexed that it would be a good thing for any one to decide for us,' said Mrs. Ellerton. 'I shall never get Blanche out to-day. Which do you recommend?'

'Certainly not green. This is the best,' he said, lifting up a pale blue silk embroidered in silver. 'This is the only one fit for you. The others are too tranchante.'—

'You are quite right,' said Mrs. Ellerton approvingly. 'I did not know you were an authority in ladies dress.'

'I saw you first in blue,' he said in a low voice to Blanche. 'I shall never like you to wear any other colour.'

'I like this best myself. It is for the ball that the Principessa Valerio is to give to the Russians. Shall you be there?'

'Certainly, if it is possible to procure an invitation.'

It is needless to say that Spencer Carlton did procure an invitation, and that he scarcely left Blanche's side all the evening. He had now become so passionately in love with her that he made no attempt to conceal it, and followed her like a shadow.—He would walk by the side of her pony in the Campagna for hours; he sought the brightest and freshest flowers to bring her every morning. If she expressed the slightest wish, it was attended to at once. But Blanche seldom did express a wish, and the difficulty of reading her mind was the only thing that cast a shadow over the state of intoxicated happiness in which Spencer Carlton was living. He never could tell if his words made any impression on her. She seemed to take them so completely as a matter of course. She received his admiration with a bright smile, but all seemed on the surface. If a day passed in which they did not meet, she never appeared to be annoyed or even to notice it. Her coolness and the indifference of her manner nearly drove her to despair.—'If she were ever angry or vexed,' he thought; and yet she seldom talked to other men—he did not reflect that his absorption of her effectually kept all others aloof—'but it is the strange way she receives all I do as a matter of course. I must speak to her mother; she may give me the key by which to understand her.'

Accordingly one day he went to the hotel with the express purpose of speaking to Mrs. Ellerton. It was the day after the ball which had been given in honour of the Russian Princes, at which Blanche had worn the blue and silver dress Spencer Carlton had chosen for her, and where she was acknowledged by all to be the belle of the evening. He had hovered round her, following her like a shadow, not in the least heeding how evident his admiration was to the rest of the world, even if it was not to Blanche. He had spoken plainly to her that very evening, yet see scarcely seemed to understand. 'Blanche is so young,' he said to himself. 'It is to her mother that I must go.'

The next day he went early to the hotel, and finding Mrs. Ellerton alone, asked anxiously for her daughter, inquiring whether she was ill or overfatigued with the ball.

'I fear so, for she is very unwell to-day,' was the reply. 'She is subject to violent attacks of tic in her face and head, which, while they last, completely disable her, and make her almost frantic with the pain. It is this that obliges me to guard her as carefully as I do, and is mainly the cause of her extreme delicacy.'

'How terrible for her!' said Spencer in a tone of great concern. 'Cannot anything be done?'

'I fear not. It was on account of these attacks that we left America. I was told that the Italian climate might cure her, and till now, I fancied she was better.'

'And do they last long?' he inquired, anxiously, for he could not bear to think of his idolized Blanche racked with pain when he could neither comfort her nor alleviate it.

'Always two or three days; so I think it would, perhaps, be better if you did not call here till I can tell you that she is better. Anything that agitates is so bad for her.'

'But I would not agitate her. Pray do not keep me away. Oh! Mrs. Ellerton, it was to speak to you about her that I came here to-day. I would give my life to keep pain and sorrow away from her. You must know—you must have seen what she is to me. I would not speak to her without your permission; but surely she must be aware how devotedly, how ardently I love her;' and he looked anxiously into Mrs. Ellerton's face for an answer.

But he could read nothing there beyond an expression of pain while he was speaking; and now she seemed struggling to overcome some emotion that kept her silent.—At last she spoke:

'I am glad that you have not said anything to Blanche as yet. She is so young that——'

'But I may speak to her? You will let me tell her all I feel, and implore her to return my love? Mrs. Ellerton, I cannot live without her. The one hope of my life is to call her mine.'

Still Mrs. Ellerton hesitated, and remained silent.

'You do not think that any one else——' said Spencer Carlton, turning very pale.

'That Blanche has already given her heart to another? Certainly not. She, poor child, is heart-whole, I feel sure,' said Mrs. Ellerton, sadly.

'Then you think she will listen to me?' he pleaded anxiously; 'for as yet I have not been able to ascertain whether she understood my feelings.'

'That I do not know, and you can hardly expect me to be able to answer you, Mr. Carlton. But you have my permission to ask her yourself;' and Mrs Ellerton held out her hand to him.

He pressed it warmly. 'And when may I see her?' he asked, eagerly.

'I cannot tell you now,' she replied, sorrowfully. 'Indeed, with her extreme delicacy, I hardly know whether I am justified in allowing such a question to be put to her, for some time at all events.'

'Indeed one are, Mrs. Ellerton. Who would watch her and tend her as I should? It will be the happiness of my life to share your responsibility.'

She turned away, but Spencer Carlton could see that it was to hide her tears.

Some days elapsed before Blanche was well enough to see him; but as soon as he was allowed to do so he lost no time in pleading his cause feeling that—

'He either fears his fate too much,
Or his deserts, to small,
Who does not put it to the touch
To win or lose it all.'

So, in a few earnest words he told her how ardently he loved her, and asked her if she would trust her happiness in his keeping.—

She had evidently been prepared to expect this, for she showed no surprise, though her murmured reply, 'Mamma says you will always be kind to me,' was scarcely an expression of her own feelings towards him. To a less enraptured lover her reply would not have been satisfactory; but as it was, he felt delighted at her childlike manner, and clasping her in his arms, renewed his protestations of affection; and from that day Blanche Ellerton and Spencer Carlton were acknowledged and affianced lovers.—

THE CAUSE OF IDIOCY.

Visitors to the Earlswood Idiot Asylum, and persons who read the reports of that valuable institution, will have gained some acquaintance with the exceedingly curious species of physical degeneracy known as "permanent childhood." Imagine an infant, pure and simple, of the mature age of twenty-two years, perfectly formed, but in growth, intellect, and tastes exactly resembling a child of twelve months. Some remarkable particulars with regard to this form of arrest of development were given, last week, by Dr. Langdon Down, at a meeting of the Pathological Society. An illustrative case was exhibited—that of a child of five years, which had intellectually and physically the condition of nine months. This case, Dr. Down remarked, was typical one of a class, all the members of which possess the same characteristics, and form a sort of natural family. He stated that he had seen a "permanent infant" of upwards of twenty years of age, just able to stand by the side of a chair, uttering monosyllable sounds, amusing itself with toys, and otherwise comforting itself exactly as an ordinary child would, that was making its first attempts to speak and walk. The doctor has a theory of his own—and he is entitled, from his experience in such matters, to form one—as to the cause of this extremely curious and painful species of degeneracy. All such children he has found are the offspring of habitually drunken fathers—the "arrest of growth and development" is the result; and thus, in the most literal sense, the "iniquity of the father is visited upon the children." Those gentlemen who are waging deadly warfare with the alcoholic "monster" ought to be grateful to Dr. Down for the sharp arrow which he has added to their already well-furnished quiver. —Birmingham Daily Post and Journal March 13th.

A Story of the Battle-Field.

A soldier was wounded in one of the battles of the Crimea and was carried out of the field. He felt that his wound was mortal—and life was quickly ebbing away and he said to his comrades who were carrying him, "Put me do; do not trouble to carry me any further; I am dying." They put him down and returned to the field. A few minutes after an officer saw the man weltering in his blood, and asked him if he could do anything for him. "Nothing, thank you." "Shall I get you a little water?" asked the kind-hearted officer.—"No, thank you; I am dying." "Is there nothing I can do for you? Shall I write to your friends?" "I have no friends you can write to. But there is one thing for which I'll be much obliged: In my knapsack you will find a Testament; will you open it at the 14th of John and near the end of that chapter you will find a verse that beginning with 'Peace;' will you read it?" The officer did so, and read the words, "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." "Thank you, sir," said the dying man, "I have that peace; I am going to that Saviour—God is with me—I want no more," and instantly expired.

A Dutchman in Canada had two pigs a large one and a smaller one. The smaller one being the elder, he was trying to explain to a customer, and did it in this wise:—"The little pig is the biggest." Upon which his wife assumed to correct him, said, "You will please excuse him he no speek as good Englis as me; he no mean the litte pig is the biggest, but the youngest pig is th oldest."

ECONOMY IN BREAD.

Many persons, from choice, prefer bread made of unbolted wheaten meal; and, in the opinion of many scientific and medical men, it is far more wholesome than that in common use, made from the pure farina of the grain. It is more digestible, and contains elements (the phosphates particularly) which exist only in very small quantity in superfine flour, yet are essential to the health and vigour of the body. The phosphate of lime, the element in food which produces bone, so essential to the stamina of the body, is said to exist to the amount of thirty pounds in five hundred of fine flour, but it amounts to eighty-five pounds, or nearly three times greater, in the same quantity of unbolted wheaten meal. Experiments have been made on animals with bread made from both kinds of flour, and while those fed exclusively on that made from the finest flour died within a limited period, others fed on that made from unbolted wheaten meal were healthy and vigorous. Thus commending the coarse bread on account of its quality, I now refer to its cheapness when properly made.

It is well known that millers generally charge as much for unbolted meal as for the finest flour, and this, I doubt not, prevents many persons from using it. There can be no good reason for this charge, but parties requiring the meal have supposed there was no alterative but to submit to it. Now, any good domestic baker may produce sweet, wholesome bread, equal to any made from unbolted wheaten meal, by simply mixing equal parts of fine flour, middlings, (or the best shorts), and good bran together, and baking in the ordinary manner, giving it rather a longer time in the oven than fine bread. The cost of the mixture of the three ingredients will be found to be only about half the price of the flour. This is an important consideration for every one, but particularly the poor in time of scarcity. Were children fed more generally on this kind of bread, there would be much less disease, such as rickets softening of the spine, decay of teeth, &c.—Canada Farmer.

FACTS ABOUT BARLEY.—The following statements are believed to embody the results of the general experience of those who have been accustomed to raising barley.

This cereal succeeds best on soil which are light and more sandy than those which are adapted for wheat, and consequently they are noted as barley soils. Unless the soil is very light, it is well to plow in the fall and again in the spring. For a heavy crop the land should be rendered rich by previous manuring, but barn yard manure applied directly to the crop is thought to be injurious. From two to three bushels of seed are generally sown to the acre.—Land should be rolled immediated after the seed is sown, or at all events when the young plants is from one to two inches high. Some persons steep the seed for twenty-four hours in a weak solution of saltpetre, others recommend steeping it in the liquid which oozes from barn-yard manure. Barley is the best crop for sowing in land which is to be laid down with clover or grass seeds. In some parts of the State of New York where this grain is carefully grown for the purpose of making pearl barley, from fifty to sixty bushels per acre have been produced, but from twenty-five to thirty bushels is about the ordinary yield. Good bright malting barley cannot be grown in damp heavy soils. The seed should be sown as early in spring as the condition of the soil will permitt. A late crop is seldom good.

THE NOSE BLEED.—There are two little arteries that supply the face with blood, one on each side; these branch off from the main arteries on each side of the windpipe, and running upwards towards the eyes, pass over the outside of the jawbone about two-thirds of the way back from the chin to the angle of the jew, under the ear. Each of these arteries of course, supplies just one half of the face, the nose being the dividing line; the left nostril is supplied with blood by the left artery. Now suppose your nose bleeds from your right nostril, with the end of your forefinger feel along the outer edge of the right jaw until you feel the beating of the artery directly under your finger, the same as the pulse in the wrist, then press your finger hard upon it, thus getting the little fellow in a tight place between the finger and jawbone; the result will be that not a drop of blood goes into the side of your face while the pressure continues; hence the nose instantly stops bleeding for want of blood to flow; continue the pressure for five or ten minutes and the ruptured vessels in the nose will, by that time probably, contract so that when you let the blood into them they will not leak. Bleeding from a cut or wound anywhere about the face may be stopped the same way.

A FARMER, believing himself to be dying, sent for a clergyman, and somewhat shocked that good man by the off-hand, easy way in which he announced his fitness to die. Pressed upon certain topics, particularly upon the question of forgiveness to his enemies, he said he forgave everybody who had injured him "except Jon Bat of Poundstock." John had played him such a trick about the sale of a certain cow that the farmer declared nothing should make him forgive him. Impressed by the exhortations of the clergyman, moved by fear of the consequences of dying unforgiving and unforgiven, he turned to the minister and said, with an air of satisfa

A Peep at the People who Desire to Annex Us.

THE CAN-CAN DANCE.

The New York Home Journal has an article on the balls and dances of the winter.

The tendency of the hour is to make New York the Paris of the new world; and it is characteristic of imitation to seize upon the more prominent points of its model first. Born and bred Parisians look with astonishment upon the ambling facility with which we exaggerate the vices of their native city. Paris sends us her fashions, not only in dress, but in moral laxity, in nonsense, in festivity, in dissipation. All these we adopt with the eager voracity of a spoiled child, knocking down and pulling up by the roots, one after another, the reverend social landmarks, safeguards and ledges.

The present might be aptly termed the can-can period in our history. The students and grisettes of the Latin Quarter, and the habitues of the Jardin Mobile, in the wildest of their revels, have a dance made up of vulgarity and gymnastic indecency, in which extravagant suggestiveness is the principal feature. Through the medium of the stage, we have been introduced to this dance, and its devastating influences have spread like wildfire. It tickled the popular fancy, and the growing appetite for sensation and sensuality, and, before we know it, became fashionable. Not many weeks since it was presented nightly at ten or more of the first class theatres before audiences respectable in the best sense of the word. But respectability cannot shield from taint in such an atmosphere, and when we remember what a large proportion of our citizens are theatre goers, and what an immense influence the theatres exert, we cannot but tremble in anticipation of the result of this admixture of sensuous vice with our most popular diversion.

Probably nothing reflects the social condition of a people more clearly than their drama; or, in this case, that which usurps the place of the drama. The spread of the can-can fever cannot be attributed to its introduction with "opera bouffe," but rather to a morbid state of society, which made it absorb the infection at once. The poison worked quickly, and the disease has assumed an alarming aspect. One of its phases has been very prominent at the public balls. At these the queenly Anonymas have swept the floor with their satins and laces, and eclipsed the radiance of the chandeliers with the lustre of their jewels. They have jostled the ladies of our more select circles and looked down with supercilious patronage upon the belles of our best society.—Around them have clustered eagerly the sons of the former, the brothers of the latter—the representatives of the best blood of the rising generation—the young men ready to make any sacrifice of honor for a smile, or to go down on their knees for an encouraging word; and that too, with the consciousness that thousands of inquiring eyes were fixed upon them.

At the masquerade balls especially the can-can spirit has seemed to pervade every thing and everybody. Here these same young men and these same Anonymas have introduced the dance in its most ungraceful and exaggerated form. In vain have experts been imported from Mobile to teach them its Parisian delicacy of indelicacy and spicy flavor of wickedness. They have preferred to Americanize—and vulgarise—it. The excess to which it has been carried has more than bordered upon insanity. At the height of one of these balls, in the Academy of Music, a single couple occupying a proscenium box, began dancing the can can in full view of the assemblage. Upon the floor beneath, the applauding crowd widened and widened, until those two young persons absorbed the entire interest of the moment. Cheer upon cheer greeted each fresh endeavor; their audience was upon the very tip toe of excitement; flushed and breathless, they danced on, only stopping to throw, kisses and flowers to the swaying crowd, until, ready to faint with exhaustion, they were literally unable to stand a moment longer. On such a scene as this gazed the wives and mothers, the daughters and sisters of respectable citizens, interested and unabashed, if not altogether unblushing. In the very midst of such a scene jostled respectable citizens of New York. Can any comment be more eloquent?

Gathering impetuosity, the great wave of sensuality has rolled on, seemingly without an obstacle to its progress, until at length it seem to have reached a climax, and to be curling and towering above our heads, ready to fall upon us like a destroying deluge. The last masked ball held in this city was a public disgrace, and an insult to civilization. It was advertised in the public press, the tickets were on sale in public places, and every outward claim was made to at least ordinary respectability. But, for many days beforehand, it was the foremost topic of conversation with "Young New York" and anticipated as a delightful ianoration by the inmates of scores of houses of prostitution. These two classes mingled within the walls of a popular theatre, and scenes of revelry and dissipation followed that beggar description. At last the mask was thrown off; nobody claimed respectability; vice herded with vice, corruption with corruption. But in the frightful maelstrom were hurled down to ruin hundreds of young men fitted for the most exalted positions. It was affirmed that there were respectable women present; and it is certain that ordinarily sober men, with gray hair and faces lined with care, witnessed and applauded the horrible parody upon enjoyment with a zest only too evident. The bestial spirit of licentiousness ruled the hour. High and low were reduced to an uncompromising level of degradation. Quadrille, lancers, schottische, waltz and polka were arbitrarily can-can ized. Women were tossed from boxes to floor and back again like so many packages of dry goods, or borne aloft in the crowd, shameless, upon the shoulders of shameless men. Not one faint flicker of refinement, not one feeble remonstrance marred the effrontery and debauchery. Paris was outdone, the eccentricities of La Closerie paled before the extravagances of Mi-Carome; and the long night of revelry went out in the gay twilight, like a garnish meteor, leaving a red trail of blood behind it. Even the voice of Mrs. Grundy was awed by such splendid and fearless sin. One or two newspapers denounced it; the participants winked with bloodshot eyes for a day or two; then it became a thing of the past. Is there no scar left?

The wave still rolls on with accumulative force. Lifting it glittering crest heaven-ward, it is almost glorious in its terrible fascination. What is it sing? On what wild wreck-strewn reef will it break, with all the youth, and beauty, and talent, and ambition, and wealth which it bears along?

A contemporary says:—The Roman Catholic Bishop of Montreal presented Pius IX with $50,000 on the occasion of his Golden Wedding to the Church. The money was all collected in Canada.

CLOSED UP.

From the Goderich Signal.

The patriotic individuals who control the Globe and Leader will not require to preach any more for a while about the Goderich Salt monopoly, for our salt wells are all, for the time being at least, virtually closed. The chimneys are smokeless, hundreds of workmen are idle, and a great national enterprise stands almost paralyzed in the presence of a heartless American monopoly against which our manufacturers have vainly contended in terribly unequal terms. If another barrel of salt is ever made in a district capable of turning out millions of barrels yearly, we have no doubt it will please the editors of journals, one of which, at least, has long claimed to lead the van in the march of Canadian Progress. Notwithstanding the one-sided, unjust and even insulting arguments brought against us by a section of the Toronto press, we believe, as we have always believed, that if this salt had been in a Toronto interest, those papers would have talked differently, and we believe in our heart that one reason why Canadian Salt has no savor to the editors is because some one has dared to discover it outside of the proposed hub of Ontario. Toronto is a tremendous place; its nabobs can diddle the ratepayers of distant municipalities out of big bonuses to its projected railways, they can form vast schemes of canal digging, they take in hand the opening of the north-west, and so on, but we may rest assured that in all things said nabobs will in the end pocket everybody else's money, and laugh at the fools who trusted in them. But we ask the intelligent reader has he ever heard of Toronto doing a disinterested thing? In this light we can understand the puerile sayings of the Globe and Leader on the salt question. Toronto interest lies somewhere near the fountains of their inspiration; these being secured, the rest of Ontario may go to the dogs.

The Globe says in reply:—

"The design of all this was to make the public believe that the works had been closed in consequence of American competition, and the lack of protection, and were not likely to be re-opened. We do not like to use harsh phrases, but can hardly avoid saying that these statements are entirely false. The works have been temporarily closed, simply to introduce new machinery into the works, which will enable salt to be manufactred at half the previous cost! No better proof of the correctness of our course on the salt question could be offered. If the demand for protection had been acceded to, the Goderich manufacturers would have been satisfied with their old utensils, and the country would have paid a high price for its salt. They have been suffered to feel the influence of competition, and the natural good result has followed. They have set themselves to find out how they can manufacture cheaper, and think they have solved the problem. If it be true that they can manufacture salt for fifty cents a barrel, which we are assured is the case, they may set all competition at defence. Even at the old cost of manufacturing, they have not done badly. They have secured a large trade in Toronto, so their agent tells us, although this is a very convenient point for the operations of the Syracuse Company, and they have been able to obtain remunerative rates in spite of the much talked of competition of the monopoly; when the new works are in operation, they will do still better.

Confession of a Murderer.

Wm. Sheward the self-accused murderer of Norwich, (Eng.) has made a full and written confession. Nearly eighteen years ago he murdered his wife, by cutting her throat with a razor, during an altercation respecting the disposal of certain moneys. She appears to have been much older than he, and they had no family; but what gives a terrible interest to the case is the fact that, after having carried his load of guilt about with him so long, he was compelled to disburthen his conscience, by making a voluntary confession of the murder, even after the mysterious occurrence had almost faded from local memory. But this is not all that gives unusual horror to the tale. To avoid discovery, he, from day to day, cut the body to pieces, in the house, and after dark, went out, strewing portions of it about the streets or lanes, and even putting into a pan, the head, a hand and the feet, in hopes that they might boil to pieces. The long hair he cut into shreds and let them blow away as he walked along. The ghastly relics were found at the time, and great exertions were made by the police to have them identified, and, likewise to trace the unknown murderer. There was also much speculation as to the age, station in life, sex, &c. of the deceased. The only tolerably certain conclusion come to was, that the remains were those of a female. It was never suspected that Mrs. Sheward was dead, much less murdered. Her husband gave out to the neighbors and his wife's acquaintance, that she had gone on a lengthened visit to her relations. In a short time he himself left the city, and in a year was afterwards married. His second wife is still alive.

VICISSITUDE OF A PEERESS.—The Countess of Mornington is dead. Her story is sad and pitiful. She was the daughter of Col. Patterson, and granddaughter of a Scottish House of large property in Renfrewshire. Her first husband was Captain Bligh, of the Coldstream Guards. Early left a widow, in 1828, when little more than thirty years of age, she married the Hon. William Pole Tylney-Long-Wellesley, then the only son of Lord Maryborough, who had already gained the reputation of having broken one wife's heart, and squandered the greater part of the fine property which had come to him by marriage from the Tylneys and the Longs. In course of time Mr. Long-Wellesley became Earl of Mornington, and head of the house of Wellesley; and when, some ten years ago, that nobleman died, a pensioner on the charity of his relatives, in an obscure lodging house near Marylebonelane, his poor wife had once, if not more than once, appeared at a metropolitan police court as a suppliant for public charity. Of late years nothing had been heard of her till the notification of her death the other day. She had attained her 75th year.—English paper.

TWO WOMEN BURNED TO DEATH.—The Sherbrooke Gazette says:—The house and barn of Walter Covey, at Pinkham's Corner, Stanstead, was burned on Saturday night last, with all its contents. Mrs. Mary Ann Tryon, aged 82, and her daughter, aged 59, perished in the flames. Efforts were made to rescue them by the stairway and from the window, but the flames prevented.

A young girl has been tried recently at Bordeaux for having thrown vitriol in her lover's face, when, after seducing, he refused to marry her. The court found her guilty, and fined her one franc for the assault.

INSOLVENCY.

The wholesale merchants of Toronto and Montreal are very greatly moved over the Insolvent or Bankrupt Act of Canada, passed a few years ago, for the express purpose of relieving honest traders from liabilities they never could pay. They were then as desirous to get the Act passed as they are now to get it repealed. The severe crash of 57 and 58 affected so many that it was really considered an advantage to the mercantile interests to open a way whereby many men forced to succumb to the pressure of the times, might return to business. In the meantime the honest and dishonest trader alike has taken advantage of the Act, so that about 3,000 individual cases of whitewashing, as it is called, has taken place under its provisions. Sir John A. McDonald has introduced a bill intended to remove the evil, and it is likely to become law, but in a somewhat modified form.

Several of the members have expressed themselves in favor of repealing the old law, but the greater number spoke in favor of having the law amended. The great evil complained of was the facilities afforded to debtors to take the benefit of the Act. The proposed Bill prevents this by providing that no discharge will be granted unless a certain dividend, of say 50 cents in the dollar, be realized. Such a clause will induce debtors to seek to go through the bankrupt court sooner than otherwise they would, for if not, they may arrive at a point at which they cannot.

The reasonable way for wholesale houses to do, is to be more careful in their business, deal only with the right class of men, and use them well, and there will be fewer cases of bankruptcy. Experience has found that in every country some sort of bankrupt law is necessary, and it would be better to return or amend the law rather than permit assignments to favored creditors, as was too often the case formerly,

A TEACHERS' CONVENTION.

At a late meeting of the Teachers of the eastern part of this County, including some from Dummer, Douro and Otonabee, it was agreed to hold a Teachers' Convention in Peterboro in the month of August. It will not be confined to Teachers only, but be open to all Teachers, Trustees and the friends of education. Arrangements will be made and announced in a short time, and if a suitable programme can be got ready, it will be published.

In other counties these Conventions have proved a source of pleasure and advantage Teachers avail themselves willingly of the opportunity to hear what others have to say on the subject of teaching, and to witness the different modes proposed and explained for carrying out the great work of the Teacher. It will not be denied that a convention during a period of two or three days would afford time for considerable interchange of thoughts and words. During two days most of the subjects taught in our Common Schools could be discussed, and the different methods pursued in imparting information could be investigated. The Teacher, like all other men, requires information; if he does not possess it, he cannot impart it. Not only so, but he requires aptness of illustration, and readiness to impart what he does know.

Many of our teachers have not had an opportunity of witnessing any method of teaching but their own, or perhaps that of one or two others, who have occupied a place in the list of successful teachers not very high. This convention will afford an opportunity of witnessing the modes of the best teachers in the County, and perhaps that of a few from other Counties. There will also be an opportunity of hearing two or more lectures on the subject of teachers duties, education, or some kindred topic. We expect that all the teachers of the County will take an interest in, and do what they can to make it a success. Next week we hope to be able to give full particulars.

The Bill to make the first of July a legal holiday has been withdrawn. It will therefore be left with municipal authorities to issue proclamations to that effect, when requested by the people. It is not wise to increase the number of holidays unduly, and yet a day now and then, if properly spent in healthful recreation, would not make the world any the worse. Leaving the subject of a Dominion holiday at the will of the people, will be as good a test of their loyalty as to have it declared a holiday by statute.

The examination of Teachers, at Norwood, will commence on Thursday, the Twenty-Seventh instant. Intending candidates will do well to remember the day.

CHALONER ACQUITED.

As we intimated last week, the jury in this remarkable case rendered a verdict of "Not guilty." This is just what the country expected, although not according to the facts of the case. There can be no doubt in the mind of any one, but that young Chaloner shot Whittaker, and shot after deliberation, with intent to kill him. It is argued, however, that the young man was not in his right mind when he did the deed, that he was laboring under a fit of temporary insanity, arising from the shock received on hearing of his sister's disgrace. The man who shoots another, cannot be in his right mind when he performs the act; nothing but some kind of insanity or madness would tempt a man or boy to take the life of his fellow. The laws of our country, too, recognise this temporary madness in some cases. It is not, therefore, unreasonable to expect that juries will take the liberty that our legislators have done, and also recognise a species of insanity as sufficient palliation for this most dreadful of crimes—murder. The laws of the country are sometimes to blame for the verdicts contrary to common sense and fact, that are too often rendered in law courts. Where the punishment is too severe for the crime, we may expect juries leaning to the side of mercy, and returning verdicts calculated to relieve from punishment, although they do not thereby intend to acquit of the crime. And again the law is so lax in other cases, that the people consider the crime a righteous infliction of justice upon a person that would otherwise go unpunished. The crime for which Whittaker lost his life almost goes unpunished, although in its effects it very often proves to be murder to all intents and purposes. The redress, too, is of such a nature that few desire to avail themselves of it, as men recoil from the idea of a money remuneration or the verdict of a court, for the ruin of a daughter or a sister. The heartless wretch who disgraced young Chaloner's family, would have been able to pass unpunished by law, and this was the very idea that maddened the youth to take the law into his own hands. There is a general wail on account of the uncertainty to human life, if the law should thus be taken into every man's hands, so that he may become his own avenger; and it is not at all be wondered at that men should fear.

It is cause for serious consideration, that a crime so outrageous should demand the vengeance of a brother, because the law, as it is framed, does not meet out sufficient punishment. There is cause to fear the repetition of this affair, unless our legislators step in, and by statute make the seducer amenable to our criminal laws, not merely to pay a sum of money, but liable to penal servitude for a term of years. It will be argued that this will lend the way to seduction in a different manner, in order either to secure the punishment of a man, or to force him to marry one whom otherwise he would not. To this it may be said that if he allows himself to be seduced he deserves to suffer the penalty.

The community now fails to see why laws should be framed wholly to suit the Lords of creation only, and much as we regret the rash act of young Chaloner, and the terrible deed of sending a human being unprepared into the presence of a Judge who cannot look upon sin but with abhorrence, ought to meet the disapprobation of every man; but if this act should induce a healthier state of Legislation it will not prove too much for the loon. We wonder very much that women themselves do not petition for redress in this matter. But their fathers, brothers, husbands, sons, and acquaintances, should be their protectors and should seek protection for them by legal means; if it is not granted, then and not till then should they become their avengers. We very much fear that the excitement caused by this Chaloner case will pass away unimproved, and that untill a case more aggravating, if possible, occurs, like every other prevailing vice of man, it will be allowed to go unchecked, so long as he can exercise influence enough in Legislative Halls to prevent his own punishment.

DROWNED.—We have received the melancholy intelligence, that Mr. Geo. Birdsall, brother-in-law to Richard Birdsall, Esq., of Asphodel, was drowned in Marmora Lake on Friday evening last. It appears that Mr. Birdsall and another gentleman, whose name we have not learned, went out in a small boat fishing. The craft was capsized in some way. Mr. Birdsall was a good swimmer, and told the other man to hold by the boat and he would endeavor to get to land, but he perished in the attempt, the distance being about half a mile. The other man was found clinging to the boat, almost exhausted. Mr. Birdsall was about 26 years of age, and leaves a young wife to mourn his melancholy decease.

We learn also that Mr. Almond Harris was drowned near Love Sick Rapids on the —th instant. He and Mr. Jones, Wesleyan Minister, were going down the waters when Mr. Harris was lost. Mr. Jones narrowly escaped.

A Frenchman was drowned yesterday opposite the town. He was out fishing.

VELOCIPEDEQUERADE.—As will be seen by reference to our advertising columns, a Grand Velocipede Masquerade Carnival will come off at the Drill Shed, Peterboro, on Friday evening, May 21st inst. We understand that the Shed will be prepared for the occasion, and a number of new Machines added to those already in town; a jolly time is expected. Lovers of fun will thus have an opportunity for a few hours amusement. This is to be the only Carnival of the season. The Band of the 57th Battalion will be in attendance during the evening and discourse some lively music.

THE QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY.—We understand that preparations, on a large scale, are now going on for the celebration of Her Majesty's natal day. The "Terribles" are in the field, and will again afford our citizens a few hours fun. We have no doubt but that the Militia and Fire Company will also turn out and that a gala day may be looked for, especially if the weather be at all favourable. The inhabitants of this great Dominion unite heartily in doing honor to the best of Queens and Peterboro will not be behind. We trust arrangements will be made for all classes of our citizens taking part in the affair.

Canada's White Elephant.

We last, when the news of the terms of the Hudson Bay purchase was announced, that we had paid for the whistle, and although we are inclined to have the matter settled, there can be no doubts in the minds of the community that some men would be better at home than abroad managing public business, Canadians will find that out too. The Pall Mall Gazette April, 23rd says:

Curses as well as blessings often come in disguise. The end of a long struggle for a desired possession is not unfrequently the beginning of unexpected trouble. It was a victory on the part of Prussia to expel Austria from Germany. It was a splendid triumph for Napoleon III. to secure the title while wishing the sceptre of his uncle. Yet neither Count Bismarck nor the Emperor Napoleon may have seen the trials which awaited them on the morrow of success.—Thus it may be with the Dominion of Canada, unless, as we hope, the rule shall in this case, be illustrated by a brilliant exception. Year after year the natives of Upper and Lower Canada have denounced the Hudson's Bay Company as usurpers, and threatened them with the fate of intruderes. The fur traders have been warned that if they did not retire from an untenable position and abandon an unauthorized traffic, they would lose everything they valued and treated as their own. By the shareholders in the Hudson's Bay Company these menaces were attributed to envy. They believed themselves secure against attack. Indeed, so constantly were their rights assailed without being seriously compromised that they came to regard their as based on a secure and lasting foundation. Seeing that the loud talk of their opponents did not hinder the declaration of substantial dividends, they waxed over confident of their strength and shut their ears to the wholesome truths which cool-headed and impartial on-lookers uttered for their instruction and guidance. The inevitable conclusion has at last arrived.—Under the pressure of circumstances which they could neither control or disregard these shareholders have signified their willingness to resign the sovereign rights they rated so highly, taking in return £300,000 and many thousand acres of land. What the Company at first regarded as a disaster seems likely to improve their fortunes; shares are rising and the proprietors are already beginning to smile through their tears. That the coercion applied to them was somewhat harsh cannot be denied, and nobody will grudge their brightening prospects. As for the Canadians, that they have achieved so thorough a success, must be to them a matter of rejoicing. But they will do well to remember that the acquisition of a tract of country nearly as large and diversified, both as regards soil and climate, as the whole of Europe, entails a responsibility of no common kind. From both sides of the Atlantic they will hear the question, "What will they do with it?"

Now that the country is likely to be ours. There is a necessity that something be done to settle it. It will not do to act in this matter, as we have been doing with the lands we already possess; leave them the haunts of wild animals, and of the red man. For many years the government of Canada has been without a policy on this subject. If a settler or explorer chanced to find a stone of a sparkling or yellowish appearance, and announced it to the public, the Cabinet became alarmed and stopped all sale of lands least they might dispose of a few granite rocks, or perhaps, a few tons of lead. For years not an acre of wild land could be purchased at any money. It this is to be the policy of the government in future, of what use will the immense tracts to the West be? There is a vacillation about every act of the government that leaves an impression of insecurity in the minds of the people which operates injuriously towards the settlement of this country. Many farmers leave for the West, in order to get lands for their sons. Some of them are taking away from $4,000 to $8,000. This sum they intend to invest in the Western States. If our wild land policy was such as to induce them to remain here, would not this sum be spent in improving wild farms, building mills, &c., be of considerable importance in some new settlement. The press of the country has harped upon this string until it is almost worn out, and yet nothing is being done, while capital, bone and sinew, and enterprise is driven away from us.

The Gazette further says:

"The most difficult problem requiring solution relates to the kind of government to be established over the new territory. This territory cannot well be united to the Province of Ontario. It is too vast to constitute a province by itself, while it is too sparsely peopled to be entitled to the form of representative government prevailing throughout the Dominion. For a considerable time the settlers will doubtless be satisfied with a share in the local Government, and will consent to forego representation in the Dominion Parliament. Everything in the shape of undue exercise of central authority must be carefully avoided. All that can fairly be done to promote local enterprise must be cheerfully conceded. As best calculated to increase general satisfaction by furthering individual interests, the formation of roads and the opening up of communication by water are among the first duties incumbent on the new proprietors of the Hudson's Bay Territory. Even now it is easier to reach the Red River settlement by way of the United States than through the western part of Canada. But this obstacle to unfettered intercourse is in process of removal. A road is being made between the settlement and the Canadian shore at the head of Lake Superior. Besides, a project has been mooted of a grander character and of more extended importance. It is proposed to construct a railway from Ottawa to the Pacific. As this line would be in connection with the Grand Trunk and the Intercolonial, Halifax on the Atlantic would be placed in direct communication with a Pacific port, and merchandise might thus be forwarded through British territory between England and China or Japan. That this railway when made (and we have nothing to say about it as a railway scheme) would prove a formidable competitor with the line through the United States, has been asserted with great show and reason. Its cost has to be counted and its difficulties to be disposed of by the constructors and proprietors of the line. What concerns others is the fact that such a railway would shorten the distance between Liverpool and the East by 700 miles as compared with the route through the United States.

It is clear that the Canadians will not languish for want of momentous subjects to discuss, when they become masters of Rupert's Land and the Northwestern Territory. Before the dreams of their statesmen are fulfilled they will have to vanquish many obstacles, give practical answers to some puzzling questions, and submit to not a few trials of their patience. Should their success be equal to their hopes, and to the expectations formed by their well-wishers, they will demonstrate to the world that while the gift of a white elephant is certain to prove the ruin of those who are unworthy of the honour, it is an increase of glory to those capable of sustaining the burden and qualified for appreciating the boon."

The following statement of the revenue and expenditure of the Dominion of Canada for the month ended 30 April, 1869, is published:

PARLIAMENTARY.

The great business of the House up to the present day is preparation, making ready bills. Very little has been accomplished yet. We must therefore wait a little longer for Bills in their amended form. The discussion of the Intercolonial matters is kept as far off as possible, waiting, it is thought a then house toward the end of the session, or perhaps waiting to make their work more sure, by securing luke-warm followers. On the Insolvency Bill:—

Sir John A. Macdonald moved the second reading of the Bill. He said this was substantially the measure submitted by the Select Committee last session. It was not identical with it, however, considerable amendments in detail having been incorporated with it on the suggestions of various parties, since it was submitted to Parliament. He had hoped, considering the full discussion the question received from the Committee and elsewhere last session, and the care with which the amendments to the existing law had been prepared, that after adopting the principle of the Bill—if the principle be adopted, they might have proceeded at once into Committee of the Whole to consider the details of the measure. Since the printing of the Bill, however, and its distribution, some serious difficulties as to various features of it had been suggested. He had received a pamphlet containing a large number of valuable suggestions from the very highest authority in Ontario. It was quite clear that where a large number of amendments were to be proposed, it could not be done with advantage in a Committee of the Whole, where there was not a full opportunity of considering what effect each amendment would have on the whole frame-work of the Bill. In order, therefore, that due weight might be given to these suggestions, coming from the very high authority he had referred to, he would ask the House, after the second reading, to allow the Bill to go to a Special Committee; and he would ask that Committee to proceed to work at once, so that there might be nothing to prevent the measure from arriving in due season in the other branch of the Legislature. He would not now enter on a defence of the principle of the insolvency law. The House having adopted the principle last session, it was for himself and others who held that view to defer any defence until they heard what objections might be offered to it.

Mr. Casault hoped the Bill would be translated over again. The French copy was so unintelligible that he had to throw it aside, and send for an English copy.

Hon. J. H. Cameron thought before the Bill went to a Special Committee there should be a general expression of the views entertained by members, that the committee in dealing with the subject might have the benefit of that expression of opinion. Some—but he was not of the number—thought there should be no bankruptcy law at all. Others had objections to the existing law in several of its features, which ought to be fairly considered. One main objection he had to this Bill in its present shape, and which he had to the existing law, was that it admitted the principle of voluntary assignments. He thought it a mistake that the debtor should be allowed to take the initiative towards his own insolvency with a view to getting rid of his liabilities. That should be the act not of the debtor, but of the creditor. Since this measure was before the House on a former session, a Bill on the same subject had been introduced into the English Parliament by the Attorney-General, Sir Robert Collyer, which contained many points that might be considered with great profit by the Special Committee. In some of these improvements of which he was about to speak, he believed the majority of the members of the House would be found entirely to concur, while others there might be disposed to accept them in a modified form. Of late years there had been a gradual coming down from the rigour of the old law, and the new law was so exceedingly clement as actually to change the places of debtor and creditor. He did not approve of the spirit of the old law, which placed the debtor at the mercy of the creditor all the days of his life; nor did he approve of running into the other extreme. The law should be framed in such a way as to protect the creditor in every way as far as possible against either the dishonesty or the reckless dealing of the debtor. With is view one of the provisions of the English Bill lately introduced was that no man should get a final discharge from the liabilities unless his estate had paid a certain dividend in the pound, (Hear, hear,) a certain number of years being allowed for that purpose. He would prefer a modification, however, of the English provision, which was that a discharge should not be granted unless a composition of ten shillings in the pound was paid within five years.—He thought if the debtor were told that he would get his discharge, provided he paid, say, seven and sixpence within the first year, or eight shillings in the second; eight and sixpence in the third; nine in the fourth; or ten shillings in the fifth; so that the postponement of the final settlement made it necessary to pay the more, it would be an inducement to the debtor to have his estate rapidly realized. There were also a large number of penal clauses. He thought where there was a distinct appearance of fraud in a case of insolvency, it would be more proper for the judge to deal with it than the jury, and to inflict the degree of punishment in the way of imprisonment proportionate to the offence. Another very important point, he considered, was that the law should require every man who entered into trade to keep certain books, which could be easily defined, and that the fact of an insolvent being found not to have kept proper books, should be a ground for suspending or withholding the certificate altogether. In looking over a return, made by one of the Official Assignees, of 31 estates which were in bankruptcy, he ascertained that 29 of the 31 kept no proper books, and 11 kept none at all. A good deal of the present machinery, he thought, was not for the benefit of the creditors, but was fitted most effectually to waste the estate. He thought in most cases the proceedings could be conducted better by the Sheriff, who had all the necessary officers and applicances for realizing a bankrupt estate, than they could be by any Official Assignee. As an illustration of this he mentioned the facts of a case in which a Sheriff's sale, when it was just on the moment of taking place, under circumstances which would have realized good prices, was suspended by the arrival of an Official Assignee with a writ of attachment in his hand, when the goods were removed to another locality and sold there. After a considerable lapse of time the estate did not realize anything like what might have been expected.

Hon. Mr. Dorion said that in Montreal the majority of the commercial men, bankrupts, and all, were opposed to any bankrupt law at all believing that under it the estates were frittered away, and costs increased. He complained that, under the present system the mortgage creditor was placed at a disadvantage in Ontario; where-as, in Quebec, five months notice of the sale of the property for debt had to be given. This Bill would reduce the time of notice to one month. Again, as mentioned by the member for Peel, frequently the debtor's property was taken out of the hands of the Sheriff by the Assignee, when about to be sold—and then all the expenses of advertising, etc, were lost. In the country, it seemed to him that the interests of the debtors, and not of the creditors, was looked to. Undoubtedly, the tendency of the Bill was to promote a loose and irregular way of doing business, and lessen the security which the creditor had.

Mr. Harrison was not satisfied because the law had been abused, that therefore there should be none at all. In old Roman days, the creditors had the right of having the debtor's body cut and distributed between them equally. There and then they had a very high idea of the creditors' rights. In England, from the time of Henry the Eighth down, there had been attempts, but unsuccessful ones, at a really good and acceptable bankrupt law. The difficulty was to get a really efficient, and yet a cheap system; but in England that had not been obtained.—There were too many judges and too many lawyers concerned in winding up estates, to allow of them being wound up economically. (Laughter.) Hence the expenses there reached 15 per cent of the entire assets of the estate. In Scotland, where a better system prevailed, the expenses only reached 12 per cent, and on that system the Canadian law had been based. Over importation was another fruitful source of there bankruptcies. Having over-imported, wholesale men were compelled to send runners through the country and force off their goods. Look at the extent of the importations in dry goods in Montreal alone. In 1864 they were valued at $4,000,000; in 1865 at $8,000,000; in 1866 at $11,000,000; in 1867 at $12,000,000. While the population increased 20 per cent, the importations increased 60 per cent. In advocating the measure before the House, he would claim that he was disinterested, as the measure was certainly anything but in the interests of the legal profession. He would not go at length into the matter, but would vote for its reference to Committee.

Mr. MacKenzie admitted that, as had been stated, those opposed to this Bill ought at this stage to show the cause therefore. He had the strongest possible reason for believing that public opinion throughout Ontario was very decidedly in favour of the repeal of the present law—partly for the reasons stated by the hon. gentleman behind him (Mr. Magill), that its working had been found eminently conducive to public immorality; that it had been made the means of enabling many to escape from liabilities which they had incurred without any intention of cheating, and that it had been made the means of permitting many to escape from the payment of their honest debts, where ample means existed for such payment. In this matter it had been stated by the member for Toronto that it had been found impossible to combine cheapness with efficiency. To have a just efficient bankrupt law, there must be efficient machinery; and to secure that, whether by Bank registry Commissioners or a District Court, the expense would be necessarily heavy. It was not to be supposed, because the law was worked with us by assignees, appointed by the creditors, that, therefore, it was inexpensive. His own experience, so far as he had been able to observe its working, was that the fees to assignees had been considerably greater in most cases than would have existed by the regular judicial officers of the country. (Hear, hear.) Again, it was impossible for a meeting of ordinary creditors to comprehend the nature of the Bill fully; and the result has been that for the years back the Assignee had been allowed to do just what he pleased with the estate. Certainly, a large majority of the cases occurring at present were so treated. He would give a sample of the course which he knew to be taken in several cases. A person finds it to be to his profit, or a matter of absolute necessity, to arrange with his creditors. He leaves his place of business goes to his principal creditors, and says: "I can compromise with you for 50 cents on the dollar, if you like to take it. If not, I will make an assignment." He had known such cases, and, further, had even known the party to go beforehand to the Official Assignee and arrange with him to put the thing through for a certain amount.

A number had been mentioned as having taken advantage of the Act—some 3,000—but there was not fully that number, for several had gone through in almost every place twice or three times; so that though that figure might represent the number passing through, as Mr. Wiman said, it was subject to a reduction, in consequence of many going through the court for the 2nd or 3rd time. The hon. member for Hochelaga had correctly remarked that the number who compromised with their creditors was in excess of the number going through the Courts. That really seemed to be the mode adopted in almost every instance now, and as far as he (Mr. Mackenzie) was concerned, he would not at the present moment run the risk of any case going through the Court. The hon. gentleman urged that not only in the great commercial centres was there strong opposition to the Bankrupt Law, but all through the Province. To test the feeling on the question in his town, a petition calling for the repeal of the law had been sent round, and it received the signature of every commercial man in the community. So degraded had public opinion become under the law, that he knew of a landing-waiter going through the Insolvent Court to avoid payment of his grocery bills. It seemed to him impossible to perpetuate this present system, without degrading the country and bringing the law into reproach. He admitted that there was cases in which the honest man ought to be relieved of liabilities entered into with no dishonest intention. But for this purpose it would be sufficient to enact some law similar to the present, every five years or ten. For his part he could not recollect a single instance in which an honest man making a fair exhibit to his creditors failed to obtain release. (Hear, hear.) There was really no necessity for the present Bill. He admitted that there was a good deal of truth in the remarks of the hon. member for Toronto; that much of the present evil was due to over-trading, and for one he (Mr. MacKenzie) had very little sympathy with them, particularly the Montreal wholesale merchants. They had flooded the entire west with their goods and where such parties suffered they were rightly served. But still, making allowance for all this, it is clear that a state of things existed under the present law, which was exceedingly disastrous to the morals of the country as well as its trade relations. However, if we are to have a bankrupt law the suggestion of the member for Peel ought to be embodied. There ought to be no discharge unless, as in England, the debtor paid 10s. in the pound, and the power of voluntary assignment should be done away with. He could cite cases in which this power of voluntary assignment had been used as a weapon for compelling the assent of creditors to a measure of compromise. He merely made these few observations to show his objection to the Bankrupt Law at the present times. With his present information, he for one was prepared to vote for the abrogation of the law.

Hon Mr. Gray said, that looking a the arguments advanced, it was apparent that the objections were directed to the machinery of the Bill more than its principle. Looking at the principle of the measure, he asked, how does the credit commence? It was optional with the creditor to give or withhold it. It was given to make money, and given on the faith of the protection of the law, and the individual integrity of the debtor. The principle was admitted on all hands that the honest debtor ought to be relied on when unable to pay, and that the dishonest man ought to be prevented from taking advantage of the Act if possible.—As a member of the Bankruptcy Committee last session, he (Col. Gray) knew that they had opinions and suggestions on the subject from all parts of the Provinces, and that from nearly all quarters the principle of an Insolvent Bill had been admitted. The differences were only in

It is stated that about eight hundred commercial travellers are employed by Montreal Houses at salaries averaging to $900,000, making a very big hole in small profits, and causing no end of competition; and it will require sales to the amount of forty millions dollars per season to cover that expense alone, calculating it two and a half per cent. The country has been deluged with goods through travellers; they run from Dan to Beersheba, selling to any and every one at prices ruinous to the seller.—In the smallest French Canadian villages they are at times to be found in shoals selling large amounts to men who do not know how to buy, and whose credit never at any time exceeded a few dollars. It is little wonder if, under so vicious a system, bankruptcies ensue, and the wholesale dealer loses heavily. It is on them the loss should fall, for they are the parties personally responsible for it.

Is there not manhood enough in our Dominion Parliament to stop the foolish Intercolonial Railway project. Every member of the Legislature knows that millions spent upon it might as well be thrown into the sea, where they would at all events cause no further outlay, whereas the Intercolonial will be a constant tax imposed on the country to keep it up, the very contractors who tender for it, condemn it as a foolish and wasteful job, that cannot pay in any way, and yet, all this expenditure is to be incurred by a country drowned in debt, and in urgent need of means for really valuable improvements. Far better would it be to divide the half of the money among the ring that has engineered this gigantic job and save the other half, than to go on with it.—Witness.

The constituent Cortes of Spain, after rejecting several amendments to those articles of the new constitution, which establish religious toleration, yesterday adopted the article guaranteeing liberty of worship, by 165 years against 40 says. As the adherents of the two branches of the Bourbons together number only about 20 members, some 20 members of the other parties, chiefly, we suppose, of the Liberal Union, have in this question separated from the union of all the Liberal parties, and voted for the continuance of the former intolerance.

Cork, May 8—Mr. O'Sullivan, the present mayor of Cork, has refused a nomination for parliament from the electors of Youghal. The Irish national papers defend the recent course of Mr. O'Sullivan.

Despatches from Cork mention the perpetration of similar outrages.

There seems to be doubt that the culprits belong, in every instance, to the Fenian organization.

The police have been ordered to exercise unusual vigilance.

Quinn, convicted of the murder of L'Heureux, was sentenced at the Quebec Assizes to be hanged on the 2nd of July. He asserts his innocence, and said that Flynn, the chief witness for the crown, was a perjurer, and should be in his (Quinn's) place. Judge Caron warned the prisoner to prepare for his end, as the court would not support the jury's recommendation to mercy.

London, May 10.—In the House of Commons to-day, Mr. Forte-que, Chief Secretary for Ireland, in reply to an enquiry of Lord John Manners, said that Her Majesty's Ministers were already considering the best means of increasing the powers of the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, for the more effectual repression of outrages in that country.

The government of Great Britain publishes three papers, The Gazette of London, Edinburgh, and Dublin. All three make money, but The London Gaze te is by far the most profitable. The net revenue for the three last years was more than $90,000.

There have been several heavy robberies of arms ammunition, &c., in various parts of Ireland during the past few days. At Belfast a large quantity of arms was stolen last evening, and five parties were arrested on suspicion this morning.

Madrid, May 8—It is certain that a proposal has been made to the Cortes to name Marshal Serrano as regent and Gen. Prim as president of the council and minister of war till the king is elected.

Don't Know What to Do. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and testify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers.

At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since Ex-President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to excite the ire or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbours, they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; an immediate outbreak was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had taught all nations. "In time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

Is not this a lesson to us to fortify our Southern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of rheumatism, coughs, colds, cholics, bowel complaints, and all other diseases incident to this climate by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," Can be had of any Medicine Dealer for 25cts per bottle

Two Questions Easily Answered.—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure o each complaints. Sold by all Dealers at 25

April.—The Alabama claims were allowed to disturb too long the citizens of the two great Anglo-Saxon communities. The carelessness of one set of statesmen, the indifference of another set, and the cupidity or prejudice of another class, have combined to keep this question wrongly rankling in the great political system, like consumption in the human frame, which spreads so rapidly until checked and expelled by the great SUCCESSORIS REMEDY. DARLEY'S

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Conditiou Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalising the c rculation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stoons, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are relatable and self-administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.

A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long ou the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

The reputation this excellent medicine enjoys, is derived from its cures, many of which are truly marvellous. Inveterate cases of Scrofulous disease, where the system seemed saturated with corruption, have been purified and cured by it. Scrofulous affections and disorders, which were aggravated by the scrofulous contamination until they were painfully afflicting, have been radically cured in such great numbers in almost every section of the country, that the public scarcely need to be informed of its virtues or uses.

Scrofulous poison is one of the most destructive enemies of our race. Often, this unseen and unfelt tenant of the organism undermines the constitution, and invites the attack of enfeebling or fatal diseases, without exciting a suspicion of its presence. Again, it seems to breed infection throughout the body, and then, on some favorable occasion, rapidly develop into one or other of its hideous forms, either on the surface or among the vitals. In the latter, tubercles may be suddenly deposited in the lungs or heart, or tumors formed in the liver, or it shows its presence by eruptions on the skin, or foul ulcerations on some part of the body. Hence the occasional use of a bottle of this Sarsaparilla is advisable, even when no active symptoms of disease appear. Persons afflicted with the following complaints generally find immediate relief, and, at length, cure, by the use of this SARSAPARILLA: St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Sore Ears, and other eruptions or visible forms of Scrofulous disease. Also in the more concealed forms, as Dyspepsia, Dropsy, Heart Disease, Fits, Epilepsy, Neuralgia, and the various Uterous affections of the muscular and nervous system.

Syphilis or Venereal and Mercurial Diseases are cured by it, though a long time is required for subduing these obstinate maladies by any medicine. But long continued use of this medicine will cure the complaint. Leucorrhœa or Whites, Uterine Ulcerations, and Female Diseases, are commonly soon relieved and ultimately cured by its purifying and invigorating effect. Minute Directions for each case are found in our Almanac, supplied gratis. Rheumatism and Gout, when caused by accumulations of extraneous matters in the blood, yield quickly to it, as also Liver Complaints, Torpidity, Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and Jaundice, when arising, as they often do, from the rankling poisons in the blood. This SARSAPARILLA is a great restorer for the strength and vigor of the system. Those who are Languid and Listless, Despondent, Sleepless, and troubled with Nervous Apprehensions or Fears, or any of the affections symptomatic of Weakness, will find immediate relief and convincing evidence of its restorative power upon trial.

A good story is told of one of the baggage masters at a station between London and Toronto—a fat, good natured eccentric fellow, whose jokes have become popular on the road. His name was Bill. One morning, while in the performance of his duties in changing baggage an ugly little Scotch terrier got in his way, and he gave him a smart kick, which sent him over the track yelping. The owner of the dog soon appeared in high dudgeon, wanting to know why he kicked his dog. Was that your dog asked Bill, in his usual drawl. Certainly it was; what right had you to kick him?' 'He's mad,' said Bill, in his usual drawl. 'No, he's not mad either,' said the other. 'Well, I should be, if anybody kicked me in that way,' responded Bill.

'There are tricks in all trades but ours,' as the lawyer said to his client. An honest rustic went into the shop of a Quaker to buy a hat, for which six dollars was demanded. He offered five dollars. 'As I live,' said the Quaker. 'I cannot afford to give it thee at that price.' 'As you live,' exclaimed the country man, 'then' live more moderately, and be hanged to you!' 'Friend!' said the Quaker, 'thou shalt have the hat for nothing. I have sold hats for twenty years, and my trick was never found out till now.'

It is a fact perhaps not generally known but interesting to young men, that the solitary ringlet, which floats from so many waterfalls, is a notification on the part of the wearer that she is not engaged. If it is extremely long the wearer is supposed to be very desirous of getting spliced at once; if only moderately long, it shows that only good offers will be entertained; an extremely short meagre ringlet indicates that the wearer is very particular as to whom she receives but never the less shows that she is not yet engaged.

A lawyer was once pleading a case that brought tears into the jurors eyes, and every one gave up the case as gone for the plaintiff. But the opposing counsel arose and said; 'May it please the Court, I do not propose in this case to bore for water, but—' Here the tears were suddenly dried, laughter ensued, the ridiculousness of the case was exposed, and the defendant got clear.

When the 'pledge' was being circulated at a temperance meeting, a decidedly inebriated individual presented himself and offered his signature. The chairman remarked. 'This is a very important step, my friend, and I trust you realize the responsibility you are assuming.' 'Oh I can stand the (hic) 'sponsibility,' was the response, 'I've done it lots of times before.'

'How many children have you?' asked an employer of one of his laborers, looking around to surprise upon the family. 'Better than a dozen sir.' 'I only make out eleven,' said the employer. 'Faith, an' isn't that better than a dozen sir, when one has to feed 'em?' exclaimed the happy father.

One of the insane in the North Carolina Asylum recently visited the Legislature. Upon his return the Superintendent asked him what he thought of it. Relapsing into a 'brown study for a moment, he looked up and arid; 'Well I think they are a branch of this establishment.'

An attachment to a champagne bottle, patented in England, permits a part of the contents to be withdrawn without in the least injuring the rest. The attachment to champagne bottles in this country is such that not a single drop is left in them after they are once opened.

'Pat,' said Judge Tiff to his neighbor in a sleeping car, 'you would have remained a long time in the old country before you could have slept with a Judge.' 'Yes, yer Honor; and you would have been a long time in the country before ye'd been Judge.'

An asthmatic patient, who is rather deficient in orthography, wrote to his physician, stating 'that his coffin had returned, and desiring to know what he should do; to which the latter sent him an answer, recommending him to send it back to the undertaker.

Landlady (to travellers who has been complaining of want of cleanliness in the cookery). 'Not clane! Shure and there isn't a thing comes to the table that don't pass through me own hands!' Traveler considers the explanation sufficient.

A party of young fellows found fault with the butter on the boarding house table. 'What is the matter with it?' inquired the mistress. 'Just you ask it,' said one, it is old enough to 'speak for itself.

Help and give willingly when you have anything, and think not the more of yourself; and if you have nothing, keep the cup of cold water always at hand, and think not the less of yourself.

The blossom of passion, gay and luxuriant flowers, are brighter and fuller of fragrance but they beguile us and lead us astray, and their odor is deadly.

There is no greater obstacle in the way of success in life, than trusting for something to turn up, instead of going to work and turning up something.

There is a wide difference between the confidence which becomes a man and the simplicity which disgraces a fool.

Wait for others to advance your interests, and you will wait till they are not worth advancing.

KAPOC, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th, 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ancles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reding the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands: in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. The case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonees Remedy; I believe it will cure you.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

And for the speedy cure of the following complaints:

Scrofula and Scrofulous Affections, such as Tumors, Ulcers, Sores, Eruptions, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Blains, and all Skin Diseases.

OAKLAND, Ind., 8th June, 1868.

J. C. AYER & Co. Gentn: I feel it my duty to acknowledge what your Sarsaparilla has done for me. Having inherited a Scrofulous infection, I have suffered from it in various ways for years. Sometimes it burst out in Ulcers on my hands and arms; sometimes it turned inward and distressed me at the stomach. Two years ago it broke out on my head and covered my scalp and ears with one sore, which was painful and loathsome beyond description. I tried many medicines and several physicians, but without much relief from any thing. In fact, the disorder grew worse. At length I was rejoiced to read in the Gospel Messenger that you had prepared an alterative (Sarsaparilla), for I knew from your reputation that any thing you made must be good. I sent to Cincinnati and got it, and used it till it cured me. I took it, as you advise, in small doses of a teaspoonful over a month, and used almost three bottles. Now and healthy skin soon began to form under the scab, which after a while fell off. My skin is now clear, and I know by my feelings that the disease has gone from my system. You can well believe that I feel what I am saying when I tell you, that I hold you to be one of the apostles of the age, and remain ever gratefully, Yours,

ALFRED B. TALLEY.

St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Dropsy.

Dr. Robert M. Preble writes from Salem, N. Y., 12th Sept., 1868, that he has cured an inveterate case of Dropsy, which threatened to terminate fatally, by the persevering use of our Sarsaparilla, and also a dangerous Malignant Erysipelas by large doses of the same; says he cures the common Erysipelas by it constantly.

Bronchocele, Goitre or Swelled Neck.

Ephelon Sloan of Prospect, Texas, writes: "Three bottles of your Sarsaparilla cured me from a Goitre—a hideous swelling on the neck, which I had suffered from over two years."

Leucorrhœa or Whites, Ovarian Tumor, Uterine Ulceration, Female Diseases.

Dr. J. B. B. Channing, of New York City, writes: "I most cheerfully comply with the request of your agent in saying I have found your Sarsaparilla a most excellent alterative in the numerous complaints for which we employ such a remedy, but especially in Female Diseases of the Scrofulous diathesis. I have cured many inveterate cases of Leucorrhœa by it, and some where the complaint was caused by ulceration of the uterus. The ulceration itself was soon cured. Nothing within my knowledge equals it for these female derangements."

Edward S. Marrow, of Newbury, Ala., writes, "A dangerous ovarian tumor on one of the females in my family, which had defied all the remedies we could employ, has at length been completely cured by your Extract of Sarsaparilla. Our physician thought nothing but extirpation could afford relief, but he advised the trial of your Sarsaparilla as the last resort before cutting, and it proved effectual. After taking your remedy eight weeks no symptom of the disease remains."

Syphilis and Mercurial Disease.

NEW ORLEANS, 28th August, 1860.

DR. J. C. AYER: Sir, I cheerfully comply with the request of your agent, and report to you some of the effects I have realized with your Sarsaparilla.

I have cured with it, in my practice, most of the complaints for which it is recommended, and have found its effects truly wonderful in the cure of Venereal and Mercurial Diseases. One of my patients had Syphilitic ulcers in his throat, which were consuming his palate and the top of his mouth. Your Sarsaparilla, steadily taken, cured him in five weeks. Another was attacked by secondary symptoms in his nose, and the ulceration had eaten away a considerable part of it, so that I believe the disorder would soon reach his brain and kill him. But it yielded to my administration of your Sarsaparilla: the ulcers healed, and he is well again, not of course without some disfiguration to his face. A woman who had been treated for the same disorder by mercury was suffering from this poison in her bones. They had become so sensitive to the weather that even a damp day she suffered excruciating pain in her joints and bones. She, too, was cured entirely by your Sarsaparilla in a few weeks. I know from its formula, which your agent gave me, that this Preparation from your laboratory must be a great remedy; consequently, these truly remarkable results with it have not surprised me.

Fraternally yours, O. V. LARIMER, M. D.

Rheumatism, Gout, Liver Complaint.

INDEPENDENCE, Preston Co., Va., 6th July, 1868.

DR. J. C. AYER: Sir, I have been afflicted with a painful chronic Rheumatism for a long time, which baffled the skill of physicians, and sent it to me in spite of all the remedies I could find, until I tried your Sarsaparilla. One bottle cured me in two weeks, and restored my general health so much that I am far better than before I was attacked. I think it a wonderful medicine. J. FREAM.

Jules Y. Gaschell, of St. Louis, writes: "I have been afflicted for years with an affection of the Liver, which destroyed my health. I tried every thing, and every thing failed to relieve me; and I have been a broken-down man for some years from no other cause than derangement of the Liver. My beloved pastor, the Rev. Dr. Kopp, advised me to try your Sarsaparilla, because he said he knew you, and my feeling you made was worth trying. By the blessing of God it has cured me, and has so purified my blood as to make a new man of me. I feel young again. The best that can be said of you is not half good enough."

Scirrus, Cancer Tumors, Enlargement, Ulceration, Caries and Exfoliation of the Bones.

A great variety of cases have been reported to us where cures of these formidable complaints have resulted from the use of this remedy, but our space here will not admit them. Some of these may be found in our American Almanac, which the agents below named are pleased to furnish gratis to all who call for them.

Dyspepsia, Heart Disease, Fits, Epilepsy, Melancholy, Neuralgia

Many remarkable cures of these affections have been made by the alterative power of this medicine. It stimulates the vital functions into vigorous action, and thus overcomes disorders which would be supposed beyond its reach. Such a remedy has long been required by the necessities of the people, and we are confident that this will do for them all that medicine can do.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the Relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced Stages of the Disease.

This is a remedy so universally known to surpass any other for the cure of throat and lung complaints, that it is useless here to publish the evidence of its virtues. Its unrivalled excellence for coughs and colds, and its truly wonderful cures of pulmonary disease, have made it known throughout the civilized nations of the earth. Few are the communities, or even families, among them who have not some personal experience of its effects—some living trophy in their midst of its victory over the subtle and dangerous disorders of the throat and lungs. As all know the dreadful fatality of these disorders, and as they know, too, the effects of this remedy, we need not do more than to assure them that it has now all the virtues that it did have when making the cures which have won so strongly upon the confidence of mankind.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 50 cts. per bottle.

DEBT.

His grip's as firm's a blacksmith's vice,
And once hard to break;
He pat's you down as gin he were
A mill-stone roun' your neck.
He hangs you richt and dings ye left,
Till ye're nae mair beast
You dinna ken which way to turn
To get awa' frae Debt.

He brings the duns unto your door,
And whiles the bailiff too,
Unwelcome visitors they are
At any time, I trow;
They're greedy loons, for a' is fish
That comes within their net,
They'll pluck your bonnie en hawse your head
Gin ye get into Debt.

A man may own a feotish wife,
And yet some pleasure hae;
He lives in hopes he'll see her gang
Feet foremost owre the brae.
Best hope deferr'd 'll make ye sick,
And gar ye foam and sweat,
If anes ye're in ane deep that ye
Can ne'er get out of Debt.

There's some it dinna' trouble much—
They dinna seem to care
How much accumulates, if they
Can tak' on easy mair;
They're naithin' but a pack o' knaves
That lived upon their wit;
An honest man will always try
To pay an honest Debt.

I've lived within this world now
For thirty years and mair,
And often to hop out o' debt,
I've struggled gae' in sair;
And though at ance I ne'er have owned
A hunder' dollars yet,
I dinna care on lang as I
Can just keep out o' Debt.

O Fortune, ye're a shoket jade,
And blind as ony bat;
You deal your favors roun' about,
Ne'er kennin what yer at.
Gie rich folks loss, and puir folks mair
Than they hae gotten yet,
And then we'll hae less cause to mourn
O'er nic a thing as Debt.

Spencer Carlton's Love Story.

CHAPTER III.

As yet Spencer Carlton had never mentioned Blanche Ellerton's name in his letters to his mother and sister; but now he felt that he must not delay doing so any longer. He sat up late the same night, telling them that he could not bear to speak of his happiness till it was certain. His letter was full of praises of Blanche's gentleness and extreme beauty, saying how ardently he longed for the time when he could bring her home to be welcomed by them as a daughter and sister.

It struck both Mrs. Carlton and Laura that Spencer's letter was singularly reticent as to Miss Ellerton's family, and that he spoke much more of himself than of her—They had no idea whether she was 'A penniless lass wi' a long pedigree,' or the daughter of some rich man who had made his own fortune, and whose connections were very different from theirs.

'So, you see, Annie Travers was right, mamma,' said Laura, after reading her letter over twice, attentively.

'Dear Spencer!' said Mrs. Carlton, with tears in her eyes. 'How thankful I feel that he is so happy! But I wish he had told us a little more.'

'Well, mamma, I don't know what your letter may say. Miss simply rings the changes on his own happiness and the young lady's extraordinary beauty. I, for one, shall soon tire of that, if, as I suspect, she has no other especial charm,' said Laura, a little petulantly.

'My dear Laura,' remonstrated her mother, 'I thought you had a higher opinion of your brother, than to think that he could be won merely by a pretty face.'

'I have the highest possible opinion of him, mamma; only all this has been so strange, and he has behaved in a way so unlike himself in never telling us till it was all settled.'

'Yes; I cannot understand it, but he probably has some good reason. One never knows.'

'Never, indeed,' thought Laura, as with very mingled feelings she sat down to congratulate her brother, enclosing a note of welcome to her future sister-in-law. Both met with a warm response. Not so Mrs. Carlton's wish that they should all come over, so that her son might be married in England. This was negatived at once.

The marriage took place in Rome in the early spring, and the next few months were spent in travelling about Italy, so as to visit several of the Italian cities that, as yet, Blanche had not seen. It was arranged that Mrs. Ellerton should meet them at Florence, from whence Spencer and his wife were to proceed to England, while she went in search of some German waters that she fancied were necessary for her health, promising to join them in England before the ensuing winter.

'Are you well, my darling? You look beautiful—so well and bright,' said her mother, fondly kissing her, when they met at Florence.

'Quite well, mamma, and so glad to see you. We have had delightful weather, and have seen so many things. Spencer must tell you all we have done.'

Mrs. Ellerton turned to her son-in-law, who was standing, looking silently through the window, apparently not noticing anything that had been said. He looked pale and careworn, and had not at all the joyous expression that characterized his wife's countenance. Mrs. Ellerton looked at him anxiously.

'You are well, I hope? and have enjoyed yourself as much as Blanche?'

'I am well, and am glad that you approve Blanche's looks. I have done my best to take care of her,' he said, gravely.

Mrs. Ellerton sighed.

'Blanche looks quite strong now,' she said, nervously. 'Tell me your plans. I am thinking of going to Paris before I go to Homburg, and have taken a house there for six months. I hope you are both coming with me.,

'Oh! how delightful, mamma! I shall like so much to see Paris!' and Blanche clapped her hands with child-like pleasure at the idea.

'We must put off that pleasure for another year,' said her husband, decidedly 'I have been much too long away from England. We must go home at once.'

He spoke kindly and considerately, but more as if he were talking to a wayward child than to one whom he looked upon as a friend and counsellor.

Blanche pouted a little; but the vexation soon passed, and Mrs. Ellerton asked Spencer to describe Lebanon Castle, which he did accordingly.

'But I think it must be dull,' said Blanche, 'and that I should like better to live in London.'

'Possibly,' returned her husband, drily; 'only as I cannot live in London, and must live at Etheridge, you had better set out your heart upon it.'

Their sojourn at Florence was cut short by some business which had to be settled immediately; and in consequence Spencer Carlton obeyed his lawyer's urgent summons, and took his wife at once to London where his mother and sister still were.

It was a lovely evening, quite the beginning of June, that Spencer Carlton and his bride arrived at the family home in Hanover Square. His mother flew down to meet him, and threw herself into his arms, exclaiming, 'My son! my precious Spencer! how glad I am to see you! Then, with a sudden self-reproach, she turned to the beautiful girl by his side, and clasped her to her heart.

Blanche received these demonstrations very quietly. She did not seem either shy or touched by them, but only stood by her husband's side answering any question that was addressed to her with a quiet smile. Mrs. Carlton was so entirely occupied with her son that even his young bride had but little share of her attention. Laura, however, watched her attentively, and talked to her of her foreign life. She tried topic after topic, without eliciting any other result than smiling acquiescence. Perhaps she showed rather more interest on the subject of dress than any other.

Spencer's grave and careworn expression of countenance had struck both his mother and sister with equal surprise.

'Well, mamma,' said Laura, as she followed her mother into her bedroom that evening. 'What do you think?'

'That it is most delightful to have dear Spencer home again. And is not Blanche beautiful?'

'Perfectly lovely—the most faultless face I ever saw, if I could read anything in it. But why does Spencer look so changed—so ill?'

'You forget how young Blanche is, my dear Laura; and as to Spencer's being ill, I only see that he looks harassed. The lawsuit that has brought him home is likely to prove a very troublesome business.'

Laura was silent. She saw her mother was determined to see everything en couleur de rose while to her eyes life assumed a very grey aspect.

The next day she thought that perhaps she had been fanciful, for Blanche's gentleness and extreme beauty won upon her, and the anxious care with which Spencer seemed to watch over her showed how very dear she was to him. Still it was very evident that, considerate and kind as he was towards her, no companionship existed between them.

Blanch seemed perfectly happy with Laura, delighted to shop, to walk, or drive, and, above all, delighted with anything in the shape of gaiety, especially a ball. That year the season was unusually late, and London still continued very full. One thing Spencer especially insisted on was, that Blanche should never go out without him. When, as frequently happened, he came home late from his lawyer, and finding dinner nearly over, and his mother, Laura, and Blanche en grand tenue, expecting him to accompany them to some party, he would not hear of their going without him, but, at any inconvenience or fatigue to himself, would hurry over his dinner, so as to dress and be at his wife's side all the evening. The jealous guard that Spencer kept over her was a source of constant wonder to Laura, who, seeing no disposition in Blanche to flirt with other men, or even to notice the admiration that always awaited her, could not at all understand it. Occasionally she fancied that some event, of which she was ignorant, must have occurred to work so great a change in her brother's bright and trusting nature.

'It will all be different at home,' she thought; 'there will be no question of gaiety there, and mamma has promised to live at Etheridge for another year. Blanche will be delighted that we should do so, for her one dread seems to be the idea that she may possible be dull.'

Laura could not imagine dulness at Etheridge with Spencer for a companion, and marvelled at the different way in which people are constituted. But her hopes as to the change which a country life would effect in her brother proved utterly without foundation, for though they all went to Etheridge for the autumn, Spencer would not make up his mind to remain there the winter, but went to join Mrs. Ellerton at Paris. This kind of life continued for more than two years, varied only by occasional visits to London, and still rarer ones to Etheridge, where Spencer seemed always more than commonly anxious about his wife. Every one marvelled at the change his marriage had made in him. Rumours reached Mrs. Carlton and her daughter that Spencer was mad with jealousy, though no one ever said that his beautiful wife gave him the slightest cause for it, and it soon became an established fact that she led a most miserable life on account of her husband's unparalleled jealousy. It was said that he would carry her away in the middle of a ball for no reason, and that he used to shut her up for days together, and would not allow any one to approach her. People pitied her, and shrugged their shoulders when Spencer's name was mentioned; and while both Laura and her mother knew that appearances justified these remarks, they were, at the end of two years, wholly at a loss to account for it.

CHAPTER IV.

It was just three years from the time that Spencer first brought his wife to England that his mother received a letter from him, saying that they intended to join her in London the next day.

'I do hope we shall keep them at home now, Laura,' she said, as she gave her daughter the letter to read.

'They must be tired of this restless, wandering life.'

'I should think so, mamma. I wonder whether if they had had children that would have kept them quiet?'

Their visit was, upon the whole, rather more satisfactory than usual; Spencer seemed less depressed, and Blanche less devoted to gaiety. But it was almost the end of the season, and London was thinning fast. The few who remained were very much occupied by a splendid fete that the Duchess of——intended to give to some foreign royalties who had been in England during the summer and were now about to take their departure.

There had been considerable discussion between Laura and Blanche as to the probability of their being invited, and when at last the card of invitation arrive Blanche was in an ecstasy of delight, and insisted on carrying off Laura at once to choose new dresses.

They fixed upon some to which Laura repeatedly objected on account of their peculiarity, but Blanche overruled her; and when the dresses were sent home Blanche put the wreath upon her head, and hearing her husband's step on the stairs, called him in to admire it.

'It is very fantastic, at all events,' he replied, indifferently. 'Where is it to be worn?'

'At——House. Don't you remember? The Duchess gives her ball on Monday.' Spencer had been too much engrossed with business for it to have made any impression on him.

'You have got my invitation all right; I suppose?' he said, as he left the room.

'Of course,' said Blanche, pettishly. 'How tiresome Spencer is about never letting me go out without him! I should like to give him the slip some day.

'I am not sure that it would be a bad thing,' said Mrs. Carlton, 'for I should like Spencer to be, for once, convinced that we are equal to taking care of you'—

'Are you going to the ball at——House to-night? I hear it is to be an early affair, so if you dine earlier I should like to know,' said Spencer, one day, as he stood, with his hat in his hand, wanting to go out.

'We must dine at seven. Will that do for you?' replied his mother.

'I shall be in time. Don't wait dinner for me,' he called out, as he ran downstairs.

Blanche was in such a restless, excited state that Laura wished more than once that the invitation had never come, or that they had declined it.

'You have not put on your finery,' said Spencer, looking at his wife when she came down to dinner that day.

'Of course not,' she said, with a loud laugh. 'Fancy dining at home in a gown trimmed with beetles and butterflies!'

'Oh, Blanche! do you think Spencer is deaf?' said Laura, putting her hand up to her ears. 'He really is not.'

Her husband looked at her attentively, and took her hand.

'Come upstairs with me, Blanche. I want to speak to you,' he said, very decidedly.

She made some little resistance, but soon, hanging down her head, followed him out of the room.

'What can this mean, mamma?' said Laura, looking after them in dismay. 'Is not Spencer going to allow Blanche to have any dinner to-day?'

'I suppose he only wants to speak to her for a minute,' returned her mother uneasily. Spencer's conduct with regard to his wife was so perfectly incomprehensible to Mrs. Carlton.

In a few minutes he returned, saying, that he feared Blanche was going to have one of her bad attacks of tic, and that he had given her the medicine prescribed for it, and had persuaded her to lie down and try to sleep.

'Surely she will be well enough to go to this ball, that she has set her heart upon?' said Laura, in dismay.

'Certainly not; and of course I shall stay at home with her.'

'We had better all do that,' said Laura disconsolately. 'How very provoking! only I suppose it would be too unkind.—Shall I send Blanche's dinner upstairs?—Surely she had better have some?'

'My dear Laura, do let me take care of my own wife. She wants nothing but sleep, and the medicine I have given her is for that purpose. I particularly beg that no one may go near her.'

Both Mrs. Carlton and Laura felt that they could say no more, and the dinner proceeded in silence. Soon after Spencer went upstairs, and half an hour later came downstairs, saying that his wife was fast asleep, but that as he was going out by-and by to get some medicine for her, he had locked the door of her room, to prevent her being disturbed.

'You don't mean that you have locked her in?' said his mother, in a tone of horror.

'My dear Spencer, it is so very unsafe—in case of fire, or even if she should want anything.'

'There is not much danger of fire to-night, and she will not want anything, as she will sleep for hours,' said her son impatiently. 'I shall probably be at home before you go out, or, if not, just after. So you may be quite happy about her.'

Laura did not feel at all happy as she went up to dress. She did not believe in Blanche's illness, and thought it a scheme of her brother's to prevent her going to——House. She could not bear to think of him as so changed, and dressed hastily, without taking any pleasure in the anticipation of the evening.

Just as she was leaving her room, she was startled at hearing a laugh behind her, and, turning round, saw, to her amazement, Blanche, in her ball dress, standing before her.

'Is not this a good trick?' she said, still laughing. 'I heard Spencer go out; I knew his step; and then I dressed myself so quickly, for my hair was plaited before.'

'How are you now, dear? Spencer said one of your bad attacks of pain was coming on. Has it passed away?' asked Laura, looking perfectly bewildered, and then, after a moment's hesitation, added, 'And he said that your door was locked.'

'I expected that,' said Blanche, laughing, 'and so kept my eyes tight shut, that he might think me fast asleep. He forgot the key in his dressing-room door; he locked the outside, but, of course, this opened both.'

'But you cannot go to the ball now he has forbidden it,' said Laura, in some consternation at her flushed cheeks and excited manner. 'Besides, you have had no dinner; you will make yourself ill.'

'Shall I? I don't want any dinner. I shall get supper there. And now I am going, going—gone,' she said putting her cheek round her; and running downstairs she jumped into the carriage, which had just driven round, without waiting for Laura or Mrs. Carlton.

Laura, in great distress, stopped her mother, who was coming out of the drawing-room already dressed, and told her what had happened.

'Never mind, my dear; I shall not stop her going. I think it a very good thing to break through Spencer's morbid fancy.—Let us go at once, before he comes home. He can follow, of course, if he likes.'

With considerable misgiving Laura followed her mother, and they were soon in the string of carriages that were going at a foot-pace to——House.

Blanche looked more brilliantly beautiful than ever, and a buzz of admiration followed her as she walked up the room. She danced very well, and many paused to watch her as she and the young Duke of——waltzed together. Laura thought the second in wilder spirits than usual, owing to her having played this trick upon her husband, but wished occasionally, as she caught the sound of her voice, that she would not talk and laugh so much louder than was her wont.

As Laura went up the room to return to her mother, after she had been dancing, she saw her brother coming forward to meet her.

'Come with me, Laura,' he said, in a low voice. 'I want you to go and speak to my mother.'

He was very pale, and there was a stern look in his countenance that frightened her.

'I had no idea that you were here, Spencer,' she began.

'Probably not, he said, bitterly.

'I am come to try and repair the wrong you have done me this night in bringing Blanche here.'

'She came to my room, dressed, and said she was well, and mamma thought she had better come with us. What could I do?' she pleaded.

'All you can do now is to get her away. If you will go down and get into the carriage, I will bring Blanche down. I have called for it.'

'You don't really mean that you are going to take Blanche away, now she is quite well and enjoying herself so much?'

Something very like an oath escaped him, as he stamped impatiently on the ground; and Laura, now really alarmed, did not dare to make any further remonstrances

His wife had not seen him enter, and started violently as he came up to her.

'I am going home, Blanche. You must come with me,' he said, taking hold of her hand.

She resisted at first, swaying herself backwards and forwards without speaking. Several people turned round and looked on in surprise. Spencer's dread of a scene increased every moment. He looked at her fixedly, and said something in a low voice, which seemed to have its due effect, for she made no further resistance, but, hanging down her head, took his arm, and walked quietly away.

'Shameful!' 'tyrannical!' what a brute! 'how can she bear it?' was murmured on all sides; but he did not appear to hear it, and walked quickly away.

There was a flight of steps from the ball-room to the corridor which led to the cloak-room. On this staircase was a large window, which had been thrown wide open to admit more air. As Spencer Carlton led his wife down these stairs, she suddenly disengaged herself from his arm, and, looking furtively round to see that no one was near, darted on to the ledge of the window, and, with one spring, threw herself out.—Her husband uttered a cry of horror, which echoed through the house and was heard above the strains of the musicians, the noise of carriages, and the sound of the feet of the dancers, and then fell heavily on the floor, perfectly senseless.

'What had happened?' 'Mr. Carlton had dropped down dead, and his wife, in her terror, had jumped through the window,' was the impression of those who hastened to the spot.

CHAPTER V.

Spencer Carlton was raised from the floor, and restored to partial consciousness, while search was made for his unhappy wife. She had not fallen far, and was only partially stunned, as the window through which she had sprung opened upon the roof of a room which had been built out below and had been turned into a kind of balcony for flowers. Her arm appeared to be broken, otherwise she seemed to have escaped without any other serious injury.

Several gentlemen went to her assistance, and two of the servants attempted to lift her from the ground and carry her through the window. But she moaned so pitifully that they were obliged to desist. At last, one man, more powerful and determined than the rest, took her up in his arms and laid her on a sofa, near to the place where Spencer was lying. The sight of his pale face seemed to quite her at once, and she crept to his side, and began to stroke his hands, crying quietly all the time. A heartfelt ejaculation of thanksgiving escaped him when he opened his eyes and saw his wife, whom he imagined to have been dashed to atoms, alive and by his side. The arm which hung powerless by her side required immediate attention, and Mrs. Carlton directed that she should be carried to the carriage, while Spencer and his sister followed.

Stunned and dismayed, neither Mrs. Carlton nor Laura felt that they could speak to Spencer, especially as Blanche continued talking and moaning on the pain of her arm increased. It was now evident that she was laboring under a temporary fit of insanity. But Mrs. Carlton could not make up her mind to speak to her son on the subject, though he now knew that the wretched secret of his life could be no longer concealed.

As soon as her arm would allow of it, Blanche was moved to Etheridge; and then she fell into a depressed, melancholy state, and her health seemed gradually to decline. As time went on, symptoms of injury to her spine, unperceived at the time, showed themselves, and she became partially paralyzed. Her husband never left her, and his mother now with anxiety

A new notion has been introduced at social parties in Paris. At the entrance of the Salon is placed a large covered basket containing small bouquets of flowers, and presided over by a modern Flora. Each guest plunges his or her hand into the basket, and takes a posy, which the women attach to their dress or put in their hair, and the gentlemen place in their buttonhole.—The latter promenade through the salons, each in search of a lady wearing a similar bouquet to his own; and when she is found, he has a right to take possession of and retain her as partner for the rest of the evening.

When a girl of fifteen years of age marries a man of forty-five years, he, of course, is three times as old as she. After having lived together for fifteen years, she will be forty and he will be sixty; the husband being but twice as old as his wife. How long, according to this rule, would they have to live together until she would be the same age as he?

A little girl was lately reproved for playing out of doors with the boys, and informed that, being seven years old, she was too big for that now. "Why, grandma, the bigger we grow the better we like 'em," she replied.

Gustafson's Great Speech on the Church Question in the Corton.

In reply to Chanel Masterotch, on April 12, Senor Castelar reviewed the effects of the imposition of a religion by the State as follows:

SENORES DIPUTADOS: Insecure is the conference for me, but greater for the Corton, to find myself forced, by the duties of my position and by duties of courtesy, to occupy almost every afternoon, against my will, the attention of this Chamber. I hope the Corton will pardon me, and not attribute such long and continuous discourses to my incompetence of speech. I solemnly promise not to speak again for some time, and especially in the debate on the totality of the constitution. The illustrious Senor Rios Rosas said, with the authority which his speech, talent, eloquence and character give him, that he doubted if he had any right to give an opinion. Not only has he the right, but he has the duty to counsel a beginner, to counsel a youth. When Senor Rios Rosas counselled me that I should not treat the Church with such severity, a great doubt filled my soul. I doubted if I had been just. I doubted if I had been prudent. But then I attacked no belief; I attacked no worship. I only said that the Church, organized as a power of the State, could not fail to bring about great perturbations, for in its sanctity to subject the civil authority to its criterion of absolute and heavenly revealed authority, it would constantly menace all rights. Gentlemen, if I had any doubts, if I had any remorse, they have vanished before the words of Senor Masterotch. The reverend Deputy, with the authority which his knowledge, his virtues, his high representation in the church, his higher representation in this Chamber give him, has revealed to us what is the criterion of the clergy upon modern rights, upon the national sovereignty upon religious toleration, and upon the future of the nation. If I had not found all I said, If I had not seen that they reprove our conscience, and that they reprove civil rights, and that they reprove our policy, I confess that in my first speech I should have deserved myself, and with all my heart I would have repented. But Senor Masterotch has employed all this afternoon in affirming and confirming my words. He has said to us that he combats the national sovereignty, for he does not find in it the formula of the sovereignty of the Church. Have we not seen that after so many catalysms, after the conclusion of the religious wars, after the advent of so many liberal States, after so many Concordats, in which the Church has had to accept the civil existence of many religions, even though she agreed to them, she has not been able to lose her ancient criterion—the criterion of Gregory VII. and Innocent III.—but still believes that all civil powers are a usurpation of her sovereign power. Gentlemen, once more then I have applauded the presence of Senor Masterotch in this place, the presence of the illustrious Bishop of Jaca, and the presence of the illustrious Cardinal of Santiago. I believe that this Chamber would not be the genuine expression of the country if there had not come to it those who guard the sacred deposit of our ancient belief, and who direct the morals of our families. I look on them with much respect, and with great veneration for their talents, their age, and the exalted ministry they represent. Consecrated from an early age to the worship of abstract and pure ideas, in the midst of a society delivered in reality very much to the worship of materialism, very attached to the bank-note, in that species of indifferentism in which the spirit has fallen, my idea admits that there must be something of the infinite, something of the divine. But, gentlemen, I say more. I make a greater concession to the gentlemen who sit on these benches, (nods of approval from the Bishops), I make a concession which I ought to make, for it is true. When liberty comes the material bonds are loosened; when the material bonds are loosened the moral bonds are tightened. Thus it is necessary for a society to live freely; it is absolutely indispensable that it should have grand moral bonds, grand bonds of ideas, rights and duties—duties imposed not by civil authority or by promise, but by its own reason, and by its own conscience. For this, gentlemen, I have not seen when I have been to enslaved peoples, I have never seen the festival of Sunday kept. I have never seen it kept in Spain, I have never seen it kept in France. The Sabbath among an enslaved people is a saturnalia. On the other hand I have seen the Sunday celebrated with an extraordinary severity, with a severity of customs which astonishes, among the only two free peoples which I have visited in my extensive peregrinations throughout Europe—in Switzerland and in England. And how is this? I know how it is. It is because there are bonds of custom and intelligence which do not exist where religion is imposed by force, by means of artificial and mechanical laws, upon the will and conscience. So it is that a Russian Prince once remarked to me, in Geneva, that they had more liberty in St. Petersburg than in New York, and on my asking him how, he answered, "For a very simple reason. I am very fond of music, and in St. Petersburg I can play my violin on Sundays, while I cannot do it in New York." The separation of the Church from the State, like freedom of worship and religious liberty, engenders this grand principle—the voluntary acceptation of religion, or of metaphysics, or of the morality each individual has in his conscience. Senor Masterotch knows what St. Paul says—"Nihil tam voluntarium quam religio." There is nothing so voluntary as religion. The great Tertullian in his letter to Escalapius, also said: "Non est religionis cogere religionem. It does not belong to religion to oblige itself and to coerce its exercise upon any one by force. And what has Senor Masterotch been asking all this afternoon? What has he, during the whole of his long speech, been requiring from the gentlemen of the Committee? He has been asking and requiring that he could not be a Spaniard, he could have no title to the name, he could not exercise civil rights, he could not aspire to the high civil magistracies of the country, who did not carry impressed by force upon his flesh the mark of a religion forcibly imposed, not a religion accepted by reason and conscience. Consequently, Senor Masterotch, in all his speech, has done nothing more than ask what the ancient pagans asked, who did not comprehend, and never could comprehend this grand idea of the separation of Church and State. What these ancient pagans asked was that the King should be at the same time the Pope, or what is the same thing, that the Pontiff should, at the same time, be in some part and some measure, King of Spain. The doctrine of the protection of the Church by the State should conclude forever. The State has no religion; it cannot have any; it ought not to have any. The State cannot confess; the State cannot commune; the State cannot die. I could wish that Senor Masterotch would have the greatness to tell me in what part of the Valley of Jehoshaphat the soul of the State called

The Fetterborough Examiner

THURSDAY, MAY 20, 1869.

On Friday last the Finance Minister introduced what may be termed his Banking Policy. Our readers are doubtless aware that the present bank charter expires in 1870, the corporation by so doing forfeiting its right to issue notes. Before that time arrives it will be necessary to deal with the question, and the proposals now made by the Government are intended to meet the difficulty. Briefly stated, they are as follows:—

It is then wise to make a change of so radical a character as that proposed in the resolutions introduced by the Finance Minister? We look to him in his speech for reasons, for I am entirely unable to find any good, substantial reason, and we can see many good reasons for leaving matters, as they are. The making of fundamental changes in the laws of a country has generally been preceded by the agitation for or the existence of loud complaints. Every one knows that the present bank charter was made in 1870, the corporation having, as well as the older banks. This arrangement was made by the Government of the day, on the application for the charter, and it was then considered a wise and satisfactory one. Has it since been found to work badly? Has the country suffered from it? Has the public been in any other country, with the same system, more favorably dealt with? Has the history of our own country not always been that the banks have served the country well, and that they have served it to their profit? Has not the existence of the banks been a source of strength to the country? Has not the public been satisfied with the banks? Has not the banks' paper been as good as gold? Has not the banks' paper been taken at par in every part of the country? Has not the banks' paper been taken at par in every part of the country? Has not the banks' paper been taken at par in every part of the country

THE FRANCHISE.

On Friday, A. Mackenzie moved for leave to introduce a bill supporting "the election of members to the House of Commons." He said that by the Union Act the election laws in force in each province at the time of the Union applied to elections in such Provinces until the parliament of Canada otherwise provided. It was important to have the election laws of all the provinces assimilated to uniform. In Ontario and Quebec the voters' list was found to be the correct one, but the question of assessment was one of the bones of the previous governments. If true, therefore, obvious that the assessment must come to be the task of the qualification of voters for members of this House. So long as the same must roll was under the control of the local authorities it ought to be changed at any time, and thus the qualification of electors would be changed and this House would be deprived of the right of doing the qualifications of those who should vote for its members. In fact the assessment of Ontario had already been changed by the Ontario Legislature since the Union, and he believed the Government of Ontario was pledged to change their assessment laws, and had there been a contest in Centre Wellington and had he been asked as Minister of Justice to decide what vote that should have been used, to would, according to his interpretation of the law had to decide that the only list that could be used would be the last assessment roll existing at the time of the writs, although it was quite evident that that list would not fairly represent the real voters, and every year it would be less correct as to the representation of voters. From these considerations it would be seen that the assessment could not be taken as a basis of the voters' list, and that some other machinery must be devised. First, they must devise some means of valuing property, and then some means of ascertaining who were to vote. The proposition of the government was this: In Nova Scotia and New Brunswick the franchise was wider than in the Upper Provinces. He could also say without flattery that the members sent from the Lower Provinces freely justified the wisdom of the wide franchise that prevailed there. So long as they adhered to the principle of having real estate as a basis of qualification, he thought they should widen the franchise as much as possible. The government had anxiously considered this important question of qualification, and he would now state the conclusion they had arrived at. In counties freeholders having property to the value of $200 or upwards would be entitled to vote. This was higher than the qualification in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, but lower than in the upper provinces. This qualification would include nearly every man that had real estate at all, for few owned land of less value than $200. In the earlier history of Canada nearly every occupant of land was a proprietor, but of late years tenants were becoming more numerous, and it was therefore more important that they should enjoy the franchise. By this bill tenants holding a written lease for five years, paying in rental of $20 a year, would be entitled to a vote after having held such lease for one year. Tenants renting land on shares, were to be placed on the same footing. The shares must be worth $20 to qualify the tenant. Parties purchasing land from the crown for $200 would also be qualified. They had adopted the system that had obtained in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, and had provided that every person having an annual income of four hundred dollars from any source whatever should be entitled to vote. This latter provision applied to towns and incorporated villages and cities as well as to counties. In cities the owners of real estate to the value of $400, and tenants paying a yearly rental of $30 on a dwelling house and lot, not on a warehouse or shop, would be entitled to vote. The tenant must pay this yearly rent for one year before being qualified. In towns and incorporated villages, the owners of real estate to the value of $300, and tenants paying a yearly rental of $20 would be entitled to vote. With respect to the means of ascertaining who were qualified under this law, the proposition of the government was this:—There should be a commission of three men in each constituency appointed by government, and receiving a salary, whose duty should be to hold an account in each district where there is a polling place, and who should find out from every source of information within their reach, who were legally qualified voters, and should prepare a list of each under oath. This list should remain open for, say a month, to allow of corrections, and to give time to constituents to have their attention called to it. The commission would then hold a final court and revise the list. This list would be subject to another and final revision by the county judges in Ontario and New Brunswick, by the circuit court judges in Quebec and by a board of revising barristers in Nova Scotia. The judges in forming the duty to receive a small additional salary. This board of judges should hear annually and hear all objections and representations made before them.—With reference to the qualification of members of Parliament they proposed to fix it at $2,000, a certificate of qualification to be presented on the day of nomination, whether asked for or not. In case of the absence of a candidate he may have such certificate to his proposer, to be by him handed to the returning officer at the nomination day. The bill also provided for the holding of elections on one day, but not all elections on the same day. This was not a party question, and he invited a frank and candid expression of opinion from all sides of the House, in order that they might frame the very best system attainable,

Mr. Lavinoente asked what provision had been made for master mariners who had no property on land.

Sir John MacDonald said there would come under provision of those who were qualified by income.

Mr. Connell asked if voting would be by ballot.

Sir John MacDonald said no—by open vote.

Mr. Abbott congratulated the Premier on introducing a measure that would do away with inequality and the opportunity for fraud. He thought, however, that in extending the qualification of voters on account to a basis of 6 years qualification might be done to many parties holding under yearly leases. There were also a large number of persons living in unincorporated villages who would be disfranchised by the new law. He would have been glad to see the Minister of Justice soon on the way to the abolition of the pecuniary qualification.

The bill was read a first time and ordered for a second reading on Friday next.

The Interest Resolutions.

The following are the resolutions of which Mr. Rose has given notice for Friday next.

That it is expedient to provide that—

1. Six per cent per annum shall continue to be the legal rate of interest in all cases where, by the agreement of parties or by law, interest is payable, and no rate has been fixed by the parties in writing or by law.

2. Any rate of interest not exceeding eight per cent per annum, may be paid in advance or otherwise, and being paid may be retained or may be stipulated in writing, and may be recovered.

3. If any higher rate than eight per cent per annum is stipulated, such rate shall be upon such rate reduced to six per cent per annum as a penalty, and that rate only shall be recoverable, and if any higher rate than eight per cent per annum be paid, the excess of the rate paid over six per cent shall be recoverable by the parties paying it, or by the action for recovering it to be brought within one year from the payment.

4. All former laws respecting interest and usury shall be repealed.

5. The foregoing provisions shall apply to any loan or contract for the loan or forbearance of money made on and after the day of next.

6. These resolutions shall not apply to any person or body corporate, which by any existing law, or by the terms of any charter or act of incorporation, may now stipulate for and receive a higher rate of interest than eight per cent.

FORFEITURE OF ASSURANCE DEPOSITS BY THE GOVERNMENT.—A correspondent, writing to a morning contemporary, in reference to the recent action of the Dominion Government in appropriating the deposit made with them by the firm, of Dobie, says: Instead of distributing funds which they hold, which were invested for the benefit of assurers in the event of the Company becoming insolvent they take advantage of a technicality to appropriate the amount to their own accounts, raising every possible objection, counsel even going so far as to deny that any deposit was made at all. The general impression regarding the transaction is that a more disgraceful and pettifogging piece of business on the part of the Government, and the Minister of Finance especially, it would be hard to find. It is thought that such a procedure will not tend to increase the deposits of the part of Assurance Companies, and heighten the confidence of the people in the benevolent intentions of our paternal Government will not such a miserable short-sighted policy on the part of the Finance Minister tend rather to induce those Companies who have deposits either in full or in part to withdraw their funds, thus hoisting the engineer with his own petard, making by so much more the amount which will be required to "recoup" the money improperly taken from the Intercolonial Railway fund, besides depriving the people of Canada of the facilities which they now enjoy for transacting the different kinds of Assurance business.—Witness.

HOW IRELAND IS KEPT BACK.—Ireland is the western Japan which warns off strangers from its shores, especially if they belong to the ruling faith of the empire.—The Dublin Record prints the following notice, which it says, is being served on landlords and tenants in Westmeath:—

"Notice.—March, 1869. Sir,—You have let to a heretic, or Protestant, a farm in this part of the country, but he shall never put his foot upon it, or he will never leave it alive. We will never allow a heretic to live amongst us. So if he puts his foot on these lands, he will be shot dead. The ball is ready for him. This is no idle threat, so help me God.—ONE OF THE PEOPLE.

WRECK OF THE S. S. "ST GEORGE."—Further particulars concerning the position of the above ill-fated steamer, have come to hand. On the morning after the "St George" struck, and subsequent to the visit of H. M. ship "Royalist," The American steamer "Chase" at 10 a. m. spoke her and lay by till half-past one, taking off her fourth mate, a sick seaman, and some valuables. At the time the "Chase" left her, the "St. George" had the tide ebbing out and flowing through her, the compartments into which she is divided being full of water. The "Chase" arrived at Portland on Saturday morning, with the mail and valuables referred to above. The sick seamen, who was an American, and indisposed when he left Portland in the "St. George," died on Sunday morning.

Mysheus Paul Dietrich, of Milwaukee, feeling his earthly tabernacle stored with troubles, to be expelled, decided, after full enquiry and investigation, to employ Ayer's Pills. In his haste to purify his Dutch stomach, he mistook the directions, 2 to 7, and swallowed 27 for a dose. This created, of course, an up-pooling internal rebellion. But Paul went through the fight like a hero, and came off victor at last, with a renovated system which he proudly exhibits as part of the wisdom of his choice. He advises everybody to take Dost. Ayer's Pills, but kindly advises his friends who are ambitious of following his example, to "be sure and take der right bottle." (Minnesota Telegraph.

The Official Gazette of Saturday contains the following: The several corps of volunteers will assemble at noon on the twenty-fourth instant, and fire a feu de joie in the usual manner, in honor of Her Majesty's birthday. In cities, volunteers will act in conjunction with Her Majesty's troops, in case the officers commanding them should desire such co-operation, and senior officers of volunteers in such cities will place themselves in communication with the officers commanding regular troops for that purpose.

Mr. Jefferson Davis, in a private letter, says his health is excellent and adds: "It has been my purpose to return this spring to what was once my home, and if permitted to do so without injury or embarrassment to my friends, to engage in some business which may yield a support.

It is stated that in the course of one fortnight recently, farm stock to the value of about $30,000, consisting of cattle, sheep, and horses, has been purchased in the neighborhood of London, by Morgan Sargent, for exportation to Utah.

A gun named Margaret Murphy attempted to commit suicide by drowning in the Lake near Chicago on Sunday. She was rescued by a prize fighter named Jerry Donovan.

The discovery of many copies of the Holy Scriptures has established the purity of the text of the printed law; the discovery of the laws of Motion and Gravitation has almost perfected Mechanical Philosophy; the discovery of the effectuality of the blood has accomplished in Anatomy what is at last accomplished in Hygiene by the Great Shoshonees Remedy, which has so often checked the spread of those long diseases of the throat which impoverishes and oppresses here united to make us paramount.

DON'T KNOW WHAT TO DO. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is really out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses use large quantities of it, and certify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package. Hunt's Empire Hair Glaze gives new hope and vigor to the sensitive glands of the head.

At a Public Meeting held in Buffalo a few days since Ex-President Fillmore is reported to have said, that he would do nothing to excite the ire or provoke the hostility of his Canadian neighbors, they were a worthy people, and were for the most part friendly; an immediate outbreak was not to be anticipated, but he would advise his fellow citizens to heed the lessons which history had taught all nations. "In time of peace prepare for war," hence it would be well to have our Northern frontiers well fortified.

Is not this a lesson to us to fortify our Southern frontiers? and while doing so would it not be well to fortify ourselves against the attacks of rheumatism, coughs, colds, chollera, bowel complaints, and all other diseases fruitful to this climate by supplying ourselves with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," Can be had of any Medicine Dealer for 25cts per bottle

TWO QUESTIONS EASILY ANSWERED.—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Ryan's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine to strengthen for the use of such complaints. Sold by all Druggists at 25

ARSON.—The Alabama claims were allowed to disturb too long the calmness of the two great Anglo-Saxon communities. The carelessness of one set of statesmen, the indifference of another set, and the cupidity or prejudice of another class, have combined to keep this quarrel waste rankling in the great political system, like consumption in the human frame, which spreads so rapidly until checked and expelled by the great autocratic remedy. For sale by all Druggists.

TORONTO MARKETS.

(From the Globe May 18.)

The market to-day was increasing dull, and nothing at all doing. Holders of flour still continue obstinately to demand $4 05 for No. 1 super. Buyers there are none; the only approach to an offer of which we have heard being that of a party from the country who said that he would give $3 90 for No. 1 in Toronto Wheat is also dull; but we are not sure that the value of spring has receded to-day; we should say that it is still worth 90c. Fall does not seem equally steady, as a car sold last night for 96c at the station. Oats are steady at 55 to 56c; but we have not heard of any sale to-day. Peas were offered at 72c; but found no buyers. Two cars of corn sold at 60c on the track.

STREET PRICES.

The street market was better supplied to day than for some time past. Spring wheat sold at 90 to 92c; midge-proof at 90c; fall would bring 95c. Peas 70 to 72c. Oats 57c. Barley 70 to 75c. Rye is probably worth 60c.

"It is among the most savage and debased tribes only that the condition and comfort of the horse have been neglected;" but we believe there are many in civilized countries who are guilty of the same neglect, and without the excuse of the former; here all may avail themselves of the use of an article which has done more than any thing else heretofore known to improve the condition and relieve the suffering of the horse. RHEUMATISM and all other aches and pains leave the body on application of Jacops' RHEUMATIC LIQUID. We will warrant it to cure Burns, Frost Bites, Chilblains, Sore Throat, Lame Back or Side, Sprains, &c. Some of the cures it has effected are almost too wonderful for belief. Many have been saved by it from impending death, and restored to life and health. So fully is safe a day without it; hundreds of valuable lives and thousands of dollars may be saved annually by its use. For Neat and Cheap Printing GO TO THE EXAMINER OFFICE.

To Messrs. CHAMBERLAIN & SHAW, Gosway P.O. County of Lennox, Ontario, Canada.

KADOC, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th, 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ancles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonean Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonean Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonean Remedy; I believe it will cure you.

MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I knew that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonean Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicine.

Perhaps no one medicine is so universally required by everybody as a cathartic, nor was ever any before so severely tried by adequate tests, in every country and among all classes, as this mild but effectual purgative Pill. The obvious reason is, that it is a more reliable and far superior antidote for many ordinary diseases than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it cured them; those who have not, know that it cures their neighbors and friends, and all know that what it does once it does always—that it never fails through any fault or neglect of its compositions. We have thousands upon thousands of certificates of their remarkable cures of the following complaints, but such cases are known in every neighborhood, and we need not publish them. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates; containing neither calomel or any deleterious drug, they may be taken with safety by anybody. Their sugar coating preserves them ever fresh and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Languor, Lowness of Spirits and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Biliousness, Bilious Headache, Bilious Fever, Jaundice, Dysentery, Colic, Inflammation of the Bowels, Piles, Constipation and Costiveness, Dropsy, Gout, Rheumatism, Erysipelas, Scrofula and Blotches, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches on the Skin, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Foul Stomach, Offensive Breath, Fever, Intermittent Fever, Chills and Fever, Fever and Ague, and Bilious Fever, &c., they should be taken in moderate doses to effect a cure. In all the above and similar complaints, they have performed wonderful cures. Nearly every one is subject at times to some derangement of the digestive organs, caused by indigestible articles of food, and a dose of these Pills is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Chronic Inflammation of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continued for some time, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change those complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Suppressed Swellings they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no positive derangement exists. Those who feel miserable well often find that a dose of these Pills makes them feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as this excellent remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform observation and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protection against them. While admitted to neither secret or patent nostrum list, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the alarming consequences of the throat and lungs. Are you a victim to the terrible sufferings which Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, Consumption, and Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, inflict upon their victims? If you are, you have only to procure and take this remedy according to directions, to be relieved. If you are not aware that you are in the first stages of any of these diseases, you should be prepared with this antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, many prominent members of cases where the disease appeared nothing have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. No complaint is more insidious over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, than the most obstinate of them yield to it. What else can could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they controller and dispel.

Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or do more than assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical, or Bilious Fever, &c. Also for the relief and cure of those afflicted with Rheumatism, Neuralgia, or Rheumatic Pains.

As its name implies, it does cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, or any mineral whatever, it is neither injurious nor unpleasant to take, or in newise injures any patient. The number of testimonials we have of the cures it has effected, can hardly be equaled, and we believe without a parallel in the history of Ague medicines. Our principal agents in every section where Ague prevails, and where other remedies fail utterly, obtain, at once, a wholly unprecedented control of the disease. Even those cases of Fever and Ague which have become chronic, and have defied the skill of physicians, and every other remedy, have been cured by this Ague Cure. For Liver Complaints, arising from derangement of the Liver into healthy action, it is the best remedy known.

For Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints, it is an excellent remedy, producing many truly remarkable cures, where other remedies had failed.

Prepared by DR. J. C. AYER & Co., Practical and Analytical Chemists, Lowell, Mass., and sold all around the world.

Poetry.

Nothing at all in the Papers To-Day.

Nothing at all in the papers to-day!
Only a murder somewhere or other—
A girl who has just put her child away,
But being a wife as well as mother,
Or a drunken husband beating a wife,
With the neighbours lying awake to listen;
Success crowns he last thing a life
Till in all the windows the down-sy glasses,
But that is all the regular way—
There's nothing at all in the papers to-day.

Nothing at all in the papers to-day!
To be sure there's a woman died of starvation,
Fell down in the street—as so many may
In this very prosperous christian nation,
Or two young girls with arms twined gaily
Reckoned, have plunged in the briny waters;
Or a father has learnt that his much a child
Or a mother has been robbed of one of daughters.
Things that occur in the regular way—
There's nothing at all in the papers to-day.

There's nothing at all in the paper to-day,
Unless you care about things in the City—
How great rich rougues for their crimes must pay
(Though all Gentility cries out "pity!")
Like the meanest shopboy that robs a till—
There's a case to-day, if I'm not forgetting,
The lad only "borrowed" as such lads will—
To pay some money he lost in betting.
But there's nothing in this that's out of the way—
There's nothing at all in the paper to-day.

Nothing at all in the papers to-day
But the Births and Bankruptcies, Deaths an Marriages.
But life's events in the old survey,
With Virtue begging, and Vice in carriages;
And kinkly hearts under ermine gowns,
And wicked breasts under bodden gray,
For good news belongs not only to clowns,
And o'er others than lords does Sin bear away.
But what do I read?—"drowned?" Did I say?
There was nothing at all in the papers to-day.

Selections.

WITHIN YOUR MEANS.

"This is pleasant!" exclaimed a young husband, taking his seat in the rocking chair as the supper things were removed. The fire glowing in the grate revealed a pretty and neatly furnished sitting-room, with all the appliances of comfort. The fatiguing business of the day was over, and he sat enjoying what he had all day been anticipating, the delights of his own fireside. His pretty wife, Esther, took her work and sat down by the table. "It is pleasant to have a home of one's own," he again said, taking a satisfactory survey of his little quarters. The cold rain beat against the windows, and he thought he felt really happy for all his present comforts.

"Now if we only had a piano," exclaimed the wife. "Give me the music of your own sweet voice before all the pianos in creation," he observed, complimentarily; but he felt a certain secret disappointment that his wife's thankfulness did not happily chime with his own. "Well we want one for our friends," said Esther. "Let our friends come to see us, and not to hear a piano," exclaimed the husband. "But, George, everybody has a piano now-a-days—we don't go anywhere without seeing a piano," persisted the wife "And yet I don't know what we want one for—you will have no time to play on one, and I don't want to hear it." "Why they are so fashionable—I think our room looks nearly naked without one." "I think it looks just right." "I think it looks very naked—we want a piano shockingly," protested Esther, emphatically.

The husband rocked violently. "Your lamp smokes my dear," said he, after a long pause. "When are you going to get a camphene lamp? I have told you a dozen times how much we need one," said Esther pettishly. "These are very pretty lamps I never can see by a camphene lamp," said her husband. "These lamps are the prettiest of the kind I ever saw." "But, George I do not think our room is complete without a camphene lamp," said Esther sharply. "They are so fashionable! Why, the Morgans and Millers, and many others I might mention, all have them; I am sure we ought to." "We ought not to take pattern by other people's expenses, and I don't see any reason in that." "The husband moved uneasily in his chair. "We want to live as well as others," said Esther. "We want to live within our means, Esther," exclaimed George. "I am sure we can afford it as well as the Morgans, and Millers, and Thorns; we do not wish to appear mean." George's cheek crimsoned. "Mean! I am not mean!" he cried angrily. "Then we do not wish to appear so," said the wife. "To compete this room, and make it look like the other people's we want a piano and camphene lamps. "We want—we want!" muttered the husband, "there's no satisfying woman's want, do what you may," and he abruptly left the room.

How many husbands are in a similar dilemma! How many houses and husbands are rendered uncomfortable by the constant dissatisfaction of a wife with present comforts and present provisions! How many bright prospects for business have ended in bankruptcy and ruin in order to satisfy this secret hankering after fashionable accommodations! Could the real cause of many failures be known, it would be found to result from useless expenditure at home—expenses to answer the demands of fashion and "what will people think!"

"My wife has made my fortune," said a gentleman of great possessions, "by her thrift and prudence, and cheerfulness, when I was just beginning." "And mine has lost my fortune," answered his companion, "by useless extravagance and repining when I was doing well."

What a world does this open to the influence which a wife possesses over the future prosperity of her family. Let the wife know her influence and try to use it wisely and well.

"Pa," said a young hopeful the other day, "didn't I hear you say you wanted a cider press?" "Yes, my son; where can I get one?" asked the parent. "Why, you just try Jake Stokes. By the way he bugged sister Sal the other night, out by the gate, I should think he might be about the thing you want." Sal suddenly left to see the things in the kitchen, and the old gent recollected that he had not "seen to the piece of fence that neighbor James' critters broke down the other day."

BEAUTIFUL SNOW.

How many thousands have let their tears fall over those beautiful lines, as their ravishing pathos called into recollection the sad story of other and similar victims to man's and curiosity! In point of strength of recollection, and many thrilling rapidity through which is almost heard the ghastly wail of woman's ruined heart, our knowledge of English literature brings to mind no single piece of such thrilling interest!

In the early part of the war, one dull Saturday morning in the dead of winter, there died at the Commercial Hospital, Cincinnati, a young woman over whose head only two and twenty summers had passed. She had once been esteemed (if an available share of beauty) a fond lass, on the [illegible] "fostered and caught for [illegible] Her father, [illegible] upon her fairy brow had long been written that terrible word—prostitute! Once the pet of respectable parentage, her first wrong step was the small beginning of the "same old story over again," which has been the only life history of thousands. Highly educated and accomplished in manners, she might have shone in the best of society.—But the evil hour that proved her ruin was but the door from childhood; and having spent a young life of disgrace and shame, the poor friendless one died the melancholy death of a broken-hearted outcast.

Among her personal effects was found, in manuscript, the "Beautiful Snow," which was immediately carried to Ears B. Reed, a gentleman of culture and literary taste, who was at that time editor of the National Union. In the columns of that paper, on the morning of the day following the girl's death, the poem appeared in print for the first time. Where the paper containing the poem came out, the body of the victim had not yet received burial. The attention of Thomas Buchanan Read, one of the first American poets, was soon directed to the newly published lines, who was so taken with their stirring pathos, that he followed the corpse to its final resting place.

Such are the plain facts concerning her whose "Beautiful Snow" will long be regarded as one of the brightest gems in American literature.

Oh! the snow, the beautiful snow,
Filling the sky and earth below,
Over the housetops, over the street,
Over the heads of the people you meet.
Dancing,
Flirting,
Skimming along;
Beautiful snow! it can do no wrong,
Flying to kiss a fair lady's cheek,
Clinging to lips in frolicksome freak
Beautiful snow from heaven above,
Pure as an angle, gentle as love!

Oh! the snow, the beautiful snow,
How the flakes gather and laugh as they go,
Whirling about in maddening fun,
Chasing,
Laughing,
Hurrying by,
It lights on the face and it sparkles the eye!
And the dogs with a bark and a bound,
Snap at the crystals as they eddy around,
The town is alive, and its heart is a glow,
To welcome the coming of beautiful snow!

How wild the crowd goes swaying along,
Hailing each other with humour and song!
How the gay sleighs, like meteors, flash by,
Bright for a moment, then lost to the eye;
Ringing,
Swinging,
Dashing they go,
Over the crust of the beautiful snow;
Snow so pure when it falls from the sky,
To be trampled and trusted by thousands of feet,
Till it blends with the filth in the horrible street.

Once I was pure as the snow—but I fell,
Fell like the snow flakes from heaven to hell,
Fell to be trampled as filth on the street,
Fell to be scoffed, to be spit on and beat;
Pleading,
Cursing,
Desiring to die,
Selling my soul to whoever would buy,
Dealing in shame for a morsel of bread;
Hating the living and fearing the dead;
Merciful God, have I fallen so low?
And yet I was once like the beautiful snow.

Once I was fair as the beautiful snow,
With an eye like a crystal, a heart like its glow;
Once I was loved for my innocent grace—
Flattered and sought for the charms of my face!
Fathers,
Mothers,
Sisters all.
God and myself, I have lost by my fall;
The veriest wretch that goes shivering by,
Will make a wide sweep lest I wander too nigh,
For all that is on or above me I know,
There is nothing that's pure as the the beautiful snow.

How strange it should be that this beautiful snow
Should fall on a sinner with nowhere to go!
How strange should it be, when the night comes again,
If the snow and the ice struck my desperate brain.
Fainting,
Freezing,
Dying alone,
Too wicked for prayer, to weak for a moan,
To be heard in the streets of the crazy town,
Gone mad in the joy of the snow coming down,
To fall and to die in my terrible woe,
With a bed and a shroud of the beautiful snow.

Helpless and foul as the trampled snow,
Sinner, despair not! Christ stoopeth low
To rescue the soul that is lost in sin,
And raise it in life and enjoyment again.
Groaning,
Bleeding,
Dying for thee,
The crucified hung on the accursed tree!
His accents of mercy fell soft on thine ear,
"Is there mercy for me? Will he heed my weak prayer?"
O God! in the stream that for sinners did flow,
Wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow.
—National Baptist.

HOW TO COOK A BEAN.—A philanthropist who is anxious that we should have well cooked food has given the following elaborate directions for cooking that well-known vegetable—a bean:—

Buy a bean (if you get the skin-planters) bathe it well, put in twelve quarts of stenched water (if you're not got a river, better buy one, as they are handy to have) boil it six hours by an advordupois clock, take it out and wipe it thoroughly dry with a soft towel—an old shirt won't answer—lay it on its northeast side about two degrees sow sow-west; bore a hole gently in each end with an inch gimlet, abstract the 'marsh' very very quietly with a teaseing very much; then stuff one end with soft biled rice, and the other end—with rice biled soft; the end that puts north should, in all instances except in case of extreme homeorage, be stuffed first; then take the south side of the shell off very gently, then the rest carefully, as the eastern people won't see you, then sweeten with salt, and it'll taste so much like rice you'd never dream it was a bean.

Children and their Sayings.

Willie had just begun to go to school, but strange to say, did not like it—for which reason I fear he can never become President of the United States. It was rather unfortunate, perhaps, that his first experience of school and of snow fell together. Temptation came to him in the shape of a sled with red runners, and he fell an easy victim to it. So it was about school time he became subject to an accession of headache, which made confinement impossible, but did not at all interfere with his going out to slide after an hour or two alone at home.

One glorious morning in particular, he came to his mother with a "dreffel" headache—school was not to be thought of under such circumstances.

"Very well, Willie," said she, "if you have a bad headache you may stay at home, but remember you must not come afterward and ask to go out and slide."

Not half an hour afterwards up came Willie—"dreffel" headache all gone—with the usual petition.

"No, Willie, you know that I told you if you stayed at home I should not let you go out with your sled, and you would not have me tell a lie, would you?"

Willie turned away thoughtfully, but a moment afterwards his face brightened up as he saw a path out of the dilemma, and he sidled up to his mamma with a confidential whisper:

"I don't want you to tell a lie, mother; but couldn't you just fix it, you know, as you do when you put me to bed and my you are not going out, and then go?"

Vindictiveness finds a resting place even in hearts which should be the gentlest:

"I won't pray for you when I say my prayers," said a little girl to her companion who had vexed her, "and Jesus won't bless you—and he shan't redeem you, either!" she added after a moment's pause to find a proper termination to her displeasure.—"There is a slight touch of the human about the concluding threat, I think.

Children are great realists, interpreting things in the most literal sense. To the infinite mind the beautiful metaphor of the Lord walking in the garden in the cool of the day, conveys the idea of a tangible presence.

"I know," said a little boy to whom the passage was read; "just as papa does, with his hands behind him and an old coat on!

"I don't want to die and go to heaven," remarked a little girl, laying down her book; "but of God would let down a rope, I think I should like it."

Another little girl, after having learned what a post-mortem examination was, declared that she would not consent to be so dealt with after death.

"What, not if it would be greatly to the benefit of those who lived?" asked her mother.

"No, how would I look going to heaven all cut to pieces?"

SOCIAL WINE DRINKING.—At an Episcopal convention, a discussion on temperance brought up the "wine question." A part of the clergy advocated its entire disuse, and a part took the other side. At length an influential clergyman rose and made a vehement argument in favor of wine denouncing the radical reformers for attempting to banish this token of hospitality from use. When he had resumed his seat, a layman, trembling with emotion, rose and asked if it was allowed for him to speak. The chair having signified that he would be heard, he said, "Mr. Moderator, it is not my purpose, in rising, to answer the learned argument you have just listened to. My object is more humble, and I hope more practical. I once knew a father in moderate circumstances, who was at much inconvenience to educate a beloved son at college. Here this son became dissipated; but after he had graduated, and returned to his father, the influence of home, acting upon a generous nature, actually reformed him. The father was overjoyed at the prospect that his cherished hopes of other days were still to be realized. Several years passed, when the young man having completed his professional study, and being about to leave his father, to establish himself in business, he was invited to dine with a neighbouring clergyman, distinguished for his hospitality and social qualities. At the dinner, wine was introduced and offered to this young man, who refused; pressed upon him, and again refused. This was repeated and the young man was ridiculed for his singular abstinence. The young man was strong enough to overcome appetite, but he could not resist ridicule. He drank, and fell, and from that moment became a confirmed drunkard, and long since has found a drunkard's grave. "Mr. Moderator," continued the old man with streaming eyes, "I am that father; and it was at the table of the clergyman who has just taken his seat, that the token of hospitality ruined the son I shall never cease to mourn."—Christ. Secretary.

LOVE LETTER FROM A TAILOR TO HIS SWEETHEART.—"Remnant of my hopes! May I be ripped from a border of your esteem, and never be buttoned to the loop of your kindness, but I am strongly seamed to them by your beauty. May I not lose a thimbleful of your favour, but you have entangled the thread of all my understanding with that pretty outside of yours. Odd bodkin! I am surely yours—every inch of me—and my needle follows you. Do not, therefore, blunt the point of my endeavours, but let me baste myself to your kindness, that I may sit tighter to your affections. I love you beyond measure, but it is hard to cabbage one secret look from you, that I almost despair of having quite enough to finish my suit. Pray put a favourable construction on this, and for the same, I shall always sit cross-legged for your sake, being my dearest little floncer, your broken-hearted

CABBAGE."

A poet was once walking with Talleyrand in the street, and at the same time reciting some of his verses. Talle rand perceived a man yawning ahead of him, and pointing him out to his friend, said: "Not so loud—he hears you."

A rose bush at Toulon, France, covers a wall 75 feet long by 15 in height, and near the root measures 22 inches round.—In the months of April and May it produces 50,000 roses.

POPULAR EDUCATION.

Under the title of The Teacher and the Pupil, Mr. Nathaniel Sands has published an interesting and valuable pamphlet of about 30 pages, in which the science of teaching is treated in a philosophical and practical manner, and a sketch is given of a school to be established on the principles developed in its pages. Mr. Sands takes the view that education, mental and physical, is but the absorption of surrounding elements into the mind and body—an arrangement and assimilation of material so as to incorporate them into the being to whose nourishment they are applied, just as the tree or plant assimilates to its growth and sustenance the materials which it draws from the air and the soil; and his theory of teaching is based on these truths. The following extract will illustrate his views:

"From the period of conception until birth the child draws to itself all the essential elements required for the organization of a human being; the capabilities and powers of the parent are tasked and called upon to contribute their material to enable nature to reproduce itself.

The child is born, and there is a higher and more enlarged and more independent state of existence commences drawing to itself the materials and subsistences necessary for its growth and unfolding. It draws in its mother's milk—it draws in the air and it builds up in itself the unseen forces of life. Nature, true to her mission, goes on unfolding the child, and teaches it daily and hourly the lessons best adapted to its condition. In a few days after it is born, its powers of observation begin to show signs of life and action, and it can distinguish light from darkness; in a few weeks its mother and nurse are known—in a few months quickened intelligence displays itself in all its actions; in about twelve months it has learned the most difficult art of balancing itself so as to walk, and also to speak a few words; at from two to two and a half years of age, only thirty months from birth, it has learned a language which it speaks, and has become familiar with a vast number of things surrounded it. From a state of entire ignorance it has in thirty months learned what would fill volumes.—Horses, cows, pigs, dogs, toys, whips, birds, people, trees, houses, fruit, food, clothes, music, parents, parents, friends, and a thousand other things, and all familiar to it.—Without professional teachers, almost without effort, all this valuable and indispensable knowledge has been acquired, through the unconscious adoption on the part of the mother of the true system of education, Educo—I draw out, and hence nurse, cherish, build up, develop.

It is here, and to this end, that the able teacher steps in, to perfect the development of the future man and woman. He educates, by assisting the natural unfolding of the intellectual germs to the plane within reach of the child-mind the food needed to its growth, and the child-mind reaches out its tentacle and absobs the nourishment offered to it. Thus the mind grows from within outwards, and the teacher aids its development, as the careful husbandman by tilling and manuring the soil according to the nature of the plant he cultivates, produces a healthy and fruitful plant.

The true teacher does not seek to teach by simply putting books into the child's hand and bidding it to learn; he addresses himself to those faculties and powers of the child's mind which bring it in relation with the world in which it lives. Sight, hearing, touch, smell, taste, and thence observation, judgement, perception, reason, memory, hope, imagination and the love of the beautiful are appealed to, developed and strengthened by natural exercise, even as the organs and limbs of the body are developed and strengthed by gymnastic and other appropriate exercises.

And again: We have but to turn to nature as our teacher and our guide; her instincts are unerring. The seed germinates and pushes forth its radical and its root from within outward. The expansion or growth takes place by means of the elements which it attracts to itself, when these are placed within its reach, and toward which it stretches forth its organs.—These elements it assimilates into and makes a part of itself. This process of nature, so familiar to most of us, serves to illustrate exactly what should take place in intellectual growth. The mind hungers and feels out for and is impelled by a natural internal impulse to gather to itself the elements of knowledge. The wise teacher does, formed, and presents to the germinating intellect what the sun and dew and rain are to the plate. The mine must be fed in conformity with its longings, its wants, its desires.

The body being visible to the physical eye, its growth is also visible, and we do not think of feeling impatient at the long months and years required for it to attain its full proportions; nor do we seek by any forcing process to produce a man of 10 instead of at 20 or 30 years of age.

Were the mind and its growth also visible to the eye, we would be equally careful in our treatment of it. Man's first impulse to an uncultivated state has generally been a resort to force for the accomplishment of his objects; and so he took his first step forward, the habits of his barbaric life remained with him. Hence, the first steps in teaching were by force—the lash, the rod, the school penal code; but even as when hungry, wholesome and well-dressed food rejoices us, so will the mind gladly accept the mental food carefully prepared for it by the true teacher."

Our space does not permit us to give further extracts from Mr. Sands' pamphlet but we would especially call attention to the care which he professes to give to that physical training which modern society so lamentably neglects."

While ten men wait for chances, one man makes chances, and while ten wait for something to turn up, one turns something up; so while ten fail, one succeeds, and is called a man of luck or favorite of fortune. There is no luck like pluck, and fortune most favors those who are most indifferent to fortune.

"Bridget, what have you done with the cream? Those children cannot eat skimmilk for breakfast." "Shure, marm, and it isn't myself that would be after givin' the cream to your I tuk that off and give it to the cats."

A BREASTPLATE OF GOLD.—curious discovery, kept secret for fourteen years, has come to light at Ravenna. The workmen engaged in digging a canal near the present railroad station, in 1854 found a skeleton with a breast plate of fine gold buried face downward. The precious piece of armor, which weighed six pounds, was broken up and the pieces secretly sold to jewelers. Two larger pieces, which appear to have been the shoulder bands, and are covered with chasing and enamel, have been given up by a jeweler in Faenza, but the remainders are probably lost. It is known that Theoderic buried the body of Odoacer, after his murder at Ravenna, face downward; and the Italian antiquarians suppose that this golden harness is really that of the first king of Italy.

The origin of confining jurors from meat and drink is thus given:—The Gothic nations were famous of old, in Europe, for the quantity of food and drink which they consumed. The ancient Germans, and their Saxon descendants in England were remarkable for their hearty meals. Gluttony and drunkenness were so very common that those vices were not thought disgraceful, and Tacitus represents the former as capable of being easily overcome with strong drink as by arms. Intemperance was so general and habitual that no one was fit for serious business after dinner. Hence (according to Dr. Gilbert Stuart) the restrictions upon jurors and jurymen to refrain from eating and drinking and even hold in custody until they had agreed upon their verdict.—

THE APPLE TREE AND TULIP.—A gardener had a splendid tulip, the pride of his grounds, which he tended with parental care. On a sudden, a violent hail storm arose, which beat down all the promise of the year. As soon as it was over, disregarding everything else, he ran to his beloved tulip; and when he found it shattered to pieces, broke out into loud lamenting.—An apple tree, which stood near, shorn of its leaves and blossoms, overheard him, and answered angrily, "Dost thou mourn for the loss of an empty bauble, and yet had no tears for my ruin; I, who supplied thee with fruit, and hoped to sustain thy family!" So it is with men—to petty evils they are sensitive, to great calamities indifferent.—Life Illustrated.

A school girl of ten Summer purchased a pair of boots. After wearing them one day, she found they had broken out. She took them back to the man she had bought them of, and after examining them, he said: —"They were not taken in enough, were they?" "No," she replied, 'but I was." The clerks smiled.

The Galt Revival Case.

From Guelph Advertiser.

"Once more unto the breach;
Dear friends, once more."

Our readers are doubtless aware, that for the past few months public attention has been directed to many questions of interest, connected with the great religious awakening, which has visited the neighboring sections of our community, particularly in Galt. The ministers and lay preachers, who were mainly instrumental in originating this great revival, were charged with permitting certain irregularities in the conduct of the revival, and with giving currency to certain erroneous views, regarding conversion, prayer, and the sinner's return to God. The considerations of these questions, arising out of this Revival, and the character of said Revival occupied the attention of the Guelph Presbytery yesterday. No word painting or if ever so graphic, can convey even a faint idea of the intense feeling of interest that was manifested both by the outside world, as well as by those who were more immediately concerned—and we may add—admirably braced up, in the issue of the Galt Revival case, which was taken into consideration yesterday. Early at its commencement, Galt kept pouring in her quota of spectators, anxious to be present in Knox's Church, to listen to the proceedings, and see what decision the Presbytery would arrive at, in reference to this religious movement. In the absence of the Rev. J. Thompson, Moderator, the Rev. W. S. Ball was appointed Moderator through the morning sederunt. At 11 o'clock a. m. the Church was amply filled with a large and intelligent audience, eagerly awaiting the result of the discussion, which had brought them together. We observed quite a number of the fair sex in attendance. By order of the Moderator, the Clerk read the minutes of the last meeting of the Presbytery, which were engrossed and confirmed. The Rev. W. F. Clarke being present, was requested to sit as a corresponding member. An overture anent Sabbath School Committees was forwarded to the bynod. A report of the Committee on the state of religion among the Germans was considered and adopted; the Presbytery then adjourned to meet at 2 o'clock p. m.

AFTERNOON SEDERUNT.

According to the terms of adjournment the Presbytery met at 2 o'clock p. m. for its afternoon session. The Rev. W. S. Ball moved that the Rev. W. Mitchell of Millbrook, who was present be requested to sit as a member of the Court. The Moderator then requested Mr. Mitchell to take his seat in the Court. The Rev. J. K. Smith of Galt, read the following statement of an interview between himself and the Rev. Mr. Murdock:

At Hamilton, on the 3rd day of May 1869 the Rev. Messrs Smith and Murdock of Galt had a conference with a few friends in regard to differences of a personal nature which had arisen between them.—The following is a minute of the result of the conference.

I. Mr. Murdock complains of what he considers a breach of faith on Mr. Smith's part, inasmuch as, after they had agreed to act entirely in the recognition or non-recognition of Messrs Russell and Carroll, Mr. Smith invited these gentlemen into his Church, and co-operated with them, without consulting Mr. Murdock—Mr. Smith replies, that, though Mr. Murdock and he did both of them in conversation express themselves to the effect that united action would be a good thing, he did not understand that any thing of the nature of an agreement between them had been entered into.—The friends of the parties, in conference, are of the opinion that Mr. Smith's explanation on this point should be accepted as satisfactory.

II. Mr Murdock also complains of the language used regarding him and other ministers of Galt by Mr. Russell, on a certain evening in Knox's Church.—Mr. Smith states that he does not hold himself responsible for what Mr. Russell said; and adds that he himself would not have used such language under any circumstances.—The friends of the parties cannot but regard Mr. Smith as responsible for Mr. Russell's language; and they think that Mr. Smith should express to Mr. Murdock his regret that the language was employed.

III. On the other hand, Mr. Smith complains that Mr. Murdock, on the occasion, when present at an evening meeting in Knox Church, being dissatisfied with certain views which Mr. Smith expressed regarding prayer, adopted an unbrotherly course, in so much as he not only stated at the time, to those sitting beside him, his disapprobation of the views in question, but also, on the following Sabbath, publicly preached against them, without having sought any private explanation from Mr. Smith Mr. Murdock replies that he regarded the meeting in Knox's Church as a public meeting—members of his own congregation, among others, having been present; and that he felt it to be necessary for him, in the interests of truth, to take the stand which he did. The friends of the parties are of the opinion that Mr. Murdock was wrong in not seeking an interview with Mr Smith before publicly condemning the teaching which he had heard from a brother minister, and that he should express to Mr Smith his regret for having pursued his course.

IV. Mr. Smith complains also, that, in a letter, addressed to the convener of a Committee of the Guelph Presbytery, and embodied by the Committee in their report to the Presbytery, Mr. Murdock reiterates the charge of unsound doctrine against Mr. Smith, after Mr. Smith had satisfactorily explained that his views were in harmony with the standards of our church. To this Mr. Murdock replies, his letter was simply an historical statement of the reasons which had induced him to take the position which he did in reference to the meeting in Knox's Church; and that nothing in that letter was meant to be construed as indicating an unwillingness in Mr. Murdock to accept the statements made by Mr. Smith to the Presbytery. The friends of the parties are of opinion that this explanation should be regarded by Mr. Smith as satisfactory; it being understood that Mr. Murdock withdraws any epithets or expressions in his letter, which are personally offensive to Mr. Smith.

V. Still further, Mr. Smith complains of various instances in which Mr. Murdoch's course of action, has been calculated to injure his (Mr. Smith's) position as a Presbyterian minister. The friends of the parties, looking upon the instances referred to as mere sequences of the errors and misunderstandings which has been considered in the previous part of this minute, are of opinion, that, if Mr. Smith and Mr. Murdoch are prepared to acquiesce in the recommendations already given, no further notice of the instance in question requires to be taken.

The Rev. J. K. Smith then stated that it would be seen from the result of this interview, all matters of a personal nature between himself and Mr. Murdoch would henceforth cease in the future discussion of this case. The Rev. Mr. Sarellie of Fergus then moved that the decision come to by the Presbytery at its last meeting be reconsidered.

He then stated, that after last meeting he issued a circular, stating to the Presbytery, that owing to illness, he was unable to attend, that last meeting, but that he deemed only fair that a question of such vital importance to the cause of Christ, and the interest of the Church at large, should be discussed at a full meeting of this Presbytery. Had I been present at your last meeting, I should have voted with the minority, and it may therefore seem strange that a member of the minority should move for a reconsideration of a question which has already been decided. But Mr. Moderator, it is not without precedent, that Minorities should not adopt such a course as this. Moreover as there was not a full meeting at the last Presbytery, this motion may be deemed the more necessary, when we consider the importance of the question to be decided. He therefore hoped that under these circumstances the Presbytery would accede to this request. Mr. Murdoch objected, that it was unconstitutional for minorities to make such a demand, for if the course were pursued, there would be no

Now I would deprecate debate or difference of opinion on this subject, which is a very momentous one, but when it is even whispered, that God has by peculiarity breathed on these dry bones, it does not appear consistent, that the Presbytery who are always praying for the conversion of sinners should have pursued the course they have. The deliverance of the Presbytery, in this case is not only deplorable but scandalous, to the Presbytery, who instead of unity in thanksgiving to God for such a result give way strife and uncharitableness feeling. I propose that the Committee to watch over this meeting be composed of ministers within the bounds.

The Rev. Mr. Ball expressed a desire to make some slight alterations in his motion and he was extremely serious that the action should be harmonious.

The Rev. Mr. Smellie accordingly consented.

The Rev. Mr. Barrie, of Eramosa, next addressed the Presbytery by stating that he was at first for peace, but in the language of Satan he was now for war. We must go into the wh le case, he remarked, for it involved a serious error in doctrine, which, if allowed to develope itself, would subvert the ancient foundations of the faith, and reduce a standing ministry to a mere expediency. Already some have said, while such a state of affairs exist, we will not give another farthing to Knox's while we can get a minister for nothing.

Rev. Mr. Murdock moved, seconded by the Rev. Mr. McKenzie, the Presbytery having heard the report of the Committee, &c., and having regard to the conflicting views held by those competent to judge as to the permanent result for the good of the movement in Galt, meantime deem it premature to give any deliverance in the matter. It having come, however, to the knowledge of the Presbytery, that a person having no ecclesiastical connection, who is recognized and authorized by no church, has, with the sanction of some of the ministers and Kirk sessions, been preaching to some of our congregations, and holding that such a practice is contrary to our principles, and subordinate standards, but at the same time having regard to the conflicting views of the members, refer the whole matter to the Synod

Rev. Mr. Murdoch then addressed the Presbytery, and stated that he was very much adverse to have a discussion, but merely to obviate a long and weary debate. The tone of remarks which we have listened to this afternoon are all one-sided, and I do believe that this revival movement is intermingled with much evil. It may be good or it may be bad, but the amount of evil more than counterbalanced the good that has been accomplished. But I take my stand on great constitutional principles. I was very much delighted, holding as I do these sentiments, to read the words which I heard from the lips of Principal Willis, in his address at the close of Knox College, in reference to lay preaching to contradistinction to a standing ministry. They are worthy of the source from whence they emanated; and ought certainly to induce caution in those who allow every adventurer to occupy their pulpit who professes himself a Christian. The Presbytery cannot, and ought not, to recognize such as ministers.—With regard to the personal altercations which have occurred in Galt, I may state that I have seen a great many results which certainly do not come from Heaven, but which more befit those whose origin was from below. The standard-bearers of the Cross who in olden times have cemented the faith with their blood, deeply deplore these things. As will be seen from the motion, I take stronger ground now than I did before, for the time has come when it is needful that high ground should be taken, or some restraining influence should be put upon the lax notions held in these modern days concerning the constitution of our church.

After a prolonged debate extending far into the night, the Moderator then asked the Presbytery, if they were prepared to vote on the motions before them. The Presbytery having signified that they were then ready for the motions, the vote was then taken with the following result)—For Mr. Smellie's motion, 21; For Mr. Murdoch's amendment, 9, thus showing the Presbytery by a majority of 12, endorsed Mr. Smith's action in connection with the Galt Revival. When the decision was rendered, the Church was filled to its utmost capacity, and the large audience notwithstanding the admonition of the Moderator, received the decision with a burst of applause.

WEDNESDAY, 12th.

The Presbytery met this morning at 10 o'clock. The attendance of visitors was small. After the Presbytery had been constituted a petition was presented, signed by 79 members, and 25 adherents of Knox Church, Galt praying to be formed into a new congregation.

Rev. Mr. Ball moved the following resolution with regard to the petition, which was carried: That inasmuch as the memorial contains substantive charges against Mr. Smith, it be not received.

Reception of the American Minister in Paris.

The Herald's Paris special yesterday says: Mr. E. B. Washburne, in presenting his credentials to the Emperor to-day, said he was authorized to express his hearty wishes for President Grant for the health and happiness of the Emperor, the continued prosperity of France, and the earnest desire that the Government and people of America would maintain and cultivate the amicable relations existing towards France and uphold and perpetuate the traditional friendship of the two countries.

The Emperor replied that he was glad to welcome Mr. Washburne as representative of the American people. He was also pleased to have assurances of the continued friendship of the American Government, the close sympathy and amicable feeling of which country existed uninterrupted for nearly 100 years and concurred in the hope of its countenance.

THE LUMBER TRADE.—We cannot deny that we are suffering severely in our lumber regions for want of a market for some lumber. The Americans, on account of their troubles have not made any purchase in the Provinces the past year, and being able to compete with the North of Europe we can't ship it to England, but serious as this matter is, it is gratifying to know that the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" is a great favorite among our Lumbermen, for curing coughs, sudden colds, cramps in the stomach, burns, bruises, frost-bites, chilblains, &c., and they do not depend upon a foreign market for it, it is sold by all Medicine Dealers at 25 cts per bottle.

BRYAN'S WAFERS.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds, coughs, sore throat, and all Bronchial affections. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical. Sold by all dominion dealers, at 25 cts per box.

FROM HALIFAX.

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY.—ANNEXATION RESOLUTION.

HALIFAX, May 25.

In the Assembly this afternoon,

Mr. Murray, of Pictou, moved the following:—

Whereas, this Colony two years ago possessed representative institutions granted by the Sovereign, and under these institutions enjoyed the same right as the people of the British Isles, and while they admit the right of the Imperial Government to withdraw their protection, they most firmly deny their right to force a free people into any connection without their consent; and

Whereas the Constitution of these Local Provinces has been forcibly changed without the consent of the people and in opposition to their wishes; and

Whereas the petitions of the people have been treated with contempt by the Government and Legislature of Great Britain; and

Whereas enquiry even into our grievances has been rudely refused, and we now occupy the position of a degraded people; and

Whereas, in addition to the deprivations of our inherent rights as free men, the union imposed on us has resulted in financial disaster and oppressive taxation; and

Whereas our principal commercial trade and intercourse have been, and from our geographical position, always will be, naturally with the United States of America; and

Whereas we, believing that the Imperial Parliament have been deceived and imposed upon by false representations, and still having confidence that the free people of the British Isles will not, when acquainted with our real condition and views, persist in the great injustice of keeping this heretofore loyal colony in a hated union; therefore

Resolved, That an humble address be presented to Her Majesty, asking once more that our beloved institutions be restored to us, or that Her Majesty will be graciously pleased to absolve us from our allegiance to the British Throne, and enable us, as a free and independent people, to adopt the political institutions which we in our judgment may deem most conducive to our happiness and prosperity.

Hon. Mr. Vail said he considered it an annexation resolution.

Mr. Murray denied that it was such.

Hon. Mr. Wilkins said he agreed with the preamble, but could not support the resolutions, as he thought an appeal to England at present useless.

Mr. Kidson, of Victoria, seconded the resolution, and Tuesday next was appointed for its consideration.

Mr. Morrison introduced a Bill for the vote by ballot.

A Committee of the Legislative Council have reported on the new Provincial Building, that the Province should maintain the ownership, and rent it to the Dominion.

Commercial Depression in Canada.

Some of the Canadian papers are lamenting over the hard times, and general depression in trade. Upon the old principle that "fellow-feeling makes us wondrous kind," we do sincerely sympathize with our neighbors over the lines; and we can well afford to do so, for we have just passed through a seasoned business depression ourselves, such as we hope never to witness again. And if any stronger proof were required to prove to us and our neighbors of the new Dominion, the unity, and community of interests that must ever govern us both—independent of the difference in constitutions, or forms of political faith—we see it in the unmistakable fact, that the same causes,—acting on each alike—beget precisely the same result.

We are both agricultural states, both dependent largely for our sustenance on the products of the earth, and after making all due allowance for the influence of minor causes in the commercial world, a season of short crops, or low prices for farm produce, is sure to be followed up by a crisis in the commercial business of the country. But we notice that our Canadian contemporaries are giving credit to other causes for the present distress, namely that of excessive importation. It is true that a supply at any time, exceeding a demand—or the ability to purchase—is sure to be followed by depression; but with all due deference to our neighbors who must know best where the shoe pinches them, we believe the general depression now felt all over the continent, proceeds from more primary causes than inflated importations only, namely—the low prices and consequent stagnation in the produce markets. We on this side of Atlantic are not the only sufferers. From nearly all parts of Europe, the reports have been so uniformly discouraging, as to lead to the inference, that the entire world of commerce—through the infliction of some great natural law—had shot off at a tangent, and left its proper orbit. Perhaps the force of the English revulsion of 1866 thro' the credit system, has not yet been expended. Italy, Spain and Turkey, have all attempted to raise loans in the London market and failed. The great cantish manipulated by financiers, is displayed in the high rates of certain undoubted securities, and the low value of others. Nothing but the late decided action of Congress on the subject of repudiation, now keeps our own credit ten or eleven points higher than it was a year ago. These commercial relations are all governed by fixed laws, laws as unchangeable as those principles by which we solve a mathematical problem. The cotton trade, the coal interests, and the iron market, have all been in a languid state; though the iron trade has lately brisked up, by reason of the demand for railway iron, owing to the rapid progress of railways all over the world. In this country, the same causes have precisely the same results as in Europe. Manufacturing interests have been unprofitable, all branches of trade have suffered from the decline in prices of grain. Heavy taxes and the high cost of living, have forced the community into a strict rule of economy that has well nigh closed up the avenue of trade. To all other causes we might add the monetary pressure arising from the curtailment of bank credits, incidental to the new method of rendering the returns of banks to the Comptroller of the Currency. The various branches of industry, which hitherto have had their support from accommodations at the banks, have consequently suffered some from the curtailment of credits, but it is the opinion of business men, that great good will result from all this, in the establishment of a more sound and healthy state of affairs. The late rise in the price of wheat, would indicate that we have perhaps, at last, "touched bottom," and that while the scale rises in our favour, business men—already feeling more cheerful at the prospect of a return of good times—will profit by the useful lessons of the past, and that commercial prosperity, international peace and good will—among the nations of the earth—must be the heart-felt prayer, and desire of all.—Milwaukee Journal of Commerce.

HORSES SAVED.—The lives of thousands of horses have been saved during the past year, and the credit is due to "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy." This preparation is being extensively used, and exacts from all the highest praise. Nothing of the kind has ever before been half as successful or given such universal satisfaction it cannot be equalled. We can confidently recommend it, and would advise all who own horses to keep a supply of it on hand—it may be the means of saving your horse's life. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co., is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., Proprietors for Canada. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

THURSDAY, MAY 27, 1869.

THE QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY.

The fiftieth anniversary of our beloved and universally admired sovereign was celebrated on Monday with due honor throughout the Dominion, and her loyal subjects in Peterboro and vicinity were not less attentive to the day than those of other towns and cities. The new-born day was ushered in with ringing of bells, firing of cannons, rifles, &c., the youthful portion of the Dominion taking peculiar delight in this part of the proceedings. Daylight introduced to view innumerable banners flying from almost every place of business, and public buildings, and a delightful morning added in no small degree to the beauty of the day and to the delightful anticipations of both old and young, who at an early hour were seen entering the town from every direction, bent on enjoying the day. The intelligence that the "Terribles" were to make their fourth appearance induced many to come and see the grand cavalcade of unearthly shaped personages, who have for several years attracted the attention of young folks, and amused the grey headed, and even the philosophic old man.

About 10 o'clock the volunteers assembled at the drill shed and went through their various evolutions, after which they marched through the principal streets, headed by our excellent band, which, under Mr. Rackett, have made such rapid progress. At 12 o'clock they all assembled on the Market Square to close their part of the proceedings, which they did by firing a feu de joie in solemn silence, their powder being minus; Sir Geo. E. Cartier being too much engaged in banking schemes and Intercolonial Railway matters to have it forwarded in time. The companies belonging to the town then escorted the Ashburnham company home, when all parted to be ready for the examination of ye great army of Prince of Timbuctahyrricagriophilia and attendant camp followers. The number of volunteers on parade were: Capt. H. Rogers, 42; Capt. J. Kennedy, 54; Capt. Greene, 32; Capt. J. Z. Rogers, 33; Staff, 10; total, 171.

Shortly after "a couple o'clock" the army made its appearance from the south of the town. All the fantastic appearances imaginable were visible in the ranks; some gaily dressed in coats of many colors, and some whose clothing could scarcely be described; the grotesque entering largely into all the fancies of the royal forces. The City Fathers came in for their share in the exhibition, their united wisdom and reverential manner of debate being fully in keeping with some of the more noisy outbursts of our City Council, in their spiritual earthestness for town affairs in general and the people's good in particular. The "Billingtary Band" of the Prince's forces must most assuredly have imported their musical instruments from a land that is afar off, as nothing so unsightly has been used heretofore in our New Dominion. The "Rag-tag and Bob-tail" of the procession were followed by a few representatives from the Abyssinian expedition, whose appearance was not very inviting. The Indian representations on horseback, at any rate, showed an agility and dexterity on their animals that few could equal, as they managed all their manœuvres through the crowded streets without a single accident to themselves or others, although not less than 5,000 to 6,000 persons, men, women and children, must have been on the streets in the line of their march.

All the sports of the day passed off in quietness and good humor, and indeed if eye witnesses may be allowed to judge from the unusually attractive manner, in which the more gamsome ones were paying their attention to their lady-loves, everything went off in the most affectionate manner. At an early hour the streets were vacated, homewards being the general movement.

At eight o'clock a large concourse of people visited the Masquerade in the drill shed to witness the performances on the velocipede. There were ten machines in the shed, and the performances were truly astonishing; the dexterity of movements, the rapid motion, the different positions of the velocipedists, some standing on them, some dashing along with only one foot propelling, and others standing on the shoulders of the riders as they dashed round at a rapid rate.—During the Masquerade Mr. Rackett's Band enlivened the whole by some lively music, which added much to the pleasantness of the affair.

This ended the celebrations of the anniversary of our beloved Queen, for 1869, so far as the outside world were concerned, but

The Peterborough Bank.

The business part of this Town and a few bill-holders of this community were somewhat surprised on Friday last to find the doors of the Royal Canadian Bank closed as a consequence, there was a considerable run on the Bank for about two hours. The Agent, Mr. Ogilvie, for the time redeemed notes bills were presented in paper, gold bills, or by specie. At about 12 o'clock he received orders from head quarters, to stop payment, until further orders. The excitement was not very great, as all present felt that bill-holders were quite safe, the only persons likely to suffer being stockholders.

At Peterboro at least, there did not seem to be that wildness that characterized the stoppage of banks at other places. Speculators of course, were buying bills through the day at a discount, but this soon ceased, and holders of Royal Canadian Bills became more ensured.

In Toronto there appears to have been considerable excitement, as the police had to be called out to prevent injury being done to the property of the bank.

The cause of the banks having to stop payment arises chiefly from some letters by a director tending to shake public confidence in the management of the concern. This it is believed was taken advantage of just now by the bank of Montreal to refuse Royal Canadian Bills, the other banks could not see their way to aiding this bank, against the bank of Montreal, and hence the final crash. There are not a few who believe that the whole matter has been hurried by the government, so as to create a public feeling if possible, in favor of their absurd banking scheme, and indeed this seems to be the true solution of the matter. As the statement published on the 30th of April last shows that the Royal Canadian bank is fully able to meet liabilities and have a balance on hand afterwards.

The following is the statement:—

This statement shows liabilities $2,307,580.12 and to meet or pay this Assets are $3,750,243.02 thus leaving a margin $1,442,662-90 which is certainly large enough to secure the public. That the Canadian has made some bad debts all may admit, as all banks do, but we cannot imagine that this bank has been so reckless in its management as it is set forth by some not friendly to it. They have the utmost confidence that there will be no loss to the public generally. Stockholders may lose, but not much perhaps. The Directors have issued the following circular,

TO THE PUBLIC:

The Directors of the Royal Canadian Bank regret that the action of the Hon. Mr. Donald McDonald, in issuing a circular to the shareholders has had the effect of shaking public confidence in its stability, and causing a large withdrawal of deposits.

The assistance of a number of other banks having been sought, but declined, no other alternative was left to the Board, than to suspend specie payment for the present.

The Directors would urge upon bill-holders and depositors, not to be alarmed, as there is not the slightest danger of loss to them, and many hopes are entertained that within a short time, the business of the Bank will be resumed.

They may further state that, having had the assets carefully estimated and all known losses deducted, there is millions surplus over the paid up capital intact. A statement of the affairs of the bank will be prepared and published as speedily as possible.

By order of the Board,
T. WOODSIDE,
Cashier.

Note holders may feel very easy, in a few days they will be able to receive their full value. They should therefore not readily be induced to part with them for less than their face value, or, perhaps, a cent or two under.

DIED IN THE JAIL,

James Connors, barber, better known as Professor Connors, was found dead in his cell on Tuesday. The unfortunate man was confined in the jail for lunacy, and had lately become very mischievous. He would keep no clothes on him, preferring nakedness, and he would tear a straight-jacket off by rubbing against the walls of his cell, yet would converse quietly with all whom he knew who went to visit him. On Monday he was in his usual health, no signs of any organic disease being manifest. On Tuesday he complained of being a little unwell in the morning, when he was provided some beef-tea by the jailor, Mr. McWilliams. Shortly after Mrs. McWilliams saw him looking very dull, and went to him and found him very weak. The turnkey was then sent for Dr. McNabb, who attends the jail, but he was absent at a funeral. About five o'clock he was again sent for and went immediately, but Connors was dead before he arrived.

Yesterday Coroner Harvey held an inquest on the body, when facts in accordance with the above were elicited. It was agreed, however, by the jury to have a post mortem examination, and an adjournment took place for that purpose. Dr. O'Sullivan operated, but Drs. Harvey and Coulter were present, Dr. Geo. Burnham was also at the inquest. After the examination Dr. O'Sullivan was of opinion that "the immediate cause of death was effusion into the cavities of the brain, due to impeded circulation to the heart," fibrinous deposits having partially closed the communication between the cavities.

The verdict of the jury was that "he came to his death by the visitation of God in a natural way by disease of the heart." There was also congestion of the lungs and of the brain, and tubercules were formed on the apex of one lobe of the lungs.

The Montreal Telegraph Company have just completed a branch line from Brighton, via Colborne to Warkworth, Hastings, Campbellford and Norwood, all of which offices are now in operation and ready for business.

Died,

at his residence, near Peterborough on the [illegible] of this month, [illegible] aged [illegible] years. Where but a youth he became [illegible] of parental control, and ran away to [illegible] sea. He made several trips to Quebec during the period that the [illegible] such connection in Europe in the early part of this present century, [illegible] about the year 1806—7 after sighting the Land's end the vessel and crew were captured by a French Privateer [illegible] carried safely to France, and [illegible] detained. The rigours of the French government, [illegible] property—the Emperor was severely upon the [illegible] not only extremely scant, but bad in quality, and they were obliged [illegible] place to place, apparently for no other purpose than to increase their sufferings. When offered their liberty on condition of joining the Emperor's Navy they said [illegible] "We are British subjects." Among the thousands to whom the offer was made not one accepted it. At the peace of 1813 they were liberated, and on Mr. Gilmour's return home he entered the college in England, over which Dr. Beadman presided, to prepare for the ministry. He was married some time about 1821, and was pastor of a Baptist Church in Aberdeen for a number of years. In 1830 he came to Montreal where he organized a Baptist Church and remained till 1837, when he visited England on behalf of the Baptist College in Montreal. In 1839 he was appointed Agent of the New England Company, and removed to Peterborough with his family in the fall of that year. During his long residence here his life has been remarkable for the untiring energy he has always shown in seeking the spiritual benefit not only of those more immediately connected to his charge, but to all within reach,—as well as a strict regard to rectitude and consistency of conduct, coupled with a happy observance of the amenities of life. It will be long before his earnest appeals, his neat and clear manner of explaining the scriptures, and enforcing their divine precepts will be forgotten. He was at once an instructive and an agreeable preacher, and his liberal views, and suavity of manner, made him loved and respected by christians of other denominations. We shall all miss the silver tones of his musical voice in the pulpit and on the platform. And feel that we have lost a leading public man, as well as a mentor and friend. He was well read and informed on almost all leading useful subjects, and no one could spend an hour with him without being both instructed and delighted.

"He was a man of letters,
And of manners too."

He leaves an only son, our respected townsman J. W. Gilmour, Esq., and a large circle of friends here and all over the Dominion, who mourn his exit. We mourn not however, as those without hope, our loss we believe is his infinite gain.

"Life's labour done as sinks the clay
Light I am to bear the spirit fled
While heaven and earth combine to say
How blest the righteous when he dies."

His remains were followed on Tuesday to the silent house appointed for all living, by a very large assembly of friends and acquaintances who seemed anxious to pay their last tribute of respect to departed worth. We think we are warranted in saying, that the funeral was the largest ever witnessed in this part of the country. The stores in the Town were all closed and the spontaneous expression of all seemed to indicate the esteem in which the deceased was held. We may well say it will be long before we shall look upon his like again.

BURGLARY.

On Friday night last the residence of H. T. Strickland, Esq., Ashburnham, was entered by one or more burglars. They took an overcoat that was in the hall and two rifles (breech loaders); they also entered the bed room where Mr. and Mrs. Strickland slept, took his pants from beside his bed, taking a few dollars of silver that were in the pocket; they also searched some other clothes for more, and leaving them on the floor, decamped. An expensive rifle which the thief or thieves took out was found in the garden next day. The party seem to be experts, as they turned the key from the outside by means of some tools, the marks of which were very evident on the end of the key.

The same night they attempted an entrance into the residence of the Rev. Mark Burnham, but owing to a device that requires the lifting of a bar or spring after the key is turned, they failed in their attempt. The instrument used for turning the key from the outside left a deep impression in the key of Mr. Burnham's door.

They were also at Mr. John Burnham's dwelling, but were deterred by the movements of the dog; their tracks crossing his garden towards Mr. Strickland's were traced next morning.

It is said that Mrs. Murray's house was entered on Saturday night and $10 taken from her.

The perpetrators seem to be parties well acquainted with the place, and their being able to unlock doors from the outside shows that they are adepts in the trade. It is surprised that they are not strangers to the town and neighboring village. Now and then there are parties seen around some of our public places, that have no known way of procuring an honest living, and suspicions may point to some of them. A very wholesome clause in our criminal laws would be to compel such persons to show how they do support themselves. There would be fewer losses and less burglaries if taken in time.

PERSONAL.—William Webster, Esq., of Otonabee, left on Tuesday for a visit of some weeks to his native country, Yorkshire, England. Our best wishes are with him, that he may have a pleasant and speedy passage, that he may be able to enjoy a few days, and return to Canada safely.

Mr. Wm. McGregor, of Ashburnham, also left on Monday for the Red River Settlement with the intention of removing his family there next Spring, if he finds the country pleases him.

CONNECTION WITH PETERBORO'.—The Cobourg Star says, "We understand Mr. H. Calcutt and one or two other enterprising gentlemen of Peterboro' have purchased the steamer Flour City, of Charlotte, and intend placing her on Rice Lake, to run from Harwood to Peterboro' in connection with the railroad. This will prove a great convenience to the public and we doubt not remunerative to the owners of the boat." We wish our enterprising townsman success in his undertaking.—[ED. EX.

WESLEYAN METHODIST.—A committee appointed to investigate charges of mal-administration of discipline against the minister at Millbrook, we see have found the charges well-founded, and at a late district meeting the matter was discussed with the same result. It is found that a minister cannot suspend membership at his own ipse dixit.

More Disagreement between the Governors [illegible]

[illegible] there was a matter principally [illegible] that of the assumed right of the Imperial government to disallow our Acts. But this was practically settled [illegible] by the admission of the [illegible] ment that it was necessary to introduce resolutions and a bill. As to the question of money, he was fully disposed to pay some respect to the wishes of the Imperial Government, and he had advised a sort of compromise between the vote of last year, 32,000 dollars, and the sum mentioned in the [illegible] amendment to that effect had been subsequently. The supporters of the Government had also submitted another amendment, probably at the instance of the Government, and with the object of terminating the difficulty, thinking it expedient to affirm the vote of last year. Both, he supposed, these adversaries of economy would have to be gratified.

Mr. Chipman was not in favor of extravagance on the one hand, or chinese paring on the other, but it would be his duty to vote in favor of the lesser sum.

Mr. Cartwright said it should not be supposed that a similar question to this had not before occurred, for he had the impression that a very similar case arose a few years ago in another colony, and Mr. Caldwell, the then Colonial Secretary, took the precise course which the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos took.

Hon. Mr. Macdougall said he had never listened to a debate with more pain, not as a Minister, but as a Canadian, than he had to this. There was a general feeling in the House that the money question was a mere bagatelle. As a matter of principle he was prepared to admit that the salary should be paid to the Imperial Government; if that were done, we should be saved all such humiliating debates as this. But such was not the arrangement. It was provided that this country should pay that salary. The matter was fixed in the Imperial Act until altered by the Canadian Parliament, and the Government had submitted a resolution in accordance with a unanimous vote of the House. He then went on to recite some evidences of the care of the English Government, of the provisions made for our protection, and of the expense to which England was put on our account; and yet, he said, we were haggling, discussing and objecting, all on account of a mere paltry few thousands of dollars. He regretted this, as he said, because he thought our true policy was, in our new circumstances, with greater and brighter prospects before us, to avoid a seeming ingratitude. (Hear, hear.)

Hon. Joseph Howe said the question had been asked would the President of the Council submit to be governed by despatches? His answer was no, and if he thought that such was the intention the hon. questioner would soon find him by his side, protesting against Imperial interference. He did not think there was the remotest danger of such government being attempted. He then said that this very question was once up in Nova Scotia, but the then Colonial Secretary had distinctly laid down the principle that the people of the Provinces must manage their own affairs as best suited them. Well then, there was the case of Nova Scotia being drawn into the Union contrary to the wishes of the people, but the Imperial Government wished it, Canada wished it, and hon members opposite wished it also, but they were now haggling about a few paltry thousands—a sum equal to about one-third of a cent per head of the population. The whole of the constitution and revenues of Nova Scotia had been swept away, but now that there was a question of a few thousands of dollars only, the whole of Ontario would seem to be up in arms. But the question was—would it be wise to keep on discussing this question of salary year after year? The agitation, he thought, would be useless. The Government had been impressed by one hon. member with having evaded their responsibility. Well, he was not responsible for the acts of the Ministry last year. He had supposed that the Imperial Act could not be altered without having the alterations submitted to the Home Government.

Mr. Mackenzie denied that the Opposition were open to the charge of breach of faith. He contended that the difficulty was solely chargeable to ministers themselves.

Hon. Mr. Holton regretted that the Minister of Justice had again raised the constitutional question, but certainly in a modified form. The theory of the minister could not be maintained, for if it was carried out to its logical sequence we could only legislate upon sufferance. But he had considered the victory to be won on Friday night when the motion of the member for Lambton was unanimously adopted, and the House affirmed its right to legislate. He was satisfied with that. As for the money question he had early come to the conclusion that, as the Imperial Government had a certain wish, we ought not to haggle about a few thousand dollars of salary.

Sir John A. Macdonald contended that his position was substantially correct, and Sir George E. Cartier, after a few words from hon. Mr. Howe, supported the view of the premier.

The House then divided, when there appeared for the amendment of Mr. Jones 59; against it 90.

The House then divided on the amendment of Mr. Oliver to fix the salary at £7,500, when there appeared, yeas 59; nays 91.

Mr. Mackenzie said before the main motion was put, he hoped there would be no more debates and divisions on the subject. He thought there was enough said and should use his influence to have the matter quieted. (Hear, hear.)

The motion to go into committee was then put and carried by a majority of 30.

The House then went into Committee, and the resolution was passed.

The House resumed, and a bill founded on the resolutions, was introduced and read a first time.

The Omemee Standard learns that Mr. Harris who was drowned at Love-sick rapids is alive and well. We wonder if the Standard has a spiritual correspondent by whom he receives intelligence from the dead. The drowning of Mr. Harris was too true; at latest intelligence his body had not been found.

The body of the Frenchman that was drowned about two weeks ago, was found on Sabbath evening floating in the Little Lake.

Ottawa Times says:—

"The correspondence laid before Parliament relative to the selection of the intercolonial Railway route, is conclusive as to the strong [illegible] representations against the Major Robinson line. When the Canadian Act was embodied for the Colonial Office for approval, it was objected to by the Duke of Buckingham on the ground that it only provided for the raising of a loan of one million sterling, which in the absence of an assurance that the Bay Chaleur route would be adopted his Grace considered [illegible] to-one only to the belief [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] ing, showing the sum required to complete the railway from Riviere du Loup to Truro to be considerably less than four millions sterling, and the amalgamated position of the loan was accepted at one million instead of two.

The contemporaneous of the Colonial Office in this matter must be perfectly intelligible. They had the report of an able Imperial officer, by whom still and judgment they had great confidence; they had Mr. Fleming's full [illegible] of the worst portion of the line, which by estimation of his whole, still kept the total cost within the amount provided; and they were thus fully supplied that the provision Canada had undertaken to make would be sufficient to complete the line. Otherwise, and to secure the end contemplated, the guarantee—that is the construction of [illegible]—the Duke of Buckingham [illegible] in his own words, that Canada would have been expected to provide for a [illegible] millions [illegible] of one, in addition to the three millions guaranteed.

We have in these facts another reason, if any other reasons were wanted, to show the folly of attempting to change the Intercolonial Railway route from that already chosen and upon the adoption of which, such important financial and other obligations have already been undertaken."

THE ALABAMA QUESTION.

NEW YORK, May 26.—The Post's Washington special says—"President Grant has taken into his own hands the management of our relations with England. It is ascertained from most trustworthy sources that the President considers that England established a precedent during the late war which cannot be regarded otherwise than exceedingly favorable to the United States. It is therefore useless to ask England to retrace her steps, so long as she considers herself in the right, and with nothing to fear from the United States in case she should go to war with any other power. The President believes that there are matters which concern England rather than the United States, but that on the other hand, if England sees that she was wrong, and that the same monetary principles also applied to the United States would prove very disastrous if applied to herself in some future emergency, then it is for her to open again again the so called Alabama matter and make propositions for new negociations.

THE DERBY.

LONDON, May 26.—The Derby was won by "Pretender," recently winner of the 200 guineas at Newmarket, who beat "Pedro Gomez" by a short head; "Drummer Boy" being third by a length behind "Gomez." Twenty-two horses ran, and the remainder finished in the following order—"Duke of Beaufort,' 'Rupert,' 'Rosworth,' 'Alpenstock,' 'Mortimer,' 'King Cophetua,' 'Thorwaldsen,' 'Defender,' 'Edlua,' 'Devere,' 'Perry Dore,' 'The Agent,' 'Border Knight,' 'Lord Hawthorn,' 'Scaramel,' 'Tamaha,' 'Tasman,' 'Cadeau,' and 'Bellatrix.' Distance ran, mile and a-half, weight carried 122lbs, time, two minutes and 52 seconds, value of stakes £6,000. Probably a quarter of a million persons were on the ground. The Prince and Princess of Wales, and Prince Teck were present. The Epsom town plate was won by 'Conrad'; the Bentic plate was won by 'Mycetin.'

LONDON, MAY 18.—Beverly Johnson has written a note to the authorities of Southampton, declining the proposed banquet in his behalf. He took that occasion to express his gratification at the extinction of the late apprehensions of a war between Great Britain and the United States. He was aware that the people of both countries would regard a war as the direst calamity.

The Standard to-day, in an article on the Alabama claims treaty, says the idea of awaiting further expressions from the Parliament and Congress, suspends the business to indefinite postponement. England's sentiments have been clearly pronounced. She is still prepared to submit to a proper tribunal the question of wrongs and damages; but any attempt to re-open the controversy on preposterous grounds, whatever the American sentiment may be, is absurd. From this position England cannot recede.

DUBLIN, May 24.—The Archbishop of Cashel, Rev. Dr. Patrick Leahy, in a pastoral letter refers to the recent outrages committed in the south of Ireland. He considers it lamentable that the acts of a few desperadoes should furnish the fair fame of Tipperary, and emphatically denies the existence of an agrar an conspiracy. The outrages, he says, were the result of the unhappy relations existing between landlord and tenant, and a settlement of the land question as Ireland would be sure to diminish the number of such unfortunate occurrences. The pastoral bids despondent tenants to look to hope to the imperial legislature, and points to the danger of estranging and disgusting England by the commission of such outrages as has recently been perpetrated.

ROBBERY.—On Tuesday morning of last week the Presbyterian manse at Elma Centre, was entered in the absence of Rev. Mr. Renwick and about $300 stolen therefrom. James Manditon, who is well known in Mitchell, Stratford and Seaforth as a dangerous character, and another person named Neil Mc Dermott, had been engaged painting the house through the day, and their movements were of such a suspicious nature that they were arrested and tried before a bench of magistrates in Listowel on Friday last. The evidence, although not clear was of such a circumstantial nature that the magistrates committed them to the county jail to await their trial at the approaching assizes.

MR. MOTLEY'S INSTRUCTIONS.—The most that can be reliably ascertained of the instructions to Minister Motley, is that they are more of a general than of a specific character, and do not contemplate any speedy action on his part, with regard to the "Alabama" and other claims, in view of the present sentiment in England upon the subject, if for no other reason. Mr. Motley will inform Her Majesty's Gov. of the desire of our own to adjust all pending questions on a basis that will strengthen the friendly rel

Two Questions Easily Answered.—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Dayton's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because while used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. Sold by all Dealers at 25 cents per box.

The discovery of many copies of the Holy Scriptures has established the purity of the text of the sacred law; the discovery of the laws of Motion and Gravitation has almost perfected Mechanical Philosophy; the discovery of the circulation of the blood has accomplished in Anatomy what is at last accomplished in Hygeine by the Great Rhodoncan Remedy, which has so often checked the inroad of those lung diseases of the throat which imprudence and exposure have united to make so common.

Ayer.—The Alabama claims were allowed to disturb too long the citizens of the two great Anglo-Saxon communities. The carelessness of one set of statesmen, the indifference of another set, and the cupidity or prejudice of another class, have combined to keep this question racking in the great political system, like consumption in the human frame, which spreaded so rapidly until checked and expelled by the great specific, [illegible]. Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

The reputation this excellent medicine enjoys, is derived from its cures, many of which are truly marvellous. Inveterate cases of Scrofulous disease, where the system seemed saturated with corruption, have been purified and cured by it. Scrofulous affections and disorders, which were aggravated by the scrofulous contamination until they were painfully afflicting, have been radically cured in such great numbers in almost every section of the country, that the public scarcely need to be informed of its virtues or uses.

Scrofulous poison is one of the most destructive enemies of our race. Often, this unseen and unfelt tenant of the organism undermines the constitution, and invites the attack of enfeabling or fatal diseases, without exciting a suspicion of its presence. Again, it seems to breed indolent sloughs throughout the body, and then, on some favorable occasion, rapidly develop into one or other of its hideous forms, either on the surface or among the vitals. In the latter, tubercles may be suddenly deposited in the lungs or heart, or tumors formed in the liver, or it shows its presence by eruptions on the skin, or foul ulcerations on some part of the body. Hence the occasional use of a bottle of this Sarsaparilla is advisable, even when no active symptoms of disease appear. Persons afflicted with the following complaints generally find immediate relief, and, in earth, cure, by the use of this SARSAPARILLA: St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Sore Ears, and other eruptions or visible forms of Scrofulous disease. Also in the more concealed forms, as Dyspepsia, Dropsy, Heart Disease, Fits, Epilepsy, Neuralgia, and the various Uterine affections of the muscular and nervous systems.

Syphilis or Venereal and Mercurial Diseases are cured by it, though a long time is required for subduing these obstinate maladies by any medicine. But long continued use of this medicine will cure the complaint. Leucorrhœa or Whites, Uterine Ulcerations, Female Weakness, and Sterility, from mouldy soon relieved and ultimately cured by its purifying and invigorating effect. Minute Directions for each case are found in our Almanac, supplied gratis. Dyspepsia and Gout, when caused by accumulations of extraneous matters in the blood, yield quickly to it, as also Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Constipation and Costiveness, Inflammation of the Liver, and Jaundice, when arising, as they often do, from the rankling poisons in the blood. This SARSAPARILLA is a great restorer for the strength and vigor of the system. Those who are Languid and Listless, Despondent, Strophan, and troubled with Nervous Apprehensions, Fears, or any of the affections symptomatic of Weakness, will find immediate relief and convincing evidence of its restorative power upon trial.

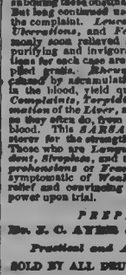
Ayer's

Hair Vigor,

For restoring Gray Hair to its natural Vitality and Color.



A dressing which is at once agreeable, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can restore the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely for a

HAIR DRESSING,

nothing else can be found so desirable. Containing neither oil nor dye, it does not soil white cambric, and yet lasts long on the hair, giving it a rich glossy lustre and a grateful perfume.

Kaneo, County of Hastings,
Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th., 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ankles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonees Remedy; I believe it will cure you,

MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the past fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicine.

Perhaps no one medicine is so universally required by everybody as a cathartic, nor was ever any before so universally adopted into use, in every country and among all classes, to such mild but efficient purgative as Pill. The obvious reason is, that it is a more reliable and far more effectual remedy than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it cured them; those who have not, know that it cures their neighbors and friends, and all know that what it does once it does always—that it never fails through any fault or neglect of its composition. We have thousands upon thousands of certificates of their remarkable cures of the following complaints, but such cures are known in every [illegible], and we need not publish them. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates, containing neither calomel or any deleterious drug, they may be taken with safety by anybody. Being sugar coating preserves them ever fresh and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Languor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice, Sour Stomach, Biliousness, Bilious Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Palpitation of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continuously taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change these complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Suppressed Swellings they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppressions a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Indeed it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and removing effect on the digestive apparatus.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as the excellent remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in the estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protection against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a protection against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or the world there assure the public that its qualities are fully sustained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, &c. &c. And indeed all the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

As its name implies, it does Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Calomel, Bismuth, Zinc, nor any other mineral, or poisonous drug whatever, it is entirely harmless to any patient. The number and importance of its cures in the ague districts, are beyond account, and we believe without a parallel in the history of Ague medicines. Our pride is gratified by the acknowledgements we receive of the [illegible] cases, and where other remedies had wholly failed.

Unacclimated persons, either residents in, or travelling through miasmatic districts, will be protected by taking the AGUE CURE daily.

For Liver Complaints, arising from torpidity of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the Liver into healthy activity.

For Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints, it is an excellent remedy, producing many truly remarkable cures, where other medicines had failed.

Prepared by DR. J. C. AYER & Co., Practical and Analytical Chemists, Lowell, Mass., and sold all round the world.

AYER'S

Sarsaparilla

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

And for the speedy cure of the following complaints: Scrofula and Scrofulous Affections, such as Tumors, Ulcers, Sores, Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Blains, and all Skin Diseases.

OAKLEY, Ind., 8th June, 1868.

J. C. AYER & Co., Gents: I feel it my duty to acknowledge what your Sarsaparilla has done for me. Having laboured a terrible infection, I have suffered from it in various ways for years. Sometimes it broke out in Ulcers on my hands and arms; sometimes it turned inward and threatened me at the stomach. Two years ago it broke out on my head and covered my scalp and ears with sore, which was painful and loathsome beyond description. I tried many remedies and several physicians, but without much relief, for a long time. In fact, the disease grew worse and worse. At length I was induced to read in the Gospel Messenger of their having prepared an alterative (Sarsaparilla), of which I had such information that my being your fellow-townsman (my home is Cincinnati and get it, and used it till it effected a cure. I took it, as you advise, in small doses of a teaspoonful three times a month, and used almost three bottles, and healthy skin soon began to form under the scab, which after a while fell off. My skin is now clear, and I know by my feelings that the disease has gone from my system. You can well believe that I feel what I now say when I tell you, that I hold you to be one of the agents of the age, and remain ever gratefully,

Yours,
ALFRED B. PALMER.

St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Scurfy Eruptions.

Dr. Robert M. Preble writes from Salem, N. Y., 12th Sept., 1866, that he has cured an inveterate case of Erysipelas, which threatened to terminate fatally, by the persevering use of our Sarsaparilla, and also a bad case of Malignant Erysipelas by large doses of the same; says he cures the common Eruptions by it constantly.

Rheumatism, Goitre or Swelled Neck.

Sabelon Sims of Prospect, Texas, writes: "Three bottles of your Sarsaparilla cured me from a Goitre—a blister swelling on the neck, which I had suffered from over ten years."

Leucorrhœa or Whites, Ovarian Tumors, Uterine Ulcerations, Female Diseases.

Dr. J. B. S. Channing, of New York City, writes: "I most cheerfully comply with the request of your agent in saying I have found your Sarsaparilla a most excellent alterative in the numerous complaints for which we employ such a remedy, but especially in Female Diseases of the Scrofulous diathesis. I have given it in numerous cases of Leucorrhœa by it, and some where the complaint was caused by ulceration of the uterus, the ulceration itself was cured. Another case of Falling of the Womb, which had defied all the remedies we could employ, has at length been completely cured by your Extract of Sarsaparilla. Our physicians throughout this city and adjoining States use your Sarsaparilla in their practice, and express the most exalted opinion of its virtues. Many of them have tried other remedies, but abandoned them for ours the commencement, or even earlier, and those who have not some personal experience of its effects are now loud in their praise of its virtues over the entire and dangerous disorders of the blood and humors. In all these the decided fidelity of these discovery, and as they know, too, the effects of this remedy, we need not do more than to assure them that it has now all the virtues that it had when those marvelous cures which have won so strongly upon the community were established.

Syphilis and Mercurial Disease.

NEW ORLEANS, 25th August, 1868.

DR. J. C. AYER: Sir, I cheerfully comply with the request of your agent, and report to you some of the effects I have realized with your Sarsaparilla.

I have cured with it, in my practice, most of the complaints for which it is recommended, and have found its effects truly wonderful in the cure of Tertiary and Mercurial Disease. One of my patients had Syphilitic sores in his throat, which were consuming his palate and the bony roof of his mouth. Your Sarsaparilla, persevered in, cured him in five weeks. Another was attacked by secondary symptoms in his nose, and the ulceration had eaten away a considerable part of it, so that I believe the disorder would soon reach his brain and kill him. I put it yielded to my administration of your Sarsaparilla; the ulcers healed, and he is well again, and of course without those disfigurements to his face. I have also been treated for the same disorder by mercury, was suffering from the pains in my bones. They had become so sensitive to the weather that on a change I was in the most excruciating pain in my joints and bones. She, too, was cured entirely by your Sarsaparilla in a few weeks. I know from its formula, which you gave me, and from this Preparation from your laboratory must be a great remedy; and recently, those truly remarkable results with it have not surprised me.

Fraternally yours, G. V. LABUZAN, M. D.

Rheumatism, Gout, Liver Complaint.

INDEPENDENCE, Preston Co., Va., 6th July, 1868.

DR. J. C. AYER: Sir, I have been afflicted with a painful chronic Rheumatism for a long time, which baffled the skill of physicians, and stuck to me in spite of all the remedies I could find, until I tried your Sarsaparilla. One bottle cured me in five weeks, and restored my general health so much that I am far better than I was when attacked. I think it a wonderful medicine. J. PEARN.

John V. Getchell, of St. Louis, writes: "I have been afflicted for years with an affection of the Liver, which destroyed my health. I tried every thing, and every thing failed to relieve me; and I have been a broken-down man for some years from an affection of the Kidneys and of the Liver. By referring to the Rev. Mr. Kay, advised me to try your Sarsaparilla, because he said he knew you, and any thing you made must be good. I sent to Cincinnati and got it, and used it till it effected a cure. I took it, as you advise, in small doses of a teaspoonful three times a month, and used almost three bottles, and healthy skin soon began to form under the scab, which after a while fell off. My skin is now clear, and I know by my feelings that the disease has gone from my system. You can well believe that I feel what I now say when I tell you, that I hold you to be one of the agents of the age, and remain ever gratefully,

Yours,

St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Scurfy Eruptions.

Dr. Robert M. Preble writes from Salem, N. Y., 12th Sept., 1866, that he has cured an inveterate case of Erysipelas, which threatened to terminate fatally, by the persevering use of our Sarsaparilla, and also a bad case of Malignant Erysipelas by large doses of the same; says he cures the common Eruptions by it constantly.

Rheumatism, Goitre or Swelled Neck.

Sabelon Sims of Prospect, Texas, writes: "Three bottles of your Sarsaparilla cured me from a Goitre—a blister swelling on the neck, which I had suffered from over ten years."

Leucorrhœa or Whites, Ovarian Tumors, Uterine Ulcerations, Female Diseases.

Dr. J. B. S. Channing, of New York City, writes: "I most cheerfully comply with the request of your agent in saying I have found your Sarsaparilla a most excellent alterative in the numerous complaints for which we employ such a remedy, but especially in Female Diseases of the Scrofulous diathesis. I have given it in numerous cases of Leucorrhœa by it, and some where the complaint was caused by ulceration of the uterus, the ulceration itself was cured. Another case of Falling of the Womb, which had defied all the remedies we could employ, has at length been completely cured by your Extract of Sarsaparilla. Our physicians throughout this city and adjoining States use your Sarsaparilla in their practice, and express the most exalted opinion of its virtues. Many of them have tried other remedies, but abandoned them for ours the commencement, or even earlier, and those who have not some personal experience of its effects are now loud in their praise of its virtues over the entire and dangerous disorders of the blood and humors. In all these the decided fidelity of these discovery, and as they know, too, the effects of this remedy, we need not do more than to assure them that it has now all the virtues that it had when those marvelous cures which have won so strongly upon the community were established.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the Relief of Consumptive Patients in Advanced Stages of the Disease.

This is a remedy so universally known to mankind, that it would be useless here to publish the evidences of its virtues. Its unrivalled excellence for coughs and colds, and its truly wonderful cures of pulmonary diseases, have made it known throughout the civilized nations of the earth. For are the communities, or even families, where some of them who have not some personal experience of its efficacy, or some living trophy in their midst of its victory over the entire and dangerous disorders of the throat and lungs. In all these the decided fidelity of these discovery, and as they know, too, the effects of this remedy, we need not do more than to assure them that it has now all the virtues that it had when those marvelous cures which have won so strongly upon the community were established.

Poetry.

THE TWO ARMIES.

BY GUSTAVE WHEELER MASSON.

As life's unending column pours,
Two marshalled hosts are seen,
The armies are the unequal shores
That Death flows black between.

One marches to the drum-beat's roll,
The other moves and marches hang,
And bears upon a crimson scroll,
"Our glory is, to sing!"

One moves in silence by the stands,
With sad, yet watchful eyes,
Calm as the patient planet's glints
That walks the clouded skies.

Above its front no sabres shine,
Its banners have no crests or lines,
"Our duty is to serve."

For these no death-bell's lingering shades;
At Honour's trumpet-call
With knitted brow and lifted blade
In Glory's arms they fall.

For these no clashing fulchions bright
No mirring battle-cry;
The bloodless stabber calls by night,—
Each answers, "Here am I!"

For these the sculptor's lingelled bust
The builder's marble piles,
The anthems pealing o'er their dust
Through long cathedral aisles.

For these the bloom-sprinkled turf
That flecks the lonely graves,
When Spring rolls in her sea-green surf
In flowery-foaming waves.

Two paths lead upward from below,
And angels wait above,
Who count each burning life-pop's flow,
Each falling tear of Love.

Though from the Hero's bleeding breast
Her pulses Freedom drew,
Though the white lilies in her crest
Sprang from that scarlet dew,—

While Valour's haughty champions wait
Till all their scars are shown,
Love walks unchallenged through the gate,
To sit beside the Throne!

Selections.

HOW TO BE HAPPY.

AUTHOR—ANNIE LEE.

Old Mr. Cleveland sat by his comfortable fireside one cold winter night. He was a widower and lived alone on his plantation; that is to say, he was the only white person there; for of negroes, both field hands and house servants, he had enough and to spare. He was a curious old man, Mr. Cleveland; a man of kind, good feelings, but of eccentric impulses, and blunt and startling manners. You must always let him do everything in his own odd way, just attempt to dictate to him, or even to suggest a certain course, and you would be sure to defeat your wisest designs. He seemed at times possessed by a spirit of opposition, and would often turn right round and oppose a course he had just been vehemently advancing, only just because some one else had ventured openly and warmly to approve of it. The night as I have said, was intensely cold, and would have done honor to a northern latitude; and in addition to this, a violent storm was coming on. The wind blew in fitful gusts, howling and sighing among the huge trees with which the house was surrounded, and then dying away with a melancholy dirge like moan. The old trees rubbed their leafless branches against the window panes, and the fowls which had roosted there for the night, were fain to clap their wings, and make prodigious efforts to preserve their equilibrium.

Mr. Cleveland grew moody and restless, threw down the book on which he had been reading kicked one of the andirons till he made the whole blazing fabric tumble down, and finally called in an impatient tone his boy Tom. Tom soon popped his head in at the door, and said 'Here sir.' 'Oh you be there are you,' exclaimed Mr. Cleveland, 'what sort of a way is this to build a fire?'

'I spec you have been kicking um sir,' said Tom.

'What! Well suppose I did kick um if it had been properly made it would not have tumbled down. Fix it this minute sir.'

'I is going to fix um now, sir,' said Tom fumbling at the fire.

'Well fix it sir, without having so much to say about it. You had better do more and say less,' said Mr. Cleveland.

'Yes sir,' answered Tom.

'You will keep answering me when there is no occasion!' exclaimed Mr. Cleveland; 'I just wish I had my stick here I'd crack the side of your head open with it!'

'Here's the stick, sir,' said Tom, handing the walking cane out of the corner.

'Put it down this instant sir,' said Mr. Cleveland; 'how dare you touch my stick without my leave!'

'I thought you said you want um sir,' said Tom.

'You had better think about your work sir, and stop that answering me, or I'll find a way to make you!' Mr. Cleveland said. 'Bring in some more light wood and make the fire, and shut the window shutters.—Do you hear me sir!'

'Yes sir,' replied Tom.

'Well, why don't you answer if you hear then? How am I to know when you hear me if you don't answer!' said Mr. Cleveland.

'I thought you tell me not to answer you sir,' said Tom.

'I said when there was no occasion boy; that's what I said,' exclaimed Mr. Cleveland reaching for the stick.

'Yes sir,' said Tom as he went out of the door grinning.

Mr. Cleveland was in the main a very kind master, though somewhat hasty and impatient. Tom and he were for ever sparring, yet neither could have done without the other; and there was something comical about Tom's disposition which suited his master's eccentric and changeable moods. Tom evidently served as kind of safety valve for his master's nervous system, and many an explosion of superfluous excitability he had to bear. On the night in question Mr. Cleveland was particularly out of humor. The truth is he was naturally a generous and warm hearted man, but in consequence of early disappointment had found a pottery life, and was really suffering for the want of objects of affection.

His feelings unemployed, unemployed, yet morbidly sensitive, were becoming seared, and his concentrated heart often ached for want of sympathy. He rose and took another turn or two across the room; as though he opened the window and looked out upon the stormy night. 'What wretched weather I' he exclaimed; 'it makes a man feel inclined to commit suicide, there are no two ways about it. I'm tired of life; what have I to live for? If I were to die to-morrow who would shed a tear? Then whispered conscience: 'It is thine own fault; a man need not feel alone because there's none in the world who bear his kindly all ones are thy brethren; these are not all the greatest human family, and what keeps them done to receive the poor and suffering around them? Will not thy master pay, to rise at the last day, [illegible] not hungered, and you gave me no meat; I was thirsty, and you gave me no drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me not in; naked, and ye clothed me not; sick and in prison, and you visited me not. Inasmuch as you did it not to one of these, my brethren you did it not to me.' This was a strong and direct appeal, and it was not without its effect. Then muttered Mr. Cleveland to himself again. 'Well, how can I help it? It has not been for want of inclination.—Heaven knows I am always ready to put my hand in my pocket whenever people call on me for charity. How can I help it if the poor and suffering do not make their wants known to me?'

Then again spoke conscience: 'Thou art trying to deceive thyself, but thou canst not deceive or silence me. Thou best knows of the existence of suffering, and thine indolence has prevented thee from going abroad to relieve it. Did thy master do thus? Did he not go about doing good? Did he not sit down to meet with publicans and sinners? Can you stand here and look out upon such a night as this, and not think of those who are exposed to its bitterness? Can thy human heart beat only for itself when thou thinkest of the thousand miseries crying to heaven for relief? Resolve now before thy head touches its comfortable pillow, that with the morning's dawn thou wilt resolutely set about thy work, or rather thy master's work. It is very hard,' still muttered Mr. Cleveland to himself, 'that these thoughts will continually intrude themselves upon me.' They give me no peace. Stifle them as I may they come with tenfold force. People have no right to be poor. I was poor once and nobody gave charity to me. I had to help myself up in the world as well as I could. I hate poor people; I hate unfortunate people; I hate the world and everybody in it.' Then answered again the still, small voice: 'For shame Mr. Cleveland, for shame! You will ruin your soul if you thus darken the [illegible] You know better than all this, and you are sinning against yourself. You want to be happy; well you may be so; there is a wide field of duty open before you; enter in God's name and go to work like a man. What you say about having helped yourself is perfectly true, and you deserve all credit for it. But remember that the majority of the poor are entirely destitute of your advantages. You had the foundation rightly laid. A thousand circumstances in your early life conspired to render you energetic and self-relying. You had the right sort of education, and Providence also helped to train you. Besides, once more I ask you, did your master step to enquire how human misery was brought about before he relieved it? Away with this unmanly, selfish policy! Follow me! Follow Christ!' Mr. Cleveland shut the window, heaved a deep sigh, and took several turns across the room. 'I believe it is all true,' at length he said, 'and I have been a sad fool. I'll turn and lead a different life. I have wealth and not a chick or a child to spend it on, or leave it to when I die, and so I'll spend it in doing good if I can only find out the best way; that's the trouble. But never mind; I'll be my own executor.' He now rang the bell for Tom. Tom immediately appeared with his usual 'Here, sir.' 'Tom,' said Mr. Cleveland, 'put me in mind in the morning to send a load of wood to old Mrs. Peters.'

'Yes sir,' said Tom, 'and you better send some bacon, cause I hear little Man's Jack Peter say they aint had no meat to eat since I don't know de day when. I spec they had rather have the meat than the wood, 'cause they can pick up wood enough all about.'

'You mind your own business, sir,' said Mr. Cleveland. 'I'll send just what I please. How long is it since I came to you, sirrice? Saucy fellow!' he muttered again, 'I meant to send the woman some meat, and now I do it, that impudent fellow will think I do it because he advised it. Anyhow I'll not send the bacon, I'll send some beef or mutton.'

Just at this moment there was a knock at the door, and Tom going to open it, admitted Dick, the constable.

'What do you want Dick, at this time of night?' inquired his master.

'There's a man down stairs, sir,' said Dick, 'and he seems to be in great affliction. He says they are camping about half a mile below, sir, and the trees are falling; so he's afraid they will all be killed. He asks if you can let him stay in one of the outhouses till to-morrow.'

'Camping out such a night as this!' exclaimed Mr. Cleveland, 'the Lord have mercy on them! How many are there of them, Dick?'

'He and his wife and six little children, sir,' answered Dick.

'No negroes?' inquired the master.

'No sir,' said Dick. 'I don't like poor whites, no how sir, but I spect you best take these people in lest they die there in the woods.'

'Mean, if I were you, I would take in some of them.'

'What do you mean, sir?' exclaimed Mr. Cleveland, 'you surely have lost your senses. Dick, you'll have to give that boy of yours a thrashing, I'll not stand his insolence much longer. Don't stand there grinning at me, sir.'

'No sir,' snickered Tom, skulking behind Dick, who was his father.

'Let the man come up here, Dick,' said Mr. Cleveland. When the traveller made his appearance, Mr. Cleveland was startled at his true and well-bogone appearance. 'Sit down my man,' said he.

'I thank you, sir,' replied the stranger, 'but I must be back as soon as possible to my family. Can you grant us a night's lodging, sir?'

'Certainly,' replied Mr. Cleveland. 'Have you any means of getting your family hither? I am told you have six little ones.'

'They must walk, sir, for our only horse has been killed by a falling tree. But I have not a word to say. It might have been my wife or one of my little ones, and, poor as I am, I can spare none of them.'

Mr. Cleveland, whose feelings were in an unusually softened state, got up and walked rapidly to the book-case to conceal his emotion, [illegible] very affecting, very [illegible] indeed.' 'I beg turning to the stranger who was in the act of leaving the room, he said, 'if you will wait a few moments I will get my carriage, your wife and little ones must not walk such a night as this.'

'God bless you sir,' said the stranger, in a trembling voice, 'but I am too uneasy to stay a moment longer.'

'Well, go on,' said Mr. Cleveland, 'and I will follow in the carriage.'

The stranger brushed his hand across his eyes and left the room without speaking a word; while Dick and Tom exchanged glances of surprise at their master's uncommon fit of philanthropy, Tom feeling perfectly assured that 'the poor buckrahs,' as he called them, owed their good fortune to his unreasonable interference. The carriage was soon in readiness, and Mr. Cleveland rode to it to the spot. He found the family all gathered around the dead beast, and lamenting over it, while the father, having just arrived, was expostulating upon his kind reception by Mr. Cleveland. It took them some little time to stow themselves away in the carriage, and Mr. Cleveland actually carried two sturdy children on his knees—yes, there he was riding through the dreadful storm, in danger every moment from the trees which were falling all around him, with an infant in its mother's arms, squalling with all its might, and a heavy boy on each knee, and squeezed almost to death into the bargain for there were nine in the carriage—and yet feeling so happy; ay, far happier than he had felt for many a long day. Truly, charity brings its own reward. When they arrived at Mr. Cleveland's house, instead of being stowed away in an outbuilding, as the poor man had modestly requested, they were comfortably provided for beneath their own roof. That night, as he laid his head upon his pillow, he could not help feeling surprised at his sudden accession.—'Well, I will go on,' he soliloquized, 'I will pursue the path I have this night taken, and if I always feel as I do now, I am a new man, and will never again talk about suicide.' He slept that night the sleep of peace and rose in the morning with a light heart and buoyant spirits. His first care was to take the father of the family aside, and get from him the story of his misfortunes. It was a mournful tale, and Mr. Cleveland was obliged more than once to pretend a sudden call out of the room, that he might hide his emotion, and the tale was by no means told in vain. True to his new resolutions, Mr. Cleveland thankfully accepted the work which Providence had given him to do, and the family of emigrants to this day mention the name of Cleveland with tears of gratitude and love, and when they implore God's mercy for themselves never forget to invoke for their kind benefactor Heaven's choicest blessings, nor is that the only family whose hearts glow at the mention of Mr. Cleveland's name. Far and wide his name is known and honored and loved. And Mr. Cleveland has found out the true secret of happiness. It is true that he and Tom still have their squabbles, for Tom is really a provoking fellow, and Mr. Cleveland is, and always will be, an eccentric and impulsive man; but his heart which, when we first introduced him to our readers was far from being right with God or with his fellow men, is now the dwelling place of love and kindness, and the experiences of every day continues to strengthen the new principles he has imbibed and to confirm him in the right course.

Reader, art thou sad or solitary? I can offer thee a certain cure for all thy woes. Contemplate the life of Him who spake as never man spake. Follow him through all those years of toil and suffering. Watch him whenever called by the sorrows of his human brethren, and witness his deeds of mercy and his offerings of love, and then, "go thou and do likewise."

THREE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS UNEARTHED.—A Schenectady gentleman on a visit to New York, writes back to the Union: 'Mr. May, a retired merchant, related to me an anecdote which may not be uninteresting to your readers. A wealthy widow died recently and divided, before her death, all her estate between her two children, a son and daughter. The son removed her furniture and paper from homestead on Broadway, and on looking them over one day found a memorandum stating that in the corner of the cellar were buried two crocks with money. He procured a laborer and dug in the place indicated and found the two vessels, one filled with gold, the other with greenbacks, the whole amounting to $300,000. Mr. May knew the parties, and assures me that the above is true in every particular. Had the property been sold, it would have been a nice question of law as to whom the treasure would have belonged the original owner, the purchaser or the finder."

A GOOD ONE.—A young fellow, not quite so wise as Solomon, eating some Grange County cheese, full of mites, one night, at a restaurant said: 'Now I have done as much as Sampson, for I have slain my thousands and tens of thousands.' 'Yes,' answered one of the company 'and with the same weapon too—the jaw-bone of an ass.'

A farmers' club in Ohio has been debating the wheat and chess question. They decided by a majority vote, that the wheat changes to chess, and the latter to timothy. They expect, after a while, to grow pumpkins on oak trees.

KISSING.

If there is anything of which the human race is fond, it is kissing. No doubt our lady readers will be shocked, and toss their pretty heads disdainfully at this assertion; but we maintain it, nevertheless, and whatever they do to others, to themselves they will be compelled to confess its truth. We do not mean that they like kissing everybody, only some particular lucky—or unlucky—fellow. Philosophers and learned men may talk about the attractions of gravitation and cohesion; but there is no attraction in nature so powerful and irresistible as that which lies in a pair of ripe, rosy lips. In ages it has been potent to draw the strongest men from his duty and his prejudices. Even philosophers, with all their boasted coldness, have been powerless to resist the [illegible] attraction, which even the most obtuse science cannot account for.

Who invented kissing is not known, but we shrewdly suspect if mother Eve was half so fair as John Milton has painted her, it must have been the first thing that father Adam did, when he woke to find so lovely a creature by him. Certainly if he was able to resist the attraction he must have been a very icicle. The Hebrews had a decided weakness for the institution; and if we may judge from the Songs of Solomon, the wisest man that ever lived was no proof against it. The old Greeks who were as cold as their faultless marble, seem to have had no knowledge of the attraction, for their poets, until the days of Theocritus, say nothing about it. Theocritus was a travelled man, and had seen the Egyptian women, and kissed them too, we suppose; but for all that, he was exceedingly moderate in his doings, for he tells us of his sweetheart:—

"I should have been contented
With a kiss of your sweet mouth."

We should have been very discontented with such a small allowance.

Horace, who was much of a lady's man, says nothing about kissing, if we remember right. But hear what Catalus says to his sweetheart, when she asked him how many kisses he wanted—

"Do you ask, Lesbia, how many kisses of thine can be enough? As many as are the sands of the African desert, or as many as the stars that behold the secret loves of mortals when the night is still."

That was a sensible fellow, and very naturally he was popular with the ladies in his day.

At present one must be very deeper in the practice of the art. He be wise he will never try to kiss a girl against her will, nor to make much fuss in doing so. A quiet, easy, gentlemanly way of going about it is always safe to win; many a bright eyed, dimpled lass, who would die for the world be kissed in the presence of a third party, will not have to say 'no' to a good-looking fellow 'when there's nobody near to see.' A wise man will also limit the number of those he tries to kiss, for promiscuous kissing is worse than all—isn't it ladies? How to go about the business is something that each one must decide for himself. A sensible fellow who is not a puppy will rarely fail to perceive the right moment; and if he behaves himself, he will almost always find his fair one ready to supply the deficiencies of his education in this respect, for the art comes natural to women.

PROFANE LANGUAGE.

There is probably no crime in the land so common as profanity. One meets it everywhere. He cannot travel upon the highway, upon railroad or steamboat; he can hardly enter a depot, hotel, warehouse, store or office without his ears being greeted with some form of profanity. Old men use it; young men are addicted to it; and young children lisp it with the first accents of their mother tongue. It seems to be regarded with some as an essential ingredient in the character of a gentleman, as imparting force and dignity to his character, and giving weight to his declarations. There never was a greater mistake.

In the next place it rather weakens than strengthens one's declarations. The natural inference is that one who will recklessly violate one precept of the Decalogue is liable to violate another; that if he has no fear of God, neither will he regard man. And this inference every one would draw among strangers. He would sooner take the word of one whom he found too conscious to use a profane word, than one who accompanying his statements with an oath showed that he scrupled not to trample under foot a divine command. It is true that there are honest men who are profane; but we trust them not because of their oath, but because we have tried them and found them honest; we believe them rather in spite of their profanity. But again, profanity is a violation of a positive command of God: 'Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain,' were the words communicated audibly from heaven, amid the thunder and smoke of Sinai, and by the finger of the Almighty twice committed to tables of stone. This is a law of peculiar sanctity. It is invested with all that is lawful and sacred. It came not by the mouth of prophets; not by the ministration of angels even, but the great Law-giver himself came down and communicated it with his own lips, and, amid the awful displays and majesty, wrote down with his own almighty hand, and reached it forth, to be a statute to all generations. Who then would recklessly trample it under foot?

We repeat that is a crime without a redeeming quality of any seeming advantage. When men commit any crime, they generally expect to gain something by it. If they tell a falsehood, they have some object in view. If they commit theft or robbery, there is an expectation of gain. If they indulge in strong drink, it is to gratify a craving appetites. But profane swearing has no real or imaginary profit. It makes no one the richer, the wiser, or the happier for it. It neither helps his education nor improves his manners. It commends us not to society. It adds no beauty or force to his language. What is it then? It is simply a gratuitous insult cast in the face of the Almighty.—Buffalo Christian Advocate.

A NEW METHOD OF STARTING A NEWSPAPER.

(From the British Canadian, Port Hope.)

To start a newspaper on the cheapest plan you require to be a "good average printer," and an adept in the art of [illegible] atmospheric entities. You must also be possessed of a more than ordinary quantity of that useful commodity vulgarly denominated "cheek"—say sufficient to enable you to tell much better mechanics than yourself that you are "the best theoretical and practical printer, and the best theoretical engineer in Canada." Then follow the rules laid down below, and you will be certain to meet with all the success you deserve:—

1. Copy, gratis, all the advertisements from the papers in the town in which you intend to "spread your wings."

2. Get your paper printed on a Backwoods town. This can be easily accomplished by simply changing the heading and date of the rural journal to make room for the gratis advertisements, which save type-setting and "exhausting" mental labor. The info that you are not a resident, or in any way identified with the interests of the town in which you make your new venture will give you a strong claim upon its inhabitants for support.

3. Boast that you commence your paper with a circulation of "forty dozen," (say below that you will not exceed.") Print that number for two weeks, and as many as you can for two more, or even one, if necessary, and give the rest away. People will then see the advantage of paying "$1.50 per year in advance, otherwise $2.00," for your immaculate sheet.

4. On the third week, print 600 copies and get rid of them some way; and on the fourth "descend" to five hundred. If you have a conscience, (and it is curious you of handicapping the unlikely, another it; you can [illegible] [illegible] you [illegible] [illegible] you [illegible] [illegible] you

A Word of Warning.

The following Bill just passed by the Dominion Parliament, is of importance to strawberry vegetarians:

1. All idle persons who, not having visible means of maintaining themselves, live without employment—all persons who, being able to work and thereby or by other means to maintain themselves and families, wilfully refuse or neglect to do so—all persons openly exposing or exhibiting in any street, road, public place or highway, any indecent exhibition, or openly, or indecently exposing their persons—all persons wandering about and begging, or who go about from door to door, or place themselves in the streets, highways, passages or public places to beg or receive alms—all persons loitering in the streets or highways, and obstructing passengers by standing across the footpaths, or by using insulting language, or in any other way, or tearing down or defacing signs, breaking windows, breaking doors, or doorplates, or the walls of houses, roads or gardens, destroying fences, causing a disturbance in the streets or highways by screaming swearing, or singing, or being drunk, or impeding or incommoding peaceable passengers,—all common prostitutes, or night walkers, wandering in the fields public streets or highways, not giving a satisfactory account of themselves—all keepers of bawdy-houses and houses of ill-fame, or houses for the resort of prostitutes, and persons in the habit of frequenting such houses, not giving a satisfactory account of themselves—all persons who have no peaceable profession or calling to maintain themselves by, but who do for the most part support themselves by gaming or crime or by the avails of prostitution—shall be deemed vagrants, loose, idle, and disorderly persons within the meaning of this Act, and shall upon conviction before any two Justices of the Peace, be punished by imprisonment in any gaol or place of confinement other than the Penitentiary, for a term not exceeding six months, and with or without hard labour, or by a fine not exceeding fifty dollars, or by both, such fine and imprisonment being at the discretion of the convicting Justices.

2. Any two Justices of the Peace upon information before them made, that any person hereinbefore described as vagrants, loose, idle and disorderly persons, are or are reasonably suspected to be harboured or concealed in any bawdy-house house of ill-fame, tavern or boarding-house, may, by warrant under their hand and seal, authorise any constable or other person to enter at any time such house or tavern, and to apprehend and bring before them or any other Justices, all persons found therein as suspected as aforesaid.

The Route to Red River.

Mr. Lawson's report on the route to Red River has been handed in to the Dominion Government. He recommends opening the communication at once between Lake Superior and the Red River Settlement in such a way as would admit of the route being immediately used, and then going on step by step as fast as possible with further works, until a first-class line was completed. Ultimately the internavigation would be rendered continuous, and connected with Lake Superior at one end, and with the East Garry at the other, by means of railroads. The preliminary line would consist of good wagon roads at either end, and such improvement as could be rapidly carried out in the region of the lakes, and every work undertaken would be a step in the great plan. The total cost of the preliminary line would be $290,000, and the probable ultimate cost of railroads and continuous navigation about $5,800,000. The report is accompanied by plans and sections, and the scheme is generally approved by engineers. The explorations of last summer show that continuous navigation of seventy miles may be at once obtained in the high and rocky region of the water shed. The Eastern extremity of navigation would be within 40 miles of Thunder Bay, and its total length to Lake of the Woods 317 miles. The lockage would amount to 430 feet high, being less than that of the Rideau Canal, which has 457 feet rise and fall in a distance of 126 miles. The various schemes of continuous railroad are considered, and the exploration of the country between Nupigon Bay and Red River by way of the north-east end of Lake of the Woods is recommended. The route to the Pacific is suggested as probably practicable on the high plateau north of Lakes Huron and Superior, and might be tapped by the Toronto and Nipissing line. The country is highly favourable for railroads between Lake of the Woods and the Rocky Mountains. If the present scheme is carried out, the distance from Toronto to Fort Garry would be 1,069 miles, and the cost per ton of freight five dollars and a half. By American lines, the distance would be 1,522 miles, and the cost per ton of freight nineteen dollars and a half.

The Pope—He Leads a Happy Life.

The venerable Pius IX., though sore beset with trouble concerning his temporal sovereignty, has yet his earthly compensations, which are not to be despised. On the auspicious occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of his first mass, besides congratulatory letters from all the rulers of Christendom, except the King of Portugal and the President of the United States, the Holy Father was the fortunate recipient of costly presents of the most various description. Diamonds of inestimateable value, coffers of gold coin, horses, rifles, artillery, rich fabrics for cassocks, linen for a new set of shirts—these were among the offerings laid at his feet. His Holiness remarked that the linen, which was the gift of the Jews at Rome, came opportunely, as he was in want of under garments, and it may be supposed that the money did not come amiss, although the Papal treasury has been enriched of late by the young Marquis of Bute, the composer Gounds, and other zealous members of the Romish Church.—It is said that the letter and present of the King of Italy were declined, because the letter was inscribed as "from the King of Italy," on perhaps the principle of Timeo Danaos et dona ferentes. It is curious to note, however, that the Italian Government were heavy losers at the recent drawing of the lottery in Florence, where all the numbers in any manner connected with the Pope proved prizes. Thus 2 (Pius IX.), 69 (1869), 11 (April 11), 50 (the 50th anniversary), and 26 (the Pope's age at the time of his first mass), all came out lucky numbers, costing the Italian exchequer a million of francs. This is attributed to what the prelates of the Quirinal call the jettatore, or evil eye, of the Holy Father, who, on the other hand, is believed to possess the power of working miracles, and is said to have instaneously cured the Princess Odescalchi of an obstinate malady.

APEL.—The Alabama claims were allowed to disturb too long the citizens of the two great Anglo-Saxon communities. The carelessness of one set of statesmen, the indifference of another set, and the cupidity or prejudice of another class, have combined to keep this question remain rankling in the great political system, like consumption in the human frame, which spreads so rapidly until checked and expelled by the great assassination remedy.

The Banking Scheme.

Mr. Wm. Workman, of the Montreal City Bank, condemns the banking scheme of the Government in unmeasured terms. In a letter to the Montreal Gazette he says it seems to have been made specially for the Bank of Montreal. He closes his letter as follows:—Meanwhile let me beseech every member of the House of Commons, as they love their country, as they hate tyranny and oppression through a monstrous money power, thrown into the hands of one institution, as they would avoid a commercial and monetary crisis over the whole Dominion, as they would shun as certain as daylight, an irredeemable currency before many years—to vote this measure down.

La Minerve says that Mr. King, of the Bank of Montreal, made offers which testify to his liberality, and his lively desire to see the Royal Canadian Bank, then gravely compromised and menaced, continue its operations. This statement is utterly without foundation. It was Mr. King who delivered the first blow at the Royal Canadian by stopping the usual system of exchanging notes; and when the Royal Canadian was about to close its doors, the Bank of Montreal here refused to pay a balance due on protence that the balance might be against the Royal Canadian at other places. We saw enough of Mr. King's offers of service to tottering banks, when through his machinations the Commercial failed last year, to satisfy us for ever on that subject. He kept a smooth face to managers of the Commercial, but stabbed at every vital point that he could reach. It is a little too late now for the French organist in Montreal to tell the people of Ontario about the liberality of Mr. King and his desire to prevent injury to his rivals.

Emigration of Working-Men.

A body of working-men have devised for themselves a plan of emigration which promises better success than some of the rash schemes lately talked of. A society has been formed for raising a capital of £250,000 by shares of £1 each, payable by weekly instalments. The managers wrote to the Governor and Legislature of Nebraska, and received the information they wanted, as well as the offer of a large tract of land at a merely nominal price.—The society intend to colonise this tract, and by way of ascertaining the whole truth with regard to it they have sent out 16 "pioneers," chosen by ballot. Should their report be favorable, other members will be balloted for, until the land has been properly divided. Here, then, is a "self-supporting" scheme of emigration, conducted without even a preliminary appeal to the public. The land alloted to each emigrant is, we presume, to be paid for gradually, but its original price will not render this obligation a heavy burden. The result of this experiment ought to be interesting to those who are contending that it is the duty of the Government to assist in the wholesale deportation of the working-classes.—Glasgow Saturday Post.

THIRD READING OF IRISH CHURH BILL.—On Monday, in the House of Commons, Mr. Gladstone moved the third reading of the bill for the disestablishment of the Irish Church. A large number of petitions against the passage of the bill was then presented, after which. Mr. James Maden Holt, member for North-East Lancashire, moved, the Lord Elcho, member for Haddingtonshire, seconded a motion, that the bill be rejected. A long but uninteresting debate followed, terminating in the refusal of the House to accept Mr. Holt's proposition and the passage of the bill, by a vote of 361 against 247. The result was received with uproarious cheers from Ministerial branches. The House then adjourned.

We commend to the notic of those who have so much to say respecting the "distress" in this Province, and who talk as if the States were a modern El Dorado, the following paragraph from the Boston Daily Advertiser of April 29th:—"There are eight thousand women in Boston and its suburbs, working from twelve to sixteen hours a day to earn less than three dollars a week, and boarding and lodging themselves from their earnings. Many earn but twenty-five cents a day, [green backs,] and not a few less than that. Skirts are given out to be made at 50 cents a dozen. The motion of the sewing machine wears out the spine in a year or two, and then there is no relief but death.".

A man named John Newman was arrested in Kingston for assisting an artilleryman to desert; he had boxed him up, marked the box 'glass,' and shipped him to Cape Vincent; when the Custom House officer went to examine the merchandise, the live stock appeared in the shape of a full-grown artilleryman. No duty was collected,—the "blarsted" Britishers again defrauding Uncle Sam.

On the occasion of the reception of the Ameer Shere Ali, the Afghan Ruler, by Lord Mayo, at Umballa, in British India, the Ameer did not appear to be peculiarly struck by the beauty of the ladies who accompanied Major Pollock and formed a portion of the suite to witness the reception. Carefully surveying the fair retinue, he remarked, "I suppose that you just as we do in our country, lock up all the pretty women at home."

A new difficulty in the settlement of the Irish Church question. The choristers of the Cathedral of Armagh, Ireland, have petitioned Parliament for compensation, in case of dis-ertablishment. Some of them have been singing for over 20 years, and expect to be provided for, like stipendiary curates; the bellsmen will be next.

PARLIAMENTARY.

Since our last issue Mr. Holton's motion to memorialize the Queen with an expression of sympathy with the Irish Church disestablishment has been brought up and carried, as was anticipated. The ministerial party offering a determined opposition to it. Messrs. Holton, McKenzie and Blake, made able speeches in moving, seconding, and supporting the resolution. They were negatived, however. Mr. Holton, no doubt, has gained all he expected, a discussion of the Canadian Parliament, and the general acquiescence of all the members of the House in the principles of justice in disestablishment. On Tuesday the Banking and currency scheme was discussed in Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Holton opposed the whole government scheme, as calculated to produce a crisis in money affairs, by the sudden transition from the present system to that proposed by min. isters. He defended the present system by showing how admirably it had answered the wants of the country, by owning itself to the demands of merchants when they were endeavouring to enhance the produce of the country. He also contended that there had been fewer failures in Canada since the establishment of the system than in any other country. He further showed that owing to the elastic circulation of the banks, all was done for the country that any banking system could do, while the government proposed to establish a scheme which proposed a uniform currency, but was at the same time calculated to produce a crisis. He moved that it be postponed this session.

Mr. McKenzie seconded the resolution, going over the proposed changes. He also showed how the entire press, and the mercantile interests of Ontario condemned it; that numerous petitions were sent in against and not one for it; and asserted that the disaster of banks during the last five years was due to government interference in money matters. He strongly urged the postponement until next session, to give the country time to form a judgment on the relative systems.

Mr. Cartwright also took sides against the Government currency scheme, urging that their uniform currency would be bought at the enormous price of a general convulsion of the whole monetary system of the Dominion.

Mr. C. contended that the effects of the scheme would be the cessation of the power of issuing notes of credit; that it would take away from the business of the country several millions of dollars, and provide nothing to take its place.

Sir George E Cartier considered that the Government had a right to the circulation, and it was their duty to take it.

In vain did Mr. Cartwright point out the danger to the commercial interest and progress of the country. Mr. Cartier insisted that it was their right to take the circulation into their own hands. Hon. Mr. Galt also spoke against the Government. He said that his hon. friend had not acted ingenuously in the House in this matter. Then he had said that the system was similar to that of the United States; but that had never been tested with compulsory payment of gold. But even now it had not been found to work well. At a certain season large amounts were wanted for the Western States, and then the rates for money ran up to an excessive rate. The principal defect in the scheme was the want of elasticity. No notice had been taken of one point. The circulation mentioned was that in the hands of the public, but the business of the country could not be carried on without large reserves in the banks for the accommodation of customers. The Bank of Montreal was said to be working a circulation of $2,000,000; they required the amount of $5,000,000. There must therefore be a large reserve in the hands of the Banks if they wished to keep open. If they had not notes they must have gold. He had never been unaware of the importance of providing for the peculiar circumstances of Ontario, yet no provision had been made for periodical expansion there. There were three interests to be regarded there—the importing, the lumber and the produce interests. The first needed note expansion; the lumberers' work ran over a number of months, so that they could be provided for; but the produce dealers, who moved the crops of the country, required this expansion for a limited time, and if they did not get it the trade of the country was stopped. The amount they required was not $3,000,000, cut $6,000,000. Ontario he held to be the backbone of Confederation, and if it was not prosperous all the rest suffered. The proposal must therefore be examined in reference to the interests of this important Province.

As to the lapsing of charters next year, that was true, but it would be impossible to allow these to expire, for the business of the country must be carried on. The system was not to be enforced for 5 years, because the present system is unsound, if so why not do away with it at once and insist on the sound system without delay. The argument destroys itself—for if a difficulty arose there were no means of overcoming it by law unless the Government took the responsibility of borrowing the loan. The statement of affairs of the Bank of Upper Canada was not ingenuously stated by the Finance Minister. He says it had a circulation of $834,000, and only $39,000 gold. But that was the result of the run. They having failed because of another set of circumstances than those which the argument would imply. They were bled to death by the withdrawl of large sums from them. The Commercial Bank had $2,000,000 two months before it failed, and was believed to be sound till the day it failed. He approved of the provision by which no notes could be handed in of an insolvent Bank in payment by those who were its debtors, as all should be served to the estimate for fair distribution. He agreed that the time would come when people would demand a decimal currency. They had that under the present system, but he thought the Government should take the currency into its hands the same as coinage. But the measure should not be produced for which the country was not ready. He apprehended a time of commercial depression, and such a measure should not be pressed now; and believing this he urged the Government, in view of the discussion the measure was now receiving, and seeing that it was not proposed to go into force for five years, that they should pause and not press the proposals further.

J. H. Cameron proposed that the government scheme be not urged this session, but that bank charters be renewed for 5 years.

Mr. Gibbs also favoured the extension of the charters, and the postponement of Mr. Rose's scheme.

Sir John A. Macdonald moved an adjournment, assurance being given that every opportunity would be given for further discussion, and that the Government [illegible] saying whether [illegible] or not.

Hon. Mr. Holton said he would accept the announcement of the minister the first which fully met his views. If the Government was not removed to-morrow the earliest opportunity plans that it would be introduced to press the matter this session.

Sir John A. Macdonald denied this imputation. He did not believe that any support coming from any quarter against the Government would [illegible] to support the banker for Chateauguay. (Laughter.)

Hon. Mr. Holton said that was the first kind after the number of votes he had given this session.

The House adjourned at midnight.

Mr. Morris has introduced a bill which is intended to meet those cases of annexation which are likely to cause a repetition of the Chaleurs-Whittaker affair. It is as follows:

"1. Whosoever shall, under promise of marriage, seduce and have illicit connection with any unmarried woman of previous chaste character, is guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall on conviction be liable to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, in jail or place of confinement with or without hard labor, or to pay such fine as the court may award, in addition to, or without any such other punishment as aforesaid.

"2. No conviction shall be had under this Act on the testimony of the woman seduced, unsupported by other evidence, nor unless the indictment is found within two years after the commission of the offence.

"3. The subsequent intermarriage of the parties may be pleaded in bar of conviction."

This is but a part measure, and will meet but part of the case. There are no provisions for such an unfortunate case as that which happened at Port Hope some years ago—which should also be considered as criminal as that contemplated in the Bill. There should be no half measures. The fear of consequences will prevent crime, and we see no good reason why punishment should not follow the crime, not merely particular phases of it.

THE BLIND.—We understand that there is to be a public meeting on Tuesday evening, in the Music Hall, to discuss the propriety of granting aid toward the erection of an Institution for the Blind, in Toronto. There are asylums for those who have been visited with the loss of reason, and we have an Institution at Hamilton under the able management of J. B. McGann, Esq., for the deaf and dumb, for whom a building is to be erected in Belleville. The blind have no place provided for them yet, and the movement in that direction deserves encouragement from the people everywhere, and we have no doubt but that the people of Peterborough will do their part in the good work. It may be urged that the calls for charity are so numerous that some of them must be neglected, no matter how worthy the object, while on the other hand it may be said that it is better to do a little for all, for all require aid.

FATHER SANDERSON.—The friends of the Rev. John Sanderson, superannuated Wesleyan Minister, of Peterborough, will be pleased to hear that he has been the recipient of a substantial expression of regard from his friends in the Peterborough circuit and neighborhood. On the 18th of May, ult., a donation was recorded him which, besides cheering the old man's heart and keeping green the regard of numerous friends, left him about $100 the richer. We consider that a minister who after being superannuated for eleven years, shall yet so live in the hearts of the people, has no small thing to be proud of. Such an expression is alike creditable to the christian sympathies of the people and to the one who solicits them. We congratulate Father Sanderson on his work thus following him, and we hope he may long be spared amongst a people who appreciate his unassuming, consistent and Christian character.

FISHING.—The statutes of 1866 provides as follows:—"It shall not be lawful to fish for, catch or kill salmon, trout, (or 'lunge' of any kind) maskinonge, winnoniche, bass, barfish, pickerel, white fish, herring or shad, by means of spear, grapnel hooks, negog, or nishagans;" the remainder of the clause provides for granting liberty to Indians in certain waters to catch and spear fish.

The 9th clause says, "No person shall fish for, catch, kill, buy or sell, or possess the young of any of the fish named in this Act, or in any regulation or regulations under it.

Penalty: The violation of this Act incurs a penalty of not more than $20.00 for each offence, or imprisonment of not longer than one month, nor less than eight days. Where the offender is very poor the magistrate has a discretionary power.

THE FAIR.—Tuesday was the day of our Spring Fair. There was a considerable concourse of people—young, old and middle aged—out, but as is usually the case, not an amount of business proportionate to the number of people in town. There were few horses offered for sale, and only about a dozen milch cows. Prices asked ranged from $30 to $40, but very few, if any, changed hands at these prices. As a sign of the healthy state of our farmers they took home over a dozen reaping and mowing machines, and many more are ordered.

ROYAL CANADIAN.—Some of our exchanges say that there is a fair prospect of the bank resuming business at an early day, under more favorable auspices than at any time since its incorporation. We hope this may be true, but a full exhibition of its condition should be made public at once. This would tend to restore confidence in the management, and if the assets are sufficient to enable the bank to resume business, all the better. In the meantime bill-holders need not be much alarmed.

YOUNG'S POINT LOCKS.—The tenders of Messrs. McDonnell & McDonald, of Hamilton, for the construction of the locks at Young's Point, have been accepted; amount $25,050. The highest tender, we learn, was $32,000; several ranged between $26,000 and $29,000. The tenders were not all published, only the successful parties.

CONFIRMATION.—On Thursday last his Lordship the Bishop of Toronto held confirmation services here, when forty candidates complied with the rite of the Episcopal Church. We understand his Lordship also confirmed about twelve at Lakefield, and also about twelve at St. Mark's Church, Otonabee.

The Wesleyan Methodist conference is being held in Toronto this week. The body reports in its last minutes, 545 ministers. The number attending this conference is about 350.

SUDDEN DEATH.

We deeply regret to have to record this week the sudden death of a respected citizen who has been cut down in the flower of manhood, under circumstances of a very painful nature. We allude to the demise of Thomas Dumble, jr., which took place at Harwood on Wednesday last the 19th inst. In company with his wife he took the cars on that day for Harwood, purposing to go to Mariners to pay the men engaged at the mines. He complained of feeling unwell, but did not apprehend anything serious till his arrival at Harwood, when, after repairing to Brady's Hotel, he was suddenly seized with a severe illness and died almost instantly. Deceased was generally beloved on account of his amiable and ostentatious character, and his loss is deeply felt by the general public as well as by his own family and friends, to whom the stroke is a very painful one.—Cobourg Sun.

Deceased was a brother of our respected townsman, D. W. Dumble, Esq., Barrister, and was universally respected by all who knew him. We understand that disease of the heart was the cause of his sudden decease. Our deepest sympathies are with his family and friends in their painful bereavement.

The contract for the erection of the proposed new Deaf and Dumb Asylum at Belleville, has been awarded to Messrs. G. W. & T. L. Kempster, builders, of Hamilton. The contract for the erection of the new Lunatic Asylum at London, was awarded at the same time to a firm in Brantford. It is expected that Messrs. Beckett and Co., of Hamilton, will obtain the contract for the iron work. The amount of the contract is $49,300, not including plumbing.

NIPISSING RAILWAY.—Up to Saturday last $129,000 of stock had been taken up for the Toronto and Nipissing Railway. The Toronto papers say only $31,000 more is needed, and that this will be had in a few days. To the Toronto, Grey and Bruce Railway $170,000 is subscribed; $130 more is still required, but there is confidence that it will soon be forthcoming.

We have been informed that the unknown young fellow around Allandale, lately "docked" some over zealous swain who had come to that place to remove the better half of some unfortunate (?) husband who had lost her confidence and affections.

BELMONT IRON.—The Cobourg Sun says that over 4,000 tons of iron have already gone to the land of the Republic this season. Fifty new dumping cars are soon to be placed on the road.

MILITARY SCHOOL.—We notice with pleasure that Mr. John Londerville, of Keene, has passed a second-class certificate at the Military School, Toronto, last week.

An appeal was received from John Bell against the number of days statute labor for which he was assessed, and several resident owners of village lots were also present and made complaint against their assessment in regard to statute labor. The Court was of opinion that they would not be justified, according to the provisions of the statute in that case made and provided, in altering the same, consequently the assessment was confirmed.

After some minor alterations having been made in the Roll at the request of persons present, it was moved by Mr. Corbutt and seconded by Mr. Montgomery, That as the Peterboro and Chemong Railway Company had not furnished the Clerk with the statement of their property required by law, and the Assessor had not been able to obtain the necessary information, this Court do now adjourn.—Carried.

The Assessor stated that he had reduced the assessment of the mill property of Campbell & Co. $3500 during the present year, and that during the years 1868 and 1869, William Snyder's mill property had been reduced nearly a similar sum, and that he considered the water privilege, dams &c., belonging to said property of considerable value. The assessment was confirmed.

THE GALT REVIVAL.

Our readers have been made acquainted with as much of the Galt Revival as has come to us through our exchanges, and we have no doubt but that some of our readers were already with the words attributed to the Rev. Mr. Barrie, of Eramosa, reported as follows:—

"The Rev. Mr. Barrie, of Eramosa, next addressed the Presbytery by stating that he was at first for peace, but he the language of Satan he was now for war. We must go into the whole case, he remarked, for it involved serious error in doctrine, which if allowed to develope itself, would subvert the [illegible] foundations of the faith, and reduce a standing ministry to a mere expediency. Already some have said, while such a state of affairs exist, we will not give another farthing to Knox's while we can get a minister for nothing."

We have not the pleasure of being acquainted with Mr. Barrie of Eramosa, but we cannot help thinking that his words rather somewhat of the noted character who is said to have used them first. The minister of the Gospel who could stand up and oppose the work of grace at Galt for fear of his salary, deserves a high rank among the ministers of the Author of peace on earth and good will to men.

We clip the following from a correspondent to the Montreal Witness, as a proof of the advantages to the Presbyterian Church of Galt, and as a proof of the work of the Spirit amongst the people of that locality:—

THE OBSERVANCE OF THE LORD'S SUPPER AT GALT.

(To the Editor of the Daily Witness.)

SIR,—I have been in connection with the congregation of Knox's Church, Galt, from its formation. I have always felt the deepest interest in its scriptural and temporal prosperity. Under its first venerable pastor, John Bayne, D. D., I was awakened to a sense of my lost state as a sinner before God, and I was directed to the Lamb of God as my only Saviour. As I then thought I closed with him as my eternal salvation. Twenty-four years have passed away since then, during which time I have had the most bitter experience of the power of sin and Satan over me, which led me afterwards to question whether I was ever converted or not.

For the greater part of the time referred to, I lived under the searching and powerful ministry of Dr. Bayne, and no man could think more of that worthy divine than I did, and perhaps not one now living of the congregation over whom he was pastor, cherishes sweeter or tenderer memories of him than the writer of these lines. I never heard any one describe as he could do man's lost and ruined state by nature, and the way of recovery by Jesus Christ. The sufferings, death, glorious resurrection, ascension and second coming of our Redeemer, the work and offices of the holy Spirit; the duties and privileges of God's own dear children; the blessedness of heaven, and the dreadfulness of hell. And yet, I freely confess I never understood the way of salvation in its trustful simplicity, and in its adaptation to my spiritual wants as a poor helpless, hell-deserving sinner, until I heard the gospel preached by D. Russell, Carroll, and the Rev. J. K. Smith, during the last nine months of his residence in the highly favored town of Galt. I give all the glory and praise to the holy spirit of God who taught his servants to preach the unsearchable riches of Christ, in so simple, clear and faithful a manner, and who opened the eyes of my understanding to see Christ as my Saviour now and forever. "Thanks be unto God for this unspeakable gift."

Mr. Editor, I want the readers of the Witness to understand and believe that my experience in reference to the power of the Gospel during the last nine months of the revival, is the experience of hundreds of old and young, rich and poor, in and around Galt.

For the last six weeks our esteemed pastor Rev. J. K. Smith, has been meeting with his large communicant class, and preaching them in the truths of the gospel, preparatory to their uniting with the Church by a profession of the faith. Last Lord's day the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was dispensed in Knox's Church, when 210 united with that Church—132 by profession of their faith, and 78 by certificate. There who in all these cases no compulsion, no solicitation on the part of parents or pastor, but simply love to Jesus, and a deep sense of duty in standing up for truth, and as witnesses to and of the gracious work of God's Spirit in them and others.

The communion season on this occasion in connection with this large congregation, has been the most solemn and interesting ever held in Galt, or perhaps in Canada. The Rev. Mr. Smith has now the largest and the heaviest charge of any minister in the Dominion, but the charge is made lighter from several good considerations. He has the blessed presence of Christ with him, which he realizes. He is surrounded with and supported by a large staff of God-fearing elders, and he is loved, respected, supported and prayed for by a gospel-loving, and gospel-living intelligent people.

My communication would be incomplete if I did not refer to the painful circumstance Mr. Smith had on this memorable sacramental occasion.

The Rev. Mr. Ball, of Guelph, preached on Thursday morning. Rev. Mr. Geary, of Elora, in the evening. Both services were very suitable and impressive. On Friday at a well attended prayer meeting five adults were baptised, and on Saturday the Rev. Mr. Laird of Hamilton preached an excellent discourse from the text "be ye filled with the spirit." After the sermon Mr. Smith read over the names of those joining with the Church to the number of 210, who in the greatest order, and with the deepest solemnity passed before the pulpit receiving from the pastor in the name of the session the right hand of fellowship, and a token of admission to the Lord's Table. After that Mr. Smith addressed them in the most affectionate and faithful manner.

At a meeting of the Protection Fire Company No. 1, held in Firemen's Hall, Peterborough, on Tuesday evening, June 1st, 1869, Capt. J. O'Donnell in the chair, the following resolution was adopted:—Moved by Peter Hamilton, seconded by George Johnston, that the thanks of the Company be tendered to A. W. Kemp, Esq., for the handsome donation of Ten dollars to the [illegible]

[illegible] H

A [illegible] was committed to Whitby Gaol on Saturday morning last, between sixty and seventy of clock. The thief or thieves entered the dwelling house of Mr. J. P. Gorman, merchant, leaving ground tobacco in his bedroom. They made themselves free with his keg, a watch and some small change, then proceeded to the store, broke in and opened the safe, and took therefrom a cash box containing about $120. Other articles were taken to the value of $200. Mr. Thomas Masters', tailor, house was also visited, and a quantity of clothing and about $20 in cash taken. They also robbed the house of Mr. Gratton, where they helped themselves to a free treat in the shape of beer. An entrance into other houses was attempted but without success. No clue to the perpetrators has been found as yet.

The store of Thos. Eyres, Esq., Millbrook, was entered last week and about $200 worth of goods taken. The same night the residence of Mr. Mollain, of Millbrook, was entered, his pants taken from beside his bed and about $15 taken out of the pockets. There was a large sum under the cushion of the chair which they did not get. We have also been informed that the store of Mr. Cowan, of Baltimore, was lately entered at night and considerable goods, &c., taken.

There are warnings to others to secure their doors. There are leaflets enough in every direction to induce honest people to use precautions in protecting their property. This new law will be of good service in finding out how some earn their livelihood.

A Canadian named Edward Stephenson, committed suicide on Monday night in Chicago. A letter was found on his person addressed to the brother of his landlay which was as follows:

"Chicago, May 24. Dear Sir: Will you be kind enough to put some sort of a coffin about me, and lay me in a grave somewhere. Send a copy of the verdict of the coroner, of a certified copy of my death to R. L. Stephenson, Perth, County of Lanark, Ontario, Dominion of Canada, via R. & O. R. R. He will pay all expenses which you may incur. The certificate of my death is necessary, as my life is insured for a large sum of money. The vessel which took my two little girls away to-night, snapped the last link which bound me to this world. I changed my mind, and determined to go on a different journey to that which I first contemplated. Excuse the trouble I must give you, and believe me truly yours,

E. STEPHENSON.

P. S.—Please keep all as quiet as you can. If you send the documents mentioned above, you may rest assured that you will be amply remunerated for any trouble you may be at.

The Late James Calcutt, Esq.

From the Cobourg Sentinel.

In this town on Tuesday, 18th inst., James Calcutt, a native of Queens County, Ireland, and one of the first settlers and most respected citizens of Cobourg, aged 77 years.

Death has of late been very busy with the old residents of our good town, and amongst his late victims there is none more worthy of notice, as a slight tribute of respect, than the late James Calcutt, Esq., one of the oldest and most respected citizens of Cobourg—in short, one of the architects and directors of Cobourg's destiny, in her early days. Mr. Calcutt was the descendant of one of those English families who followed the lead of Cromwell to Ireland in 1649, and who settled there, and afterwards became more Irish, if possible, than the Irish themselves. He was born at Derrycannon, near Mountrath, in the Queens County, where his ancestors had settled, on the 23rd of March, 1792. He emigrated to America and settled in Cobourg in 1832, and as he had been largely engaged in the Brewing and Distilling business in the old country, he resolved to continue in the country the same business. Having brought with him considerable cash capital, he purchased that beautiful property fronting on Lake Ontario in in our town which has since been recognized as the "Calcutt property." On this he erected a splendid mansion, which was one of the first brick buildings erected in Cobourg; he also erected a brewery, distillery, malt houses and kilns, office, workshops, stone flour mill, &c., &c. The premises were the most complete of any of the kind for the manufacture of whisky and beer, and so noted were the liquors produced at this manufactory, that "Calcutt's Malt," "Calcutt's Toddy Whisky," and "Calcutt's Ale," were famous throughout the neighboring States and Canada. Mr. Calcutt was the first man to introduce the cash system in his business transactions, and no workman was allowed to leave his premises on Saturday night without his week's wag es in his pockets; and so kind and indulgent was he to those in his employ that many of his servants and workmen in the old country either came with him or followed him here and enjoyed years of steady and remunerative employment under him in Cobourg. Few men have contributed more in their day to build up Cobourg than the subject of this brief notice, and if all our leading men had have been actuated by similar motives of honesty and fair dealing, we would have more room to rejoice over our position to-day than we have. In all his dealings, he was scrupulously honest, from the largest to the smallest transactions, and he endeavored as a leading citizen to give a tone of fairness to every importan event in our municipal history. He was, much against his own wishes, induced to occupy a seat in the old Board of Police and afterwards in the first Town Council. Latterly he had retired from active life, and the business of "Calcutt's Brewery" has been carried on by his fourth son, Kingsley, who will, we believe continue to carry on the business. He was twice married, his fire wife being the youngest daughter of the late William Shannon, Esq., of Mountmellick, Queen County, Ireland, to whom he was married in 1817, and by whom he had five sons and three daughters, all of whom survive him but two of the daughters. She died in Cobourg in 1852. His second wife was Miss Boyce, of Prince Edward, by whom he had three daughters, who survive him. He was a consistent member of the Church of England but was most liberal minded, kind and charitable to people of all denominations.

The following appears in the Toronto Telegraph of yesterday:—

The following is a synopsis of the report of the Printing Committee: For paper, Castle Bros, is the lowest tender, but their samples were rejected before the tenders were opened. Barber Bros., of Georgetown, were the lowest; Hunter, Rose & Co., higher by $40, but for much better paper. The latter tender was accepted.

For printing, J. S. Taylor, of the Ottawa Citizen, had the lowest tender. The committee divided on a division of eight to seven, and agreed to accept Hunter, Rose & Co.'s, which was $1,775 per annum higher.

On average annual work for binding, Hunter Rose & Co.'s was the lowest tender. It was accepted, being over $300 under Mortimer's.

The decision of the Committee respecting printing will be contested in the House.

It is got likely that the report of the Committee on Printing will be discussed in the House before Monday or Tuesday next.

The current belief about the lobbies of the House is, that Mr. Cameron's amendment to Mr. Holton's amendment to the Government Banking scheme will carry, and no vote be taken on the scheme this session.

The Board of Trustees met on Wednesday evening. Present—Messrs. Dunbie, Stevenson, Hobbs, Landy, Tosh, Coulter, Cameron and Dunlop.

The Minutes of previous meeting were read and confirmed.

A Committee was appointed to take steps to find Rattan's heating and ventilating apparatus, and to report at next meeting.

An application from Miss Hatton for increase of salary was read, and the Secretary was instructed to inform her that owing to increased expenditure contemplated, the Board could not entertain the application.

Mr. Landy reported on behalf of the Committee appointed to report on a school site for a primary school.

After discussion a Committee was appointed to get plans for a primary school-house, to be erected on the Union School site.

PERSONAL.—Mr. Thom, Principal of the Norwood Grammar School, has resigned his charge in Norwood to take the oversight of the Berlin Grammar School, at an increased salary, $800.

Mr. John Moore, who lately graduated at Victoria College with honors, has received the offer of the Norwood School, with a salary of $650.

THE BAND.—We have been requested to state that, commencing this evening and continuing every Thursday evening, weather permitting, the Band will discourse sweet music on the Court House Grounds.

HAMILTON, June 1.—The Synod of the Presbyterian Church of Canada in connection with the Church of Scotland met and was constituted to-night. The Rev. John Jenkins, D. D., of Montreal, was chosen Moderator. Rev. G. D. Ferguson, Rev. Dr. Bereley, and Rev. Kenneth Mackenzie were re-elected Trustees of Queen's College.

It is very painful to see so many public men whose desires compel them to sacrifice their health to the interests of their profession and the public. How many clergymen there are whose usefulness is marred by diseases of the larynx and bronchia! How many public men there are who feel that they could command the masses much better if they had the strength of lungs and ample voice which were so useful to them at the beginning of their career! And yet these misfortunes may be reminded by recourse to the Great Shoshonees Remedy, now for sale by all druggists.

THE LUMBER TRADE.—We cannot deny that we are suffering severely in our lumber regions for want of a market for coarse lumber. The Americans, on account of their troubles have not made any purchase in the Provinces the past year, and being able to compete with the North of Europe we can't ship it to England, but serious as this matter is, it is gratifying to know that the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" is a great favorite among our Lumbermen, for curing coughs, sudden colds, cramps in the stomach, burns, bruises, frost-bites, chilblains, &c., and they do not depend upon a foreign market for it, it is sold by all Medicine Dealers at 25 cts per bottle.

The discovery of many copies of the Holy Scriptures has established the purity of the text of the sacred law; the discovery of the laws of Motion and Gravitation has almost perfected Mechanical Philosophy; the discovery of the circulation of the blood has accomplished in Spatomy what is at last accomplished in Hygeine by the Great Shoshonees Remedy, which has so often checked the inroad of those lung diseases of the throat which Improvidence and exposure have united to make so common.

Don't Know What to Do. We sometimes hear persons say, 'my horse is sadly out of condition, and I cannot tell either what is the matter with him, or how to get him into better order;' they appear to be ignorant of the fact that there is within their reach a remedy safe, sure, and effectual in all cases. Many persons who deal in horses can large quantities of it, and testify that its effects are most satisfactory. One horse dealer informs us that his horses' condition and appearance are so much improved by its use that they sell more rapidly and for higher prices. The article is 'Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy.' Nothing else is equal to it for the same purpose. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers.

HORSE SENSE.—The lives of thousands of horses have been saved during the past year, and the credit is due to "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy." This preparation is being extensively used, and exacts from all the highest praise. Nothing of the kind has ever before been half as successful or given such universal satisfaction; it cannot be equalled. We can confidently recommend it, and would advise all who own horses to keep a supply of it on hand—it may be the means of saving your horse's life. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co., is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., Proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine Dealers.

To ——K.

We have met, we have loved, we have parted,
As others have done oft' before,
And I ever will prove as true-hearted
As when we were pledged in the yore.

The joys of the world cannot cover
The links that have bound thee to me,
And the smile of another can never
Banish my dreaming of thee.

Hoping, longing, dreaming and fearing;
Heeding not the joys all around;
Still craving in the future a gleaming,
A light o'er my pathway is found.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentlemen:—"I had a negro man who was worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad burning log, and was useless for over a year. I tried everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."

J. T. DOWNING.

Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1859.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensable article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."

J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for America, Wells, Fargo's and Harnden's Express.

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

ED. SEELY."

Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 1, 1863.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beats, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co. over the top. No other has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look sharp!

O' tea and scandal, strong and sweet,
Her bluid is made.

Jist tak' a pattern by the flea,
That has his bite, then waits a wee,
Afore he wets his lither o'e,
Or leaps about;
And pair thing's aye prepar'd to dee,
When he's feed out.

Or else the decent, sensie bug,
Wha' keeps himsel' sae douce and snug,
An's no aye roamin' in yer leg
His blasted aim,
But jist lies doon like ony dog
And says his pray'rs.

But ye, ye grinin', sneerkin' braggart,
Ye greedy, illform'd suckin' blackguard,
Wi' body skinny, long and haggard,
And blindy fang,
For a' yer boastin', blowin' swagger,
I'll stop yer mang.

So dinna fash yersel' to stay,
And waste yer time wi' me thae day—
I tell ye, frein', jist gang yer way,
Or mind yer beid
Ane skelp frae me wad stop yer play,
And strike ye deid.

GO TO THE

EXAMINER OFFICE.

To Messrs. CHAMBERLAIN & Sons, Canboro', P.O County of Lincoln, Ontario, Canada.

Keene, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th, 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1867 I was taken with a disturbance of the ancles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and so up to my hips, until I became so lame that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1867, which I was induced to try the great Canadian remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my bowels; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I then took two bottles of the Shaker Extract Remedy, and two boxes of the pills and I can cheerfully recommend it to both. I began gradually to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a matter of perfect hope. The case of mine was but a repeated one, well known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one inclined to doubt, I have only to say try the Shakerdoctor's remedy; I believe it will cure you.

MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of possibly and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shakerdoctor's Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

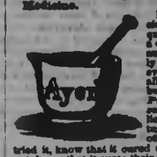
Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicine.



Perhaps no one medicine is so universally required by everybody as a cathartic, nor was ever any believed by universal consent to be so safe, in every country and among all classes, as this mild but efficient purgative Pill. The obvious reason is, that is a more reliable remedy than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it cured them; those who have not, know that it cures their neighbors and friends, and all know that what it does once it does always—that it never fails through any fault or imperfection in its composition. We have thousands upon thousands of certificates of their remarkable cures of the following complaints, but such cures are known in every neighborhood, and we need not publish them. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates; containing neither calomel or any deleterious drug, they may be taken with safety by anybody. Their sugar coating preserves them ever fresh and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable, no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring them to regular action in health, and by correcting wherever they exist, such derangements as are the cause of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Lassitude and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone.

For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Bilious Colic, Dysentery or Diarrhœa, Bilious Fever, Inflammation of the Stomach, Sick Headache, Jaundice and Blotches on the Skin, these remedies should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Palpitation of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Breast and Loins, they should be continuously taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change these complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression a large dose should be taken as it quickly removes the obstruction by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as this combination of pectoral remedies has upon a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a provision against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or do more than assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, or Bilious Fever. Any and all of the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

As its name implies, it does Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, Mercury, Zinc, nor any other mineral or poisonous substance, its exhibition to the most infirm is entirely safe. The number and importance of its cures in the agueafflicted districts is literally beyond account, and we believe without a parallel in the history of Ague medicine. Our pride is gratified by the extraordinary tributes we receive of the radical cures effected in obstinate cases, and where other remedies had wholly failed.

Unacclimated persons, either resident in, or travelling through miasmatic localities, will be protected by taking the AGUE CURE daily.

For Liver Complaints, arising from torpidity of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the Liver into healthy activity.

For Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints, it is an excellent remedy, producing many truly remarkable cures, where other medicines had failed.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & Co., Practical and Analytical Chemists, Lowell, Mass., and sold all round the world.

Poetry.

MAY EVENING.

BY WILLIAM CULLEN BRYANT.

The breath of spring-time at this twilight hour
Comes through the gathering glooms,
And bears the stolen sweets of many a flower
Into the silent rooms.

Where hast thou wandered, gentle gale, to find
The perfumes thou dost bring?
By brooks that through the waking meadows wind,
Or brink of rushy spring?

Or woodside, where, 'n little companies,
The early wild flowers rise,
Or sheltered lawn, where, 'mid encircling trees,
May's warmest sunshine lies?

Now sleeps the humming bird, that, in the sun
Wandered from bloom to bloom;
Now, too, the weary bee, his day's work done
Rests in his waxen room.

Now every hovering insect to his place
Beneath the leaves hath flown;
And through the long night hours, the flowery race
Are left to thee alone.

O'er the pale blossoms of the sassafras,
And o'er the spice-bush spray,
Among the opening buds, thy breathing pass
And come embalmed away.

Yet there is sadness in thy soft caress,
Wind of the blooming year!
The gentle presence, that was wont to bless
Thy coming is not here.

Go then, and yet I bid thee not repair,
Thy gathered sweets to shed,
Where pine and willow, in the evening air,
Sigh o'er her hurried dead.

Refresh the languid student pausing o'er
The learned page apart,
And he shall turn to con his task once more
With an encouraged heart.

Bear thou promise, from the fragrant sward
To him who tills the land,
Of springing harvests that shall yet reward
The labours of his hand.

Pass on to homes where cheerful voices sound,
And cheerful looks are cast,
And where thou wakest in thine airy round,
No sorrow of the past.

And whisper everywhere, that earth renews
Her beautiful array,
Amid the darkness and gathering dews,
For the return of day.

Selections.

NELLIE'S REPENTANCE.

'I will not, Norman!'—and Nellie Wilde brought her little foot down upon the carpet with a force which shook all her bright golden hair from under its little lace morning cap; and sent it rolling in golden shimmering waves over her shoulders.

There was a light in her blue eyes which her husband had never before seen there; and the fresh red lips which had always greeted him with smiles were parted over the white teeth with an expression of unmistakable scorn.

'It is cruel and exacting of you, Norman, when you know how much, how very much I like Mrs. May, and how fond she is of me. It is selfish of you to ask me to give up the society of my best friend, just to gratify a capricious whim of yours.

And Mrs. Wilde burst into a flood of tears.

It was not in Norman Wilde's nature to see a woman's tears, unmoved. It is scarcely that of any man, when the tears are that of his own wife, and that wife one so fondly loved and tenderly cherished as Nellie. His habitually grave and quiet voice was full of troubled tenderness now, as he bent over her, and said in tones of gentle remonstrance, "Nellie!"

'Don't, Norman!' was the petish answer, as she turned away from the caressing touch of her hand upon the soft golden hair. 'I am not a child to be tyrannized over one moment, and coaxed and petted into good humour the next.

Selfish, cruel, tyrannical! It was too much.

Mr. Wilde took his hat with that indescribable air which injured husbands know so well how to assume, and left the room. With a slow step he passed down the stairs and into the street.

Was it wrong, he asked himself, for him to wish that bright young life to gladden his quiet home, and diffuse the sunshine of her buoyant spirits over his graver maturer life? For though there was a difference of but ten years in their respective ages, many cares had made Norman Wilde older at twenty-seven than most men of thirty-five. He thought of it now with something like contempt for himself. He might have known that he could never make her happy; he, with a gravity of demeanor that was almost sternness; and she, with her joyous, loving disposition, for Nellie was good tempered and affectionate generally, in spite of her wilfulness.

But he had not meant to be tyrannical. No, no; he loved his wife too well for that. Many fair women had looked kindly upon the great lawyer, the wealthy Mr. Wilde. Noble heads had dropped, and fair cheeks flushed at his approach; but the childish Nellie, with her winning, demonstrative ways, undisciplined and ungovernable as she was, had drawn him to her by a strange, sweet fascination, which more beautiful and more intellectual women had failed to make any impression upon his heart. And after all his efforts to make her happy, she had treated his first request with such unreasonable, childish anger.

Something weightier than the great lawsuit of Hobart versus Langer was pressing upon the spirits of Norman Wilde, as he walked slowly down the street that bitter winter morning, and his head clerk Richards, to whom an honest lawyer was a paradox, and law a sublime mystery, thought, as he watched him from the office window, that some new legal stratagem must have taken possession of his brain to make him walk at that pace, when the thermometer stood twenty degrees below zero.

* * * * * *

'Ma'am,' said Kate, putting her head in at Nellie's door, 'Mrs. Lyon would like to see you directly, if it's quite convenient.'

'Very well, Kate.'

And Nellie after arranging her hair, and bathing her face, proceeded to her aunt's apartment.

'How do you feel this morning auntie?'

'Are you not well, Nellie?'

'Quite well, Auntie.'

'You are unhappy, Nellie?'

There was no answer, but Nellie's lips quivered, and two large tears gathered beneath the heavy drooping lashes, and rolled slowly down her cheeks.

'My dear child, I am surprised and grieved to see you thus. Can you not confide in me?'

'Oh, auntie, Norman is so selfish, so unkind.'

'Nellie, tell me one thing—have you quarrelled?'

'Yes.'

'Very cheerful, very contented, my child,' was the invalids reply, as she looked up into the innocent, girlish face that bent over her couch. 'I should be very ungrateful indeed, if, after all the affectionate care lavished upon me by my nephew and his wife, I should be otherwise.'

Some shadows resting upon the usually happy face, caught old Mrs. Lyon's attention. She loved Nellie dearly, not less for her loving kindness to her, than because she was the wife of her nephew, the only infallible mortal in Aunt Ruth's eyes, that the world contained.

'And parted in anger?'

'Yes'

'Go to him, my child, and be reconciled. If Norman has erred, he will see his fault; if you have, it is all the more fitting that you should seek a reconciliation.'

'Never!'

'Hush, Nellie; I will tell you a story, a true one, about a husband and wife who parted in anger, and never spoke to each other again. It is a terrible thing to anger those we love, Nellie. This man, whom I shall call Robert, was a proud man, grave and self possessed in his manners, commanding as a king should be, nobler than any king that ever lived, Nellie, and far, far handsomer. Some thought him stern, but there was one who never found him so; and, though he might have been cold to others, he was all love and tenderness to her.

'His wife, aunt?'

'Yes, Nellie. He loved her with a strength and depth of affection of which few men are capable. Why, he loved her with such passionate devotion, I could never see, for she was a wild, thoughtless girl, exacting and wilful; great faults they must have seemed to one as thoroughly self-disciplined as he was. Perhaps he divined what she never knew herself until afterwards, her deep love for him. They had been married but a few months. They had thus far been very happy, for he was, oh, so tender and thoughtful towards her, and she thought she had overcome her faults in her great happiness. They were not overcome, however. One morning he told her he was going away to Vernon, and should not be back for two or three days. Vernon was the place where she had always lived until her marriage, and her mother still resided there. She wished to go with him, but he told her it would be impossible. She persisted, and he refused, but without giving any reason. She then grew very angry at his immovable calmness, and said bitter, cutting words, that would have maddened a man less able to control his temper. But he controlled himself. This exasperated her still more, and she grew more sarcastic and provoking; but, though he grew pale with anger, he gave her not one angry word. She refused to say good-bye when he left for Vernon; and thus they parted, never to meet again on earth.

'Oh, Aunt Ruth!' whispered Nellie, with paling cheeks.

'After he had gone, her anger all died away, and she thought she would follow him and ask his forgiveness, for the thought of his calm, cold scorn nearly crazed her. She hastily put on her bonnet and cloak, and reached the station just as the train had gone. It was too late. Another train would leave in an hour, and she waited. She was afraid he would be angry with her for following him, and the day's ride was a slow torture. When she was once on her way, she grew nervous and frightened. When she arrived at Vernon it was dusk, and there was a crowd gathered around the station, seemingly under some strong excitement. A terrible fear of something, she knew not what, took possession of her as she stepped on the platform. She soon found out what had happened. A man on the other train, in stepping off, had, in his hurry, caught his foot, and fallen on the line. The train was in motion. Oh, Nellie! her repentance came too late!

There was an agony in Aunt Ruth's voice which flashed a sudden suspicion across Nellie's mind.

'He had heard that her mother was very ill with the small pox, then raging in Vernon. He did not wish to pain or frighten her with the news until he had ascertained the truth of the report. This was the reason he refused to let her accompany him; this was why he could give no reason for the refusal. Tender and forbearing to the last; and she—oh, how had she repaid him?

'And what became of his wife, auntie?'

She took the disease from which his care would have guarded her, and for long weeks lay balancing between life and death. She prayed for death; but her prayers were not answered. Some portion of her former strength came back to her, but health never. She has never left her couch since that terrible day; but, in the tender care of his nephew, who is as like him in disposition as in form and features she has found content.'

Nellie knew whose story she had been listening to.

'No wonder she loves Norman so much,' said the little wife to herself, as she wiped her tearful eyes, and stole out of the room.

* * * * * *

'A client, sir; a lady wishes to see you,' said Richards, as he put his head into the dusty office where Mr. Wilde sat leaning over a table covered with papers which were scattered about in lawyer-like confusion.

'Very well, Richards.'

And Mr. Wilde arose, and walked into the front office, where a little fur-muffled figure sat awaiting him. As he closed the door, Nellie sprang forward to meet him.

'Nellie!'

'Oh, Norman!' and she clung to him, sobbing. 'Forgive me! and I will never speak to Mrs. May again.

'She is a bad woman; not a fit associate for my little artless wife. I know this, else I would not have asked you to give her up. And you have come all this distance to see me about it! My little Nellie!'

And he kissed her fondly.

'Norman,'—and she clung closer, sobbing still,—'Oh I have suffered so much! Forgive me, and we never will part in anger again.'

'My own darling, never!'

And they never did. Through the long and happy years of married life which followed, not a word of unkindness or reproach passed the lips of either, and they often spoke of this happy termination to their first and last quarrel.

TO MY COUSIN IN AMERRIKY.

Peddle-lane, Ennishillen.

VERY DEAR ALMANTHA:—The grate divorce thrial of the State an' the Church is goin' on now in the West Munsther Coorthouse. There's a jury of about 650, an' a grate "bar," as they call it, on one side an' the other.

Counsellor Gladstone stated the case for plaintiff in a speech of about three hours and a half. He showed how bad the defendant had been, an' the bother she had given the plaintiff ever since they were married. But he didn't stick to that so much as to showin' the jury the sort of vardict they ought to bring in.

There wasn't much evidence given at that time; for the rule of the coort is to not go much into the matther till defendant's counsel states the case on that side. That was done on Thursday night by Counsellor Dizzy, one of the ablest pladers that ever stood at the bar of the house.—Says he—

Gentlemen, my illusthrious and most incomprahensible client is an ill-threated woman. I say this plaintiff in the case ought to have a wife. It's too late in the day for him now to thry an' keep bachelor's hall. What would he be, I'd like to know, without the blissed presence and holy smiles of my client sanctifyin' his days and purifyin' his nights? I say he'd be a baythen, just as he was afore. He'd stay out at night—he'd take too much punch—he'd go flirtin' an' foolin' about after the girls—he'd keep no Sunday. An' if divorce would be had for him in that way, it would be ten worses for him in another. For, if you grant the divorce that my larnt frend on the other side asks for, the two'll be enemies, an' my client'll be more than a match for the plaintiff. When they have a fallin' out, I believe he'll be in the right; but he wont be able for her. She'll get roun' the childther with her comeshesh, an' she'll thurn them agen the father; an' betwixt her an' them she'll keep him in hot watther. If she doesn't dhrive him to the madhouse. Look at his first wife, Miss Pope, that he divorced the time he married my client.—Hasn't she been a thorn in his big toe ever since? Hasn't she kep' the childther tormentin' an' collin' him nicknames from that day to this? She an' the present woman have been fightin' with one another, an' lightin' with him, till the poor bothered man has taken it into his head that it would be bethter for him to have no wife at all, but live a bachelor the rest of his days. He thinks if he was clear of the present wife, that nayther of them would bother him any more. But he's all wrong gentlemen; for the two would join thegither and ruinate him intirely. I ax you, for the plaintiff's own sake, to not grant the divorce. My client isn't fit to be a single woman—she'd be desp'rately dangerous—she'd put all sorts of mad notions into the heads of the childther. She's only fit to be kep' in the house with the sthrong han' of a husband to kapin' her down, an' now an' then givin' her a small taste of a knock-down, when she goes too far. If you let her lose, you'll destroy the plaintiff an' his family, body an' bones. Then, gentlemen, what my larnt frend axes you to do in the way of givin' a sep'rate mentainance to my client isn't fair at all. It isn't enough; an' you have no raysun to b'lieve that the childther'll keep her up. Besides, what you give her is sure to go to the lan'lord. He robbed her afore; he robbed the plaintiff's first wife; if you divorce my client, he'll rob her again; an' the misfortunat woman'll be dhriven to the poorhouse.

Counsellor Gregory—Gentlemen, I deny what the larnt counsel on the other side says—that men an' women like the parties to this shute aren't fit to live alone. I have been in Amerriky where there are people like them, an' they all live single in paice an' comfort. It's so in Canaydy; it's so in Austhralyy; it's so in the West Indys; an' why not so here?

Counsellor Jenkinson said a divorce would bring on less paice. So did Counsellor Broderick.

Counsellor Dillwyn said the marriage between the plaintiff an' defendant was only a left-handed one altogether all; an' when it didn't work well it ought to be broke up.

Counsellor Shaw, of Bandon, said he was one of the defendant's son's; but he b'lieved it would be bethter for his father an' mother both if they were sundhered.

Counsellor Cross — Gentlemen, what they're axin' you to do is just to desthroy the defendant. If you let her alone she'll be a good wife and mother, an' all 'll go on right.

Counsellor Fortescue showed how hard it was on the childther of the first wife, for the defendant to come in on the whole big family of them, an' take their mother's fortune an' lay it out on herself an' her two or three childther.

Dr. Ball, of Dublin, argy'd stiff for the defendant. He said that in Amerriky when people like the plaintiff an' defendant hired single, they didn't go on well. All the glory and power of the plaintiff was owin' to his havin' the defendant for a wife. He confessed that the plaintiff's first wife was dacently supported by her own childther; but he d'outied if the defendant could get along that way.

Counsellor Sullivan said it was a dayth to hear Dr. Ball talkin' on that side, when he had been so long on the other. He believed the defendant's own family would mentain her dacently, with what the jury might allow.

Counsellor Heygate, of Derry, said the lan'lord didn't want any of the defendant's money; but would rather she'd live with her man an' keep it. He didn't think the divorce would plaze the childther of the first wife.

Counsellor Gray, of Kilkenny,—Gentlemen of the jury, the rale question for you to consither is—"How is the bizness of the family to be carried on?" I say that while the defendant is misthress of the house it can't be carried on in pace or comfort.—The only way to do it is to put the defendant an' her weans on the same footin' with the first wife and her childther. The ladin' counsel for the defendant wanted to do that by marryin' the plaintiff back agen to the first wife, an' givin' him a third one—Miss Bluebonnet. I object to bigamy an' thrigamy; an' I say the only way to manage the house is to thurn the plaintiff into a bachelor! How did the defendant threate the step-childther, the first wife's weans? The bargin that she an' her man made with them at Limerick was scarcely made when she thurned roun (I suppose he was deep in cogsate with her at the time) an' made him break it—aye, made him lave his own childther to sthurve. What they had was taken from them; not one of them dar own a parch of groun'; not one of them dar go to school; not only one of them dare larn a trade or professhun—not so much as to be a tailyer. The larnt counsel from Jerooslem, that stated the defendant's case, said the lan'lord would rob her. The larnt counsel from Derry says the lan'lord wont take a pinsworth belongin' to her. I agree with my fren from Judea, who must have larnt law from Gamaliel, an' kep' company ever since with the Wandherin' Jew; for he knows everything an' a dale more.—What did the lan'lord do? In the marriage settlements of the plaintiff an' his wives, the wife was to have all the incomin's. Well, the lan'lord couthnived to put nine-tenths of that into his own pocket, lavin' her only the tenth of a tenth. In 1867 the wife's tenth would have been three million; but she got only a tenth part of that, the rest going to the lan'lord. Beside that tenth, the wife had a grate dale of lan' that was to be her own. But the lan'lord managed to get himself made tenant for ever of a grate dale of that lan'—tens of thousan's of acres—at a rent of from eleven pence to four shillin's a acre. Now, nearly all that property belong'd to the first wife, but she doesn't want it back. I don't ax either to have it given back to the present defendant that the lan'lord took it from (by the same token—afther takin' nine-tenths of her tenth he took a quarther of what she had left); but if he would only pay her a small intherest on it she'd be well mentained. Gentlemen, there's grate dissatisfaction in the family of the plaintiff. The childther of the defendant aren't all well plazed. Some of the childther of the first wife aren't willin' to stan' by this gran' thrial that's goin' on before the face of the worl', but want to thurn out agen daddy an' stepmother. Most of them, however, depind on your vardict for givin' them fair play. A vardict for divorce will lade to peace; if you don't give it, you'll find out there'll be no pace for the wicked.

Counsellor Crichton, of Enniskillen,—Gentlemen of the jury, I'm agen divorce, like the people of the anchint, legal an' mys atious death-an'-glory hole of a town that sent me here. O-hone! I don't undherstand by expayrience the buty an' the sweetness of matthrimony; but I'm sure it must be a lurly life. The people of Enniskillen are all for marryin', barrin' a few that would as soon be single again.

Counsellor Dowse, of Derry.—If you had been married, you'd never have got a brief for this thrial. It was bein' a bachelor an' goin' about among the girls got you in.

Counsellor Crichton,—I wondher, then, how my larnt an' ellygoint fren' got a brief from Derry at all. However, love an' matthrimony is part of an Irishman's creed, an' I ax if there's an Irishman on this jury that'll consent to a vardict for unmarryin'. We wouldn't let the Divorce Coort into our country, an' we wont have any divorce. But, gentlemen, if you give a vardict for the plaintiff, you ought to give the defendant bether fair play. You ought to give her an' her childther more to live on. There's one of them, poor Curate, the crather, the larnt counsel at the head of the Threasury isn't for thratin'well at all. Gentlemen, it's all nonsense to say the plaintiff was to give the life of a bachelor. Sure no man is mad enough to wish that! No, gentlemen, he must have a wife—he can't do without a wife—he will have a wife; an' if you divorce the defendant he'll take up with his first wife—the Scarlet Lady, as they call her in our parts. She's gettin' ready for a new weddin'. She's got a weddin' robe from Reance, a bridal vale an' flowers from the Anglican shop, an', as she intends to ware the britches, she has ordhered a pair of buckskins from Sam M'Comas, of Dublin.

Counsellor Miall, from Voluntary Hall, made a speech agen the defendant.

Counsellor Nothcote, of Ascendancy Terrace, joked a while agen the plaintiff.

Counsellor Bright (only lately made a Queen's Counsel)—Gentlemen of the grand coort jury that the worl' ever saw, you are sitting to decide one of the most important cases that ever took up the attention of men. You know that from the first time I ever fingered a brief, or opened my lips in a public coort, I have spoken agen such marriages as that of the plaintiff an' defendant in this case; so you wont wondher at my spakin' now. The larnt counsel from Jerooslem, that stated the defendant's case, objects to any change in the way of life between her an' my client. But what did he do in this very coort afore we got the vardict that made him move the coort afore for a new thrial—what did he do? Why, he, an' the ladin counsel engaged with him, wanted to give the plaintiff two wives more, hopin' that would make him bether content with the one he has. I agree with the larnt gentlemen that objects to thrigamy. I object to any gamy at all between such people as the plaintiff an' defendant. I dont want him to live single. Let him go an' marry Miss Economy, or Miss Pace, or Miss Industry, or any of the fine girls that the worl's full of. But, I say, separate him from the one that he's hatin', an' that's harmin' him. Has she been a useful wife to the plaintiff? Has she brought them up in her own way of thinkin', an' thrained them as her husband wanted? I say—you say—the wide worl', over which these unhappy stepchildhher are scatther'd, as far as win's can blow an' waves can row', all say "No" to these questions. Has she been a good mother to her own childther? I say "No" again. She has brought them up to fight like a litther of pups with their step-brothers an' sisthers. Some say it was none of her business to bring up her husband's childther, or educate them at all. What was her business, then? was it merely to get the money at the marriage settlement? What did the plaintiff marry her for, if it wasn't to do the work of a wife in his family? an', if she hasn't done that, why should she not be divorced? Some say, if you do that she'll stharve. Why should she stharve more than others that ern their own livin'? Don't tell me that her childther, the best off in the whole counthry, will ever let their mother stharve. If they would, I'd see them a sheet jersey beyant Jerooslem, an' lend them in Jerryco. Gentlemen of the jury, I'm not blamin' the defendant as a woman; only as a wife for the plaintiff. An' I say this, that, if his family have gone wrong—if there's no pace among them—if they're scatther'd the whole worl' over, sarchin' for the life they couldn't get at home—if, in all the lan's to wheel, the wreck of that miserable family has dhriven them, they are four' batin' an' cursin' the plaintiff, it's his own fault, more than hers. He never made her do her duty as a wife; he made her the fool an' tool of his thricks an whigmaleeries. Gentlemen of the jury, separate them; for they never were made to go thegither. I'm now spakin' for both their sakes, an' more for hers than his. She's too high-born to be his wife. Separate them, and let her become what she was born to be, the perfection of beauty and joy of the whole earth, fair as the moon, clear as the sun the light life and glory of the world. She has been pulled down from her own pure height; let her rise again. She has been tied to the car of politics, and dragged in the dust of deceit; cut the rope, an' let her up. Her marriage was unholy an' unblessed, an' it has buried her. She has, tied an' gaspin' in the tomb that that marriage has built for her; but there's life in her yet—oh, there's life in her yet! Divorce her, an' you may bring back the joy, the beauty, the glory and the power of her youth. I adjure you, I conjure you, by her glorious birth, by her immortal nature, by her unspeakable dignity uncover her tomb—dash down its walls—let the Lazarus Church come forth. Drag off her State bandages, loose her bad limbs, free her bound hands—tear the rags off her—cut the lyings from her. In the name of policy and religion, in the name of man and his Maker, in the name of time and eternity—loose her, and let her go. Let her go—on her mission of peace, her mission of freedom, her mission of humanity—her healing, holy, heavenly mission—unshackled and unshrouded by the grave-clothes of the State. Wedded to the plaintiff, she forgot that mission, and, in a sense more wail-worthy than that of the poet,

"To many gave up what was meant for mankind."

Break that union, free her from its degrading and paralysing thraldom, let her go forth in the path of her destiny, with healing in her steps, with holiness in her presence, with the moral desert bursting into bloom as she breathes on it. The history of the past, with all its crimes and blunders, its good and evil, its sorrow, sin, and anarchy, calls on you to free her. The souls that are to come appeal to you from the depths of the future, and adjure you by their hopes to free her. The light of revelation, flashed down from the moral sun to make known her mission, demands that you shall free her. I cease to argue, I cease to entreat; but, by the stupendous and eternal object of her being, which is forgotten, thwarted, trampled out of sight by this hideous and unhallowed union, I demand a verdict that will set her free. I demand a verdict that will set her right before the world. I demand a verdict that will justify her before heaven and futurity. For her sake, for the sake of time and of eternal duration, I close with a command—loose her, and let her go!

After that bit of spakin' nobody else dar'd to make a speech that night. But they were at it again, an' some fine speeches were made on both sides. Counsellor Gladstone finish'd with a gran' burst for divorce. That was this blissed Wensdhy mornin';

The War in New Zealand.

FURTHER ATROCITIES BY THE MAORIES.

The Melbourne Argus gives some additional details as to the war in New Zealand. Though the rebels have become much less formidable, the native war in New Zealand is not yet at an end. That troublesome rebel Te Kooti, who was defeated at Ngatipa, and afterwards reported as killed, has again appeared, and has produced a good deal of mischief. After accomplishing the murder of Mr. Pitcairn, a surveyor, he tried to take Ruapuraha, but was repulsed with a loss of forty-five men, the garrison loss being only twelve. He also attacked the house of a Frenchman named Guerin, slaughtering all the inmates except one. Subsequently he burnt the village of Whekarane, including the Catholic Mission and the European houses. There is a small force under Major Mair in the field, but it is hardly strong enough to face the enemy. The news from the west cost is more encouraging. On the 13th March, Colonel Whitmore, with a force of about 400 men, attacked the Camp of Tito Kowaru, the leader of the insurrection on that side of the island, and after a sharp fight completely routed the enemy. The attack was commenced in the early morning under cover of a dense fog, and the firing at one of their sentries was the first warning the Maories had. About 400 of them in a state of nudity, and carrying nothing but their guns and pouches, rushed into the open ground, but were met by such a tremendous fire that they dropped down as quickly as they could into a steep wooded gully. A terrific close fire was then kept up for an hour, at the end of which time the mist rose. The men then fairly took to the bush, and fought from tree to tree with a valour never surpassed. For three long hours furious fighting was kept up in that way. The Hauhaus tried to climb the trees, but were quickly brought down, the women in the meantime carrying off the dead in the midst of the heaviest fire, their cries being terrible. There was no shrinking among our men. At the end of four hours, the Hauhaus had retreated through the dense undergrowth, leaving the bush fairly in our hand. Colonel Whitmore had sent Lieut.-Colonel St. John up the opposite bank of the river to Gentle Annie, which prevented the enemy from crossing there, and he was consequently forced back, with Kemp's Volunteers following him up closely. All behaved equally well—the armed constabulary, the Arawas, and Kemp's men. All the Maori clothing was captured, as well as guns, tomahawks, revolvers, money, tents, axes, spades, and shovels—in fact, the whole of the enemy's baggage. Seven dead Hau-haus were found, and two women were made prisoners. The attack was planned with consummate skill, and carried out without a single mistake, the men being thoroughly under command during the whole of the engagement. On the side of the attacking force one man was killed and thirteen wounded. Colonel Whitmore is in active pursuit of the fugitives, with the view of preventing their escape into the fastnesses of the interior.

Marine Disaster—Over Thirty Lives Lost.

Quebec, May 22.

The chief mate of the Aberdeen, wrecked with the Secties on Cariboo, Reef, and the only survivor of both crews, gives the following heartrending account of the loss of these two old Quebec traders:—We were coming up the Gulf bound for Quebec. The vessels were a short distance, a mile or two, from each other. We had experienced pretty rough weather, which became worse. A perfect hurricane arose. We attempted to run before it; but soon our rigging became damaged so badly that, with such a gale blowing the vessels could not be managed. They were carried along by the storm, until at last we struck on Cariboo Reef. We lodged there, and a short time after such a heavy sea broke on board, smashed the boat to pieces, and washed us all down to the main deck. When we all got forward the mate's leg and ribs, on the right side, were broken, and the limbs of seven more of the crew, were broken.—The weather was very cold. We then constructed a raft of the deck planks, as they were washed forward. Then the foremost went. We were then fifteen souls clinging to the bowsprit. Then with a short prayer commending ourselves to the glory of God, the bowsprit went, and all hands with it.—After I got to the surface, a man caught me by the leg and hauled me under, by which means he raised himself and let me go. When I got up, I caught a piece of bulwark about 3feet 4 inches in length. A short time afterwards I got hold of a deck beam which floated me.

I got to the rock, when, through some accident, my piece of wood turned round and put me up before it, and fell very heavily three or four times on my breast, and fairly disabled me; but I managed to crawl clear of it, and tried to get on my feet, but had not strength to stand. The blood was running down my face. I tried too crawl on my hands and knees, but my senses were leaving me, when two men came running down and carried me in their arms to their cabin, where they treated me very kindly and put me to bed, where I slept for three hours, and awaked very greatly refreshed. I inquired if any more people had come on shore. They said "no." I asked if there were any more people from the other ship. They said no. They said there were none come ashore but me. I put on some clothes against the people's will, and went down among the rocks to see if I could see any of my shipmates; but there was not a sign of any of them. The wreck was lying dry among the rocks, in pieces. About 32 men perished. At 1:30 we struck, and about a quarter past four I was carried into the kind Canadians' cabin, where every attention was paid to me by them.

Food Prospects in England.

The Pall Mall Gazette, in reviving this subject finds that there has been a gradual reduction of prices for some time back, and thinks that the tendency is likely to continue. The growing wheats generally present a favourable appearance in France, and when bread is plentiful in France it is cheap in Europe. In England, also, the appearance of the fields is encouraging, and there is now the promise of abundant grain as well as green crops. Further, the great sums paid for Hungarian wheat during the last two or three years have given an apparently enduring stimulous to Hungarian Agriculture, so that the deliveries of wheat from Hungary may be expected to continue large. The extension of railway communication in Russia must favor the exportation of wheat from that country, while the contemplated abolition of the 1s. duty now levied on corn imported in the United Kingdom must have the effect of rendering foreign supplies generally 1s. per quarter cheaper. Everything, then, promises a continuance of cheap bread. The editor adds that, of course, a war with the United States would very much alter the aspect of affairs, as last year the importation of food from America amounted to one-fifth of the total importations.

The Weakness of Imperialty.

The "Economist" argues that the power wielded by Mr. Gladstone's majority in the present Parliament is the most complete answer that can be conceived to the commonest accusation against parliamentary government. It is said that parliamentary Government is inefficient, but Louis Napoleon cannot do what this majority can do. A despotic monarch does not know where he stands; he knows there is much prejudice opposed to him, but he cannot say how much; he cannot begin to remove that prejudice, for real vigorous discussion, it excites the energies he wants to lull, and excites the passions he desires to assuage. A great coherent majority cultivates a minority, and thinks no more of it; but to put it shortly, a despot neither knows what he has to outvote nor how he should outvote it.—He is fearful of minorities, for they may be stronger than he known; and he does not like to animate majorities, for they may soon become to strong for him to restrain them. The French Emperor could no more disestablish the Irish churches Mr. Gladstone is doing, than he could destroy protection as Sir R. Peel did. Whatever else may be said against England and the English Constitution, she has, and the Government in Europe.

MODERATE AND EXCESSIVE DRINKING.—Rev. W. Goodell thus declares in reference to the various shades of drinking:—"Which is most destructive of health and life, drunkenness or moderate drinking?—Most people will answer drunkenness. But what are the facts? A man may get beastly drunk—as some do—once a month vomit out the poison, sleep off the effects, and be sober all the rest of the month, drinking nothing till the fit comes on again. Such a man may do more business, do it better, preserve better health, and live longer than the 'moderate' drinker, who never gets drunk, never vomits out the poison, keeps it all within him, adding a little to it daily till it undermines his constitution, so that he readily falls a pray to all manner of diseases, without vitality enough to recover from them. He dies a moderate drinker, never suspected of intemperance, much less ranked among drunkards, yet losing his life in consequence of his 'moderate drinking. Scientific and experienced physicians entertain these views, and are of opinion that more than half of those who die in consequence of drinking alcoholic liquors die before they become confirmed and downright drunkards."—Herald of Health.

It is very painful to see so many public men whose desires compel them to sacrifice their health to the interests of their profession and the public. How many clergymen there are whose usefulness is marred by diseases of the larynx and bronchiæ! How many public men there are who feel that they could command the masses much better if they had the strength of lungs and ample voice which were so useful to them at the beginning of their career! And yet these misfortunes may be remedied by recourse to the Great Shoshonees Remedy, now for sale by all druggists.

FREE GRANTS.

The following timber regulations have been issued in reference to timber on free grants:—

His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor in Council was pleased to make the following Order or Regulation, under the "The Public Lands Act 1850," and it is hereby ordered, under said Act, as follows:—

All Pine Trees growing or being upon any Public Land hereafter to be sold, and which at the time of such sale, or previously, was included in any timber License, shall be considered as reserved from such sale; and such land shall be subject to any Timber License, covering or including such land, in force at the time of such sales or granted within three years from the date of such sale; and such trees may be cut and removed from such land, under the authority of any such Timber License while lawfully in force; but the purchaser at such sale, or those claiming under him or her, may cut and use such trees as may necessary for purpose of building, fencing and fuel on the land so purchased, and may also cut and dispose of all trees required to be removed in actually clearing said land for cultivation, but no pine trees, except for the necessary building, fencing and fuel aforesaid, shall be cut beyond the limit of such actual clearing before the issuing of the patent for such land, and all pine trees so cut and disposed of, (except for the necessary building, fencing and fuel as aforesaid,) shall be subject to the payment of the same dues as are at the time payable by the holders of licenses to cut timber or saw logs.

All trees remaining on the land at the time the Patent issues, shall pass to the Patentee.

Provided, however, that this order shall not apply to any land to be sold as mining land, under "The General Mining Act of 1869," nor to land to be sold to any Free Grant locatee, under the regulations or Order in Council, bearing date this day.

Now, under such regulations, who, that can get land anywhere else, will have anything to do with the wild lands of Canada.

Just think of it! A man locates and settles on a free grant lot, builds a house, clears and fences, yet, until his patent is issued, any person holding timber license may go on the lot, cut and take away every stick of pine on it, or elm, or oak, or any other wood he pleases. This license extends for three years after he has settled on it, unless he is able to buy the lot and pay for it at once. Before three years not a stick may be left on it; the woods may be cut and slashed and rendered useless; when the first fire that kindles in the neighborhood may sweep his house, sheds and fences away. At the best the land is not worth a great deal—in too many cases not worth the trouble of clearing and improving—and yet our very liberal government propose to license others to go on and take the last stick off it, even while it is occupied and settlement duties being performed. Is it to be wondered at that men will run to the United States and look after land in the Western States, rather than sit down on land in Canada, where another can rob him of all that is valuable on his lot. Let our government continue this mad policy for a few years and they will find an exodus from Ontario greater than has ever been from the Lower Provinces.

A United States paper says Canadians are going in crowds to Kansas and other Western States to settle this spring. This we may expect to continue so long as they are compelled to do so by unwise government restrictions.

THE IRISH CHURCH BILL.

Late telegrams bring the intelligence that the Irish Church Bill is likely to receive the six months hoist in the House of Lords.—Lord Derby is persuaded that rejection is the only course. Large meetings have been held condemning the Bill, but these have been got up by ministers likely to be affected by it, and by men who have been unwilling to bear a part of the support of the Established Church.

Mr. Gladstone proposes to create a new batch of Peers, including the sons of Liberal Peers and of Scotch and Irish Peers, now without seats in the House of Lords.

The press of the country regrets the position the Lords are assuming, and fears the effects in regard to the land question; and the Pall Mall Gazette affirms that it is beyond the competence of the Lords to oppose the will of the nation. Intense excitement prevails and a conflict between the Commons and the Lords is imminent. Some are of opinion that the Lords are merely sounding public feeling to see how far they dare go.—Tory papers admit the danger to the Lords, should they oppose the vote of the Commons with such a majority, but think that if successful an election would afford them more strength. This, however, is a mere idea, and would result the contrary way. Just as sure as the Lords seek to coerce the Commons the people will be aroused and return a House that may sweep away hereditary legislators. The delay may be for a month or two, but it cannot be longer, and then will follow just such a measure for England and Scotland. The best friends of the establishment wish to see it stand on surer bases than State connection and State pay. The Lords may be acting according to their convictions of duty, but certainly they are not acting prudently in moving a six month's hoist. Gladstone, it is said, will call another session immediately if the Lords reject it.

Sunday Schools and their Defects.

In the Church Herald—a very respectable paper now published in Toronto, and which, so far as the Episcopal Church is concerned, is about to supply a want felt by its ministers and members—there is a short article on "Sunday Schools and Sunday Scholars," from which we extract a few hints for Sunday School Teachers and patrons. The Herald referred to the early establishment of Sabbath Schools and the object thereof, the gathering in of those children and others whose education was neglected, so as to enable them to learn to read, and to impart to them religious instruction. The education of the people is now so general, and books of instruction so easily attained, that there are very few parents uneducated, and we may say fewer children of the present day.

The writer urges, however, that the Sabbath School Scholars of the present Sabbath Schools are formed in great part, if not entirely, of those who do receive instruction at home, and whose parents are both willing and able to afford them religious instructions, while the children of drunken, careless, indifferent and profane parents are left unheeded, or are not yet induced to attend. He says: "The waifs and strays are in great part where they were before." This is certainly worth the attention of all interested in Sabbath Schools, as to these poor unfortunate children Sabbath School training might prove of immense advantage.

We cannot coincide with the whole article, but this thought, that those who need instruction, and for whom Sabbath Schools were first brought into operation, are not the recipients of the advantages, should really induce some concerted action on the part of Sabbath School Teachers and Superintendents, in order to meet this particular state of things, which, in the towns and cities does most assuredly exist.

By a vote of the House of Commons the printing for the ensuing year has been awarded to Mr. Taylor of the Ottawa Citizen.—His tender was $1.790 a year lower than any other, and he proposes to lodge Dominion debentures to the amount of $10,000 as security. We are glad to see that justice has been done Mr. Taylor in this matter. The committee recommended accepting the tender of Messrs. Hunter, Rose & Co., which would have entailed a loss of $8,950 in five years, which would, if carried out, be a great injustice to Mr. Taylor, and a loss to the country of $8,950.

We cannot, however, understand why the sins of the committee should be all visited on Mr. McKenzie, the chairman. The committee consisted of 6 government supporters and two or three of the opposition members, and it was evidently the wish of the supporters of the government to give the printing to Messrs. Hunter, Rose & Co., yet Mr. Taylor rolls the burden of the whole on the chairman, Mr. McKenzie. Mr. Taylor, as putting in the lowest tender, deserves the work, but the chairman of the committee who neither voted for nor against it, cannot be blamed.

Judge John Wilson's death was hardly announced when a long list of names aspiring to the vacant Judgeship were announced. Among these we find the names of Mr. Richards, of the Crown Lands Office; the Postmaster General, Mr. Campbell; and a few others of less notoriety. There will be some wire pulling before it is settled; but if some of those who now hold cabinet places be appointed, perhaps better men will obtain their places, and out of the changes good may come.

Mr. Wm. McGregor, who left Ashburnham on the 24th ult., for Red River, arrived at St. Clouds on the 29th and left it on the morning of the 31st ult., in company with four others, for the Red River Settlement. The men were taking with them nine yoke of oxen. The Yankees must be afraid of guns, for they charged him $7 for taking one across the lines. His friends will be pleased to learn that he was enjoying good health, and hoped to reach Red River settlement in about two weeks.

We have received a copy of the Insolvent Bill as amended, and from a perusal of it, think that creditors have matters in their own way a good deal. If it should make all men honest, creditors as well as debtors, it will answer a good purpose. In not a few cases the harsh treatment of creditors drives men to insolvency that otherwise would pay the last mite. Moderation in selling and in after dealing will do much to prevent insolvency.

THE ROYAL CANADIAN BANK BILLS.—These bills are almost everywhere, except at the banks, taken at their face value.—Yesterday they were disposed of at 97 cents in other bank bills. This is not a bad sign of the solvency of the bank. Bill-holders would do well not to sell at too heavy discounts. The government banking scheme will hardly pass this session.

Mr Lovell, of Montreal, is about to publish a Dominion Directory. It will be a work of considerable magnitude, and will involve an outlay of at least $75,000. Ten thousand will require to be circulated to repay the enterprizing publisher. As the work will prove very useful to commercial men it deserves to be encouraged.

BIBLE CHRISTIAN.—The anniversary services of the Bible Christian Sabbath School will be held on Sunday, at 10.30, 2.30 and 6.30 o'clock, respectively, by the Rev. Mr. Hooper. On Monday tea will be at 4.30 for the children, and for visitors 5.30 to 7 o'clock.

The body of a woman named Mary Dodds was found in the river at Montreal on the 4th inst. She had thrown herself in while in a state of melancholy, caused by her husband deserting her last fall, and going to the United States with another woman.

MR. MCGEE.—By returns just made it appears that $5,000 were expended in prosecuting persons connected with the murder of Mr. McGee. The sum paid Mr. O'Biely has not yet been made known.

The Protestant Home Committee beg to thank the gentleman composing the grand jury for their visit on the 9th June, and for the donation to the poor box on that occasion.

County Court and Court of Quarter Sessions.

This Court met on Tuesday, His Honor, Judge Dennistoun, presiding; John Moore and Daniel Hopkins, Esqs., Associate Magistrates. The docket was not very light this term.

The Grand Jury were: Wm. Fairweather, Esq., Foreman; and Francis Bowker, Wm. Cummings, Wm. Carter, Angus Davidson, Samuel Elliott, John Finlay, Timothy Fitzpatrick, John Hilton, Denis Hurley, George Johnston, James Kidd, sen., James C. Kennedy, Wm. McCarthy, Hugh McFee, Thos. Roarke, John Simpson, Walter Scott, jr., and Thomas Waters, Esqs.

There were three cases before them in which true bills were returned:

The Queen vs. Jos. Nesbitt, assault.

The Queen vs. Edmund Holdeway, larceny, stealing a watch from Mr. Wells; and

The Queen vs. Jas. Murphy. larceny.

The first was an interpleader case—Kilcauley vs. Wason. Kilcauley, the elder, had, in 1864, got into some debt and made his entire property over to his son, to pay such debts as the father would acknowledge.—This one, however, he denied, and Wason sued and recovered judgment for it. The Sheriff seized the property made over to the son, but the son claimed them, and this was an action to see whose property they really were, the father's or the son's. Verdict for plaintiff, Kilcauley. Smith for plf.; Edmison and Weller for deft.

Helm vs. Milburn.—In this case, plaintiff, Helm, and Mr. Milburn, appeared endorsers on a note of Wm. H. Paul, who lately made assignment here and left the place. Mr. Milburn's name appeared first on the note, but he denied having signed the note, and consequently Mr. Helm, as next endorser, had to pay it, and this was an action to recover the amount from the first endorser, Mr. Milburn, who pleaded that the name was a forgery by Paul. All the bank managers and several merchants of the town were witnesses on the case. Two of the managers would take it for Milburn's signature, but saw some difference between it and his acknowledged signature. One of the managers was of a contrary opinion, and did not believe it to be his signature. Mr. McFaul, Teacher of Penmanship, did not consider it Mr. Milburn's signature. The jury, however, brought a verdict for plf, Helm, $153.15. Mr. Fairbairn for plf; Mr. Dumble for deft.

The Bank of Toronto vs. Stephenson.—A note of hand. Verdict for plf, $1011.06. Weller & Hatton for plf.

Mowry vs. Wilson.—Verdict by consent, $160.69. Dunsford for plf; Scott for deft.

The Queen vs. James Murphy.—Larceny. Murphy was accused of stealing a buffalo robe from John Donohue, of Emmamore, on the 17th of March, 1868. Verdict not guilty. Smith for prisoner.

The Queen vs. Holdeway.—Larceny.—Stealing a watch from the bedroom of Mr. Wells, Peterboro. Pleaded guilty. Sent to jail one year.

The Queen vs. Nesbit.—This is an assault case that took place in Burleigh about a month past. Verdict $25, to be paid forthwith. It was accordingly paid.

The examination of Teachers for the western portion of the county, was held on Thursday and Friday, 3rd and 4th instant, in the Union School Room. There were thirty-five candidates the first day, but one of these did not return on the second day. The questions were principally selected from questions that had been given in the Normal School, Toronto, during the sessions of 1866-7 of that institution. Taking into consideration the papers, the teachers showed a very marked improvement on past years. The general form of the answers, with few exceptions, and the correctness, gave evidence of marked progress on the part of those who aspire to the position of teachers in this county, and the willingness with which they set themselves to keep pace with the advancement in the programme, affords satisfactory proof that it only requires time to ensure a class of teachers equal to those of any county in like circumstances. The qualifications of second class teachers now, is fully equal to what was required of first class teachers a few years ago, and that of third class teachers equals what was required of second class teachers then. Book keeping, school organization and composition have been somewhat neglected by those having the task of preparing young men and young women for teachers, and the consequence is that in these subjects there is room for improvement; the late examination has shown this, and in future they will, no doubt, be attended to.

There is a very evident defect in our school series; there is no work on ancient history nor philosophy. There is no standard book keeping in use, nor is there a cheap work on mensuration—all subjects required by law. It would be well if at the next meeting of teachers a general agreement could be obtained to introduce some particular work on each of these, and then they would know what one would be used by the examiners. We merely throw out these hints at present. The following are the successful candidates at Peterboro:

David Robertson, 1st C, 1 year.
R. H. Hall, 2nd C, 1 year.

CHILD KILLED.

On Thursday last, whilst John King, Brickmaker, near Ashburnham, was proceeding home, and while passing John McAuliffe's house, he in some way unknown to him it appears, drove over or against a child belonging to Mr. McAuliffe, by which it is believed to have been killed. From the evidence given at the inquest it appears that King was under the influence of liquor.—He and John Craig, of Ashburnham, passed each other in different directions just at McAuliffe's. Mr. Craig believed King was under the influence of liquor at the time. Neither of them, however, saw the child just then; but another little child says that the one child crossed the road just as the teams passed each other, and that it was knocked down by King's waggon. It lived but a few minutes after it was taken up. The prevailing opinion is that while crossing the road some part of the waggon, but most likely the hub of the wheel struck the child on the back of the neck, injuring the spinal chord and causing immediate death. The verdict of the corners jury is—"That the child came to its death by being struck by the horses, or some part of the wagon, driven by Mr. John King, while under the influence of liquor, and driving at a faster rate than horses are generally driven."

THE SWISS BELL RINGERS COMING.—The Montreal Herald, in their closing notice of the celebrated Alleghanians Vocalists and Swiss Bell Ringers, who are to appear here on Thursday Evg. June 17th says:

"This company had a very large audience on Saturday evening in St. Patrick's Hall. Mr. Galloway took wonderfully in his songs, exciting roars of laughter. The "Twins" also brought into play all the risible faculties of which the audience was possessed. Miss Jenner and Mr Galloway were immense in the "Apology." "Auld Robin Gray" earned for Miss Jenner a round of well merited plaudits; and "Auld Lang Syne," played on the bells, awakened in the minds of the Gaels and the Lowlanders many pleasing associations in connection with the "home of Wallace." The Bell Ringers start on their grand tour to-day, where their fame, which has preceded them, will, no doubt, secure them large audiences."

The Presbyterian Witness (Halifax, N. S) says:

"Their entertainment is interesting and novel, as well as high-toned and refined."—

The Baptist Register, says:

"Everything is good, in excellent taste, and leans to virtue's side."

Seats can be secured at Menzies Book Store.

A BURGLAR CAUGHT.—On Monday morning Constable Arnott was informed by Mr. Wells that he had lost his watch the night before about one o'clock. At that hour he had been awakened by the falling of a window, and arose and found that his watch which he had hung just beside his bed was gone. Suspicions fell on one Holdaway, who has stood wringing the bell at the door of Wrayc & Warde's auction room, but who had been dismissed. Mr. Arnott accordingly went to Holdaways and found him in bed with his clothes on, searched him and found the watch in his pocket, but he had changed the chain. He was sent up for trial and pleaded guilty, and has received twelve months in jail.

Farmers can be supplied with Grain Cradles, Hay Rakes, Snaths, Fork Handles, &c., by Mr. Wm. Hamilton, at the Agricultural Foundry, south of the Market Square. Mr. Hamilton has got machinery for manufacturing all these, and will sell them cheaper than they can be purchased elsewhere wholesale. Repairing of all these articles also attended to, at short notice.—Give him a call.

We have been requested to state that the next meeting of the Teacher's Class will be held on Saturday, 12th inst., at 10.30, a. m., in the Union School.

ONTARIO BANK.

Proceedings of the Twelfth Annual Meeting of the Stockholders of the Ontario Bank, held at the Banking House, Bowmanville, on Monday, the 7th day of June, 1869.

The chair was taken by the Hon. John Simpson, President, who read the following Report:—

The business transactions of the Bank for the year have been large, and the profits quite equal to the average of former years; while the losses, so far as ascertained, are less than usual.

The harvest of the past year was below an average, with perhaps the single exception of wheat. The extraordinary prices realized by our agricultural community for all their productions in the past, placed them in a position of comparative ease, and in many cases of affluence; the rapid decline in the prices of the breadstuffs has not therefore seriously effected their position; and having but little indebtedness, they have been enabled to withhold from market a large proportion of the last year's wheat crop. The effect of this is, that the decline has been felt mainly by the producers, which but for the fact already stated, would have been borne by the produce dealer, and would have entailed upon this class of the Bank's customers serious if not embarrassing consequences.

The prospects of an abundant harvest are everywhere indicated; and when the balance of last year's crop shall be brought to market, in addition to that now on the ground, a great impetus must be given to those branches of trade and commerce which are now in a somewhat languishing condition. While shrinkage in values have been going on in most of our cereals, the timber and sawn lumber interests—in the latter of which your Bank is largely interested—are in a healthy and flourishing condition; and your Directors are happy to be able to state, that the present year promises to be more profitable than the past.

The renewal of the Reciprocity Treaty, on a fair and equitable basis, we trust may be effected during the present year; when, doubtless, this and other important branches of Canadian industry will be greatly stimulated.

Your Directors may, without exceeding their legitimate sphere, refer to a few facts, in connection with our manufactures and and imports ions. Canada requires, and must seek, new outlets for many articles now manufactured in the Dominion, (if our industries are to be continued or extended.) Prominent amongst these may be placed the productions of our woolen mills, the limited demand for which has not absorbed the supply. The importations of the past two or three years have been largely in excess of the consuming capacity of the country: these over-importations, and the eagerness evinced to find purchasers therefor, have induced a large number of persons to engage in mercantile pursuits, many of whom were not possessed of sufficient capital, and lacked that business training and experience so necessary in these days of keen competition to lead them on to success. The general dullness in trade has felt many with stocks of goods on hand, for which they have been unable from their own resources to pay; and being pressed for remittances, has led a great number to go into bankruptcy, as the readiest way to get rid of their financial embarrassments. Your Directors would call the attention of importers and wholesale dealers to the necessity of looking more closely into the affairs of debtors, when their estates are being thus disposed of, as a means of preventing fraud and over-trading. The ease with which discharges have been obtained, has induced traders and others to avail themselves of our bankrupt laws, who with more energy and economy, might have honorably met all their engagements. It is hoped that the Bill now before Parliament will effectually check the facilities at present so readily availed of, and deter many from entering into pursuits for which they have no natural or acquired ability, and in which too many are already engaged. The result of this general over-trading has led to the withdrawal of a large amount of labor from agricultural pursuits, wherein it might have been more profitably directed, for their own advantage and the general good.

All the Bank Charters expire next year, and the question of their renewal is now engaging the earnest attention of Parliament and the country. If the Government scheme becomes law, the system now in existence, which has been productive of so much benefit to the country generally, and particularly to the Province of Ontario, will be so changed as to limit to a large extent the facilities now afforded to the public.

A large number of the Stockholders of the Bank, having expressed the conviction that their interests, as well as those of the public, would be better subserved by removing the Head Office to one of the large Commercial centres in Ontario or Quebec, petitions have been presented to Parliament, and a Bill will be immediately introduced, asking for a renewal of the present Charter, and also for authority to be given to a majority of the Stockholders, present in person or by proxy, to determine whether such removal shall be made; and if so, to what point: such meeting to be called specially for that purpose.

Your Directors determined last fall to close the Hamilton Branch. This is now being done, and this Office will be finally closed within a few weeks.

The Cashier, Managers, and other Officers of the Bank, have discharged their respective duties with zeal and ability, and are, in our opinion, entitled to your thanks.

THE COMING MAN.

Dominion affairs of late have been the basis for a good many very amusing articles in the American press, but the following "Curious Dialogue and Prophecy," communicated to the New York Times, of the 9th inst., by a citizen of Madrid, Lawrence Co., N. Y., is a little in advance of anything we have yet seen. It is not unlikely that Sir John A. will be henceforth known among our neighbors as "The Man of Destiny."

"The Editor of the New York Times.

"In your paper of the 16th instant, the belief is expressed that Sir John A. Macdonald and a few others therein named, will be made Lords. This reminds me of a prediction I once heard that gentleman express, in Canada, soon after Lee's surrender. I had put up at a hotel in the city of Kingston, Canada, and was directed to the reading room, in which were (to me) two strangers, one short in stature, the other tall.—They were reading the news, and leisurely commenting thereon, when the following conversation, substantially, ensued between them:

"Short Man—So then, after all, the South has succumbed.

"Tall Man—It is no more than I expected from the first; but one revolution begets another, and so from the another will spring, less formidable in itself, but, through European intervention, far more disastrous in its result to the huge Republican serpent of America, whose divided tongue will again war upon itself within its now almost mortally bruised head.

"Short Man—Does your Honor mean to infer that the Republic will go to naught?

"Tall Man—Yes, slow but sure, and I will not only live to see the most northerly States and British America confederated, but I, myself, will be elected first Viceroy over the same.

Short Man—I presume your Honor to be jesting?

Tall man—Not at all; for in a few years I shall be knighted, and in a short time subsequent thereto I shall be created a Peer of the Realm; and after that seven years of eventful time will have run their course before events will have transpired as servitors toward constituting me Her Britannic Majesty's first Viceroy in and over her thus enlarged American Dominion.

Tall Man—Such is infallible destiny.

They both took to reading again, and I left the room. Upon inquiry I ascertained the tall man to be Hon. J. A. Macdonald, since Knighted, and probably to be made a lord, but whether he will become Viceroy over such a Dominion, remains to be seen.

THE ANNEXATION MEETING AT SPRINGVILLE.—The "Eastern Chronicle," publishes an official report of the late meeting at Springville, Pictou. Messrs. R. Mc Connell and David Marshall, of New Glasgow, and several other gentlemen spoke in favor of annexation, and Mr. D. A. F. Holmes in opposition. Mr. William McGillivray moved, seconded by John McPhie, Esq., the following resolutions, which "passed all but unanimously:" "Resolved, That the interests of Nova Scotia require that we should have closer political and commercial relations with the United States, and that it is our duty by all legitimate means to seek such connection with the American Republic, as will go further than a Reciprocity Treaty, and place us on a footing of absolute equality with her citizens, in matters of trade and in all other respects. Resolved, That this meeting pledges itself to support a peaceable and legitimate agitation for Annexation to the United States." There were about three hundred electors present. The report is signed by William Robertson, Chairman, and Daniel McKay, Secretary.—

A YANKEE GOVERNOR.—What the Dominion wants in the way of a Governor is some live, enterprising Yankee, who, in two years, would replace the chronic stagnation of the provinces by a new and progressive vigor, would rid the government of the gentlemen of the white and black rods, and the equerries in waiting, and the other comfoleries of the the mediæval ages, and so modernize the business, the improvements, the press, and the education of the people, that the Canadas might in time claim companionship with the living, instead of the dead of the past age.—Chicago Tribune.

We have a live Yankee, a Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, but he seems to be as fond of equerries in waiting, cocked hats and gold lace, as the most demoralized Britisher. In fact, all experience proves that both in Europe and here, the genuine Republican is more taken by, and impressed with the fuss and feathers of monarchical ceremonies, than those whose lives have been spent amongst them. The greatest and most open-mouthed runner after titled men in Europe is the Yankee.—Whig.

JUVENILE BURGLARS.—For some time past, Mr. J. J. Cowan, of Bailieboro', has missed a number of small articles from his store, the disappearance of which aroused suspicion in his mind that some person or persons of "light fingered" proclivities, had the secret run of the premises. Of this he was convinced upon finding that a sum of money had been stolen, and he set a watch to discover the thieves. The result was the capture of three boys belonging to the village, who, according to the confession of one of the trio, had been in the habit of entering the building by a cellar window, and then gaining the shop by raising a trap door. The young hopefuls, the ringleader being but 13 years of age, were brought before a Justice and the chief triumvir sent to the Cobourg jail.

JAMES O'REILLY Esq.—There is a report here to day that James O'Reilly, Q. C., who conducted the prosecution of Whalen, has received $10,000 from the Dominion Government for his services in that capacity.—Globe.

We believe that there is some foundation for what the Globe says, not that Mr. O'Reilly has got the money, which he most richly earned, but that the Government have put that sum in the Supplementary Estimates, that is, the portion unpaid. Mr. O'Reilly served the Government at the risk of his life, and he certainly deserves to be as well paid as the Messrs. Cameron and McKenzie, who were so well rewarded to defeat the ends of justice.—Whig.

The Omemee Standard says:—On Sunday last Rev. W. Henry Jones, M. A., held Divine Services in Christ Church, Omemee, and at St. James' Church, Emily; the services were largely attended, and the congregations seemed highly pleased with Mr. Jones. A meeting was held in Christ Church the following day to take steps to secure Mr. Jones as Pastor of the Episcopal Churches in Emily, and we believe there is a reasonable prospect of success.

Mr. Jones was formerly pastor of the Baptist Church Port Hope.

A man has just died in New York, in the position of an ostler, at the age of 70, who in early life was a wealthy Irish squire, keeping horses and hounds, and dispensing magnificent hospitality. Past and reckless habits ran through his large inheritance; and he came to America to go down from bad to worse. For years he was carver at the St. Nicholas Hotel, but dissipation lost him even this position, and he died of apoplexy in an oat-bin.

A sad affair, but one of some interest to the medical profession has occurred at Leicester. The wife of a chemist gave birth to twin children (girls) which partook of the nature of the "Siamese Twins," having four arms and four legs, and being jointed together from the breast to the umbilical cord. They did not survive above a quarter of an hour, and their death was quickly followed by that of their mother.

"Queen's Birth-day" was kept in the usual loyal style last mont, and next month the citizens of the Dominion of Canada will celebrate the birth of their new and rising existance; but reserverd invalids still feels that a public holiday would be too short to belebrate all the virtues of that celebrated Indian Medicine, the great SHOSHONEES REMEDY, now on sale by the respectable Druggists in your locality.

The accounts from New Zealand are very gloomy. The native rebels have again become active, several settlers have been murdered, and a general alarm has revived. The Home Government has permitted the only royal regiment in the colony to remain for the present. Later telegraphic intelligence holds out a more hopeful prospect.

The work of Father Mathew has still borne noble fruit. In the recent vote in Parliament on the Permissive Prohibitory Liquor bill, the Irish vote was 36 for and 16 against,—a majority of six in favor of the bill. The Province of Ulster contributed 12 votes in favor, and only one against his measure. The vote of the Scottish members was 12 for the bill and 10 against.

The Farmers Daughter.

She may not in the many dance,
With jewelled maidens vie;
She may not smile on courtly youth
With soft bewitching eye;
She cannot boast a form and mien
That lavish wealth hath bought her,
But ah, she hath much fairer charms,
The farmer's peerless daughter.

The rose and lily on her cheek
Together love to dwell;
Her laughing blue eyes wreath around
The heart a witching spell;
Her heart is bright as morning's glow
Upon the dewy plain,
And listening to her voice we dream
That spring has come again.

The timid fawn is not more mild,
Nor yet more gay or free;
The lily's cup is not more pure,
In all its purity;
Of all the wild flowers in the wood,
Or by the crystal water,
There's none more pure or fair than she,
The farmer's peerless daughter.

The haughty belle whom all adore,
On downy pillow lies!
While forth upon the dewy lawn
The merry maiden hies!
And with the lark's uprising song
Her own clear voice is heard—
Ye may not tell which sweetest sings,
The maiden or the bird.

Then tell me not of jewelled fair—
The brightest jewel yet
Is the pure heart where virtue dwells,
And innocence is set;
The glow of health upon her cheek—
The grace no rule had taught her—
The fairest wreath that beauty twines,
Is for the farmer's daughter.

FARMING.

"Better stay on the farm a while longer,
Though profit comes in rather slow,
Remember you're nothing to risk, boys,
Don't be in a hurry to go!"

Farming is glorious employment, and has always seemed to me a most exalted one. from the fact that God placed the first men whom he made in his own image, in a beautiful garden "to dress it and to keep it." Dear indeed to our first parents must have been their first home, and sad for them and their toiling children that sin drove them from it.

Though we who are represented of the soil find it cursed with thorns and thistles, and in the sweat of our face eat our bread, yet there is a satisfying pleasure with all, making our attachment stronger for the dear old farm every day. The old farm! Not a spot of it but is sacred and loved; not a field of it but we've watched with tender, loving interest. Our first home*ton; every tree, shrub and flower we've* planted with our hand, watched and tended and matured them, too, like very pets.

The beautiful orchard, set only a little time, how fine it looks this spring; and what delicious pears and apples those thrifty young trees bore last year. Leave the farm? No, indeed! Stay on it, live on it, and enjoy the good that comes from patient, persistent effort.

I get almost indignant, though sometimes when I hear city-bred people talk, and—more than that,—when the would-be aristocrats of our small towns raise their lofty heads and suffer their tongues to ridicule country people, half of them, too, country people themselves, retired from the "horrible farm." Should all who might, leave their farms—should all who had great inducements offered them to go into the city, go, farm products would very soon get beyond reach of some of those lofty people, who think farming is so disgraceful. Their wheat might prove corn, and their butter minus. Ye who think farming so ignoble, remember Adam wasn't placed at a still to sell peanuts and candy, nor in a long, narrow prison to sell dry goods.

Even though by sin a curse fell upon the earth, it is bounteous and beautiful still; and the farmer who loves his employ can make his farm a very garden even, "by the sweat of his brow." He can have an allegiance to God and not be driven from his cherished and chosen heritage. Since it is growing so popular to "sell out" and retire to the city, many are affected with this "begira," and thus the farms often pass into experienced hands, (for the rush has been made by elderly men, those who knew how to do farming well,) and younger men have succeeded, these, who, after a little time, grew discouraged, or caught the prevailing mania and followed to the city. The rare facilities for culture and refinement in the city may attract many; ease and fashion may attract others; while more are from their foolish pride led there—When they hear the country and its representatives "made fun of;" when told that these uncouth people can't appreciate anything elegant, and care nothing for rare architecture and frescoed ceilings, they resolve they will not be classed among the illiterate herd, an off to the city they go!

O, young men, don't suffer your pride to drive you from the farm. Show yourselves men, indeed, who can and will make your business honorable and exhalted. To neglect your farm would degrade it and you; to farm thoroughly and well must surely give you an independent spirit, and cause you to justify value your own manliness.—While the city would afford you great and good means for cultivation, while you might mingle with the noblest and the best men and women—remember the very Sodom of sin and temptation which the city so often proves to young men.

How many pure and spotless sons and daughters choosing the glitter and glare, the fashion and folly of city life, have left the quiet farm home—left father and mother—and in a few short months have been utterly ruined. Yes, they studied refinement, they grew polite, they dressed fashionably, the scoffed at "country people," and lost their purity, their simplicity, their truth, their character. Stay on the farm. Buy books, take plenty of papers, attend lectures within your reach, form debating clubs at home, and societies for considering and adopting improvements in farming, to do it better and more thoroughly, and if you are not happy and content the farm won't be to blame.

AMERICAN JUDGES AND LIQUORS.—A judge in Illinois had a man before him charged with stealing the spoons from a certain tavern in the neighbourhood. His excuse was that he was drunk. "Did you get your liquor at Birchell's, young man?" inquired the judge. "Yes, your honour," replied the thief. "And then stole his spoons?" "Yes." "Mr. Clerk," exclaimed the judge, "enter a nolle prosequi in this case. I have drunk Birchell's liquor myself, and it always made me feel mean enough to steal."

ANOTHE SHAFT GONE HOME.—Somebody who has been hit very hard by one of the critics, sends us the following "Lines to a Critic":—

"Away, thou whipster: I defy
Thy puny censure! phaw!
Thy criticism's 'all my eye'—
(I have you there: ah! ah!

[This is very hard on the poor critic.]

GO TO THE

EXAMINER OFFICE.

To Messrs. CHAMBERLAIN & SELLS, Conway P.O County of Lennox, Ontario, Canada.

KANOE, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th, 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ankles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, as known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonees remedy; I believe it will cure you,

MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicine.

Perhaps no one medicine is so universally required by everybody as a cathartic, nor was ever any before so universally adopted into use, in every country and among all classes, as this mild but efficient purgative Pill. The obvious reason is, that it is a more reliable and far more effectual remedy than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it cured them; those who have not, know that it cures their neighbors and friends, and all know that what it does once it does always—that it never fails through any fault or neglect of its composition. We have thousands upon thousands of certificates of their remarkable cures of the following complaints, but such cures are known in every neighborhood, and we need not publish them. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates; containing neither calomel or any deleterious drug, they may be taken with safety by any body. Their sugar coating preserves them ever fresh and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Languor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice or Green Sickness, Bilious Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Pulsation of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continuously taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change these complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as this excellent remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a protection against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Singers and Public Speakers and great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or do more than assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

As its name implies, it does Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, Bismuth, Zinc, nor any other mineral or poisonous substance whatever, it in nowise injures any patient. The number and importance of its cures in the ague districts, are literally beyond account, and we believe without a parallel in the history of Ague medicine. Our pride is gratified by the acknowledgments we receive of the radical cures effected in obstinate cases, and where other remedies had wholly failed.

Unacclimated persons, either resident in, or travelling through miasmatic localities, will be protected by taking the AGUE CURE daily.

For Liver Complaints, arising from torpidity of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the Liver into healthy activity.

For Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints, it is an excellent remedy, producing many truly remarkable cures, where other medicines had failed.

SONG.

BY JEAN INGELOW.

In the night she told a story,
In the night and all night through,
When the moon was in her glory,
And the branches dropt with dew.

'Twas my life she told, and round it
Runs the years as from a deep;
In the world's great heart she found it,
Cradled like a child asleep.

In the night I saw her weaving
By the misty moonbeam cold,
All the weft her shuttle cleaving
With a sacred thread of gold.

Ah! she wept me tears of sorrow,
Lulling tears as mystic sweet;
Then she wove my last to-morrow,
And her web lay at my feet.

Of my life she made the story;
I must weep—so soon 'twas told!
But your name did lend its glory,
And you love its thread of gold.

Another Dark Tragedy.

A SAD STORY OF LOVE, ELOPEMENT DESERTION AND PROBABLE SUICIDE—A NEW YORK LADY THE VICTIM—A TOUCHING LETTER.

(From the Chicago Tribune, May 30.)

Shortly before one o'clock the morning a gentleman called at the Huron street police station with a lady's cloak, which he reported having found on the wharf near Rush street bridge only a few minutes before. As he did so a packet of letters, tied with a bit of red ribbon, fell from it. The truth flashed across his mind in an instant. He held in his hand the souvenir of some poor creature who, weary of her burdensome life, had sought consolation in death. Not knowing what else to do under the circumstances, he took the cloak to the police station, and there left it in charge of the watchman. In the packet were found several letters, two photographs—those of a young man and a girl—and a handkerchief neatly worked with the name of "Nelly E. Dorsett." These letters partially explain a strange and affecting story of love, elopement, desertion and death.

The letters comprise the only tangible evidence of this melancholy tragedy, which, without them, would be a mystery probably beyond the power of imagination or of human effort to solve. They show that the deceived girl was of good family, and had the education and refinement of one moving in a high circle of society. In addition, they reveal the base plot, of the scoundrel who drove her to her death.—Though here and there slightly discounted these letters form the thread of the whole story, and, if not serving to develop the incident of the love so sadly ended they clearly expose the depth of villany in the heart of the seducer and the pitiable frailty of the victim. Three letters addressed to Miss Nellie E. Dorsett, and signed "George," were found, besides a fore-well letter written by the girl. The latter epistle was enclosed in a small white envelope, bearing the initial "D," and superscribed "Mr. George H. Burr" in a neat, legible hand. The photograph of the young man, on which is written the name of Burr, represents a fine looking fellow, about twenty five years old, with mustache and curling hair—probably the ideal of many foolish girls until his falsity betrayed them. The other picture is that of a little girl, quite likely the sister of the deceased, as written upon it are the words, "To Sister Nellie."

Two of the letters are addressed to "My dear, dear Nellie," and signed, "Your loving George."

An answer to the first letter written by Burr must have been received by him.—In it the young lady evidently protested against so rash a step as an elopement.—

The second letter contains further suggestions and more importunities by the precious scoundrel.

A letter, or rather a note written in lead pencil, probably while Burr was in New York, is as follows verbatim:

City, 2 p. m.

DARLING NELLIE;—I found your note at Mr. Moore's office an hour ago. Can it be possible that your father knows I am here? If he does we must act at once; there is no time to be lost. It seems strange that he should have detained you for that reason alone, and I very much fear he suspects you. You must not flinch, dearest, now that we are so near to each other and happy in the hope of soon being one. Nerve yourself to the trial, darling, and in a few hours we shall be away from the scenes of your vexations, rolling over the route towards the far, far west. I will do just as you suggest, and am glad to know that you are the brave and loving little girl I thought you. At twelve o'clock I shall be at the corner with a carriage, and we will go from there to Cortlandt street. The train leaves Jersey City early in the morning, and there will be no probability of detection. I will get a through ticket to Chicago, and we will stop over at Pittsburg en route about a week, so as to lead them astray should they follow us. I prefer to have the ceremony take place in Pittsburg, but, of course, darling, will gladly grant any wish of yours. Midnight, and don't fail if you love me.

GEORGE.

The tryst was kept and the net folded about the unsuspecting girl. This misplaced love had taken so strong a hold upon her heart that body and soul hung upon the issue. Once beyond the threshold of her home—beyond the pale of her doting parents' guardianship, and in the power of the man she loved, the tremulous toy of his villany—all was lost. He deserted her, and here is her piteous farewell letter, full of love and forgiveness to the last. It is touching in its simplicity and earnestness, and will draw tears from a stone. It reads as follows:—

DEAR GEORGE.—It is not in anger I write to you, now; I have no curses to heap upon you but only love and forgiveness. Oh, George, if you had only known how fervently, passionately I love you, you would not have deserted me so cruelly. I left home, parents, everything for you.—George, trusting to your love—for you did love me once—and oh! how my heart yearns for a return of its devotion. But I will not reproach you. I am weary and shall soon be at rest, and God, perhaps, will forgive the error of a poor girl so unworthy of His love. I have left my watch for Mrs. Foster to send to mother. My rings and your little locket I have put up in a package for you. I would not leave you, dear George, without a token of my love, and if this last act of mine shall touch your heart, I shall be happy in death. Pray for me. Good night, good night.

NELLIE.

FURTHER PARTICULARS.

The sad death of the young girl, Nellie E. Dorsett, by suicide—of which there is little doubt—created intense excitement in the city yesterday, and was the universal theme of conversation. Since the narrative of yesterday some further particulars have been developed.

It appears that the supposed suicide is the daughter of M. M. Dorsett, doing business at No. 263, Broadway, New York. The wretch, George H. Burr, with whom she eloped to this city and who cruelly deserted her after he had wrought her ruin, is a travelling agent for a New York wholesale drug store. The elopement took place about two weeks ago, and about a week since Superintendent of Police Kennedy received a letter from the father of the young girl, informing him of the flight, and, as he had reason to believe they had come to Chicago, requesting him to look after the young couple.

Accompanying the letter of the father to Superintendent Kennedy is a photograph of his daughter; it represents a beautiful young girl, eighteen or nineteen years of age, dressed in the height of fashion.

The river squad of our police were engaged during yesterday in searching for the body of a man who was drowned a day or two since at the foot of Jackson street.—To day they will institute a search for the body of the young girl.

The Royal Family of England.

A London letter, describing the opening of Miss Burdett Coutts' and Bethnal Green, London, in which ceremony a portion of the royal family participated, says:

"All the members of the royal family present honored the assembly with their presence. At the appointed time the flourish of trumpets and the sharp order of the Colonel's 'Attention,' indicated the arrival of the Duchess of Cambridge, Princess Mary, Prince Teck, and other distinguished persons. Miss Coutts, leading the way, descended from the platform, followed by the archbishops, bishops, deans and noblemen, proceeded to the entrance door to receive the guests. The hold the royal family have on the British public was seen clearly by the excitement produced on the coming of these representatives.—Everybody came to their feet, and there was a general excitement, which lasted long after the notables were seated, as they were, on the right and left of Miss Coutts, she holding the seat of honor.—Could Her Majesty have entered the chapel, the excited audience would almost have brought down the house. The Duchess of Cambridge, cousin of the Queen, who stands next to the throne, and outranks all the peers and peeresses of the land, is a remarkably preserved lady of about seventy. Tall, finely formed, with a face strongly marked, coarse and somewhat masculine, yet exceedingly benignant, appearing in public as she is really in private, unaffected, courteous and without hauteur. Princess Mary, her daughter, is one of the most regal looking ladies in England; quite tall, rather stout, with a face indicting benevolence and character. She dresses with great simplicity and elegance, and would be a marked lady in any circle. She is greatly beloved for her kindness of heart and benevolence of life. She is the most popular princess in the land. When she was married to Prince Teck, she refused to be married in any of the royal chapels or palaces. She insisted upon a simple wedding, the direction of which she took into her own hands. She was married in the little country church at Kew, where her summer residence is. She invited all her country neighbors to be present, and threw her lawns open to them. She gave special orders that the infirm and aged should have the best seats in church, and that the crowd might have a good view of the procession in which was the Queen. She walked from the palace to the church, that all who wished might see her. She enters heartily into all plans for the benefit of the poor, the infirm or the sick, and leads her name and influence everywhere where it can be used with profit to the lowly. Est rely free from affectation, she seems to enter most heartily into the enjoyment of the occasion which she graced with her presence. Most of the noblemen present were old men, many of them prematurely old. This is especially true of the Duke of Wellington, who inherits his father's titles and some of his looks. He is very grey, his frame worn and attenuated, and he has the look and stoop of a man of eighty."

A WONDERFUL LIAR.

An Englishman travelling on the Mississippi, told several tough stories about some London thieves. A Cincinatti chap named Case, heard these narratives with a calmness but expressive "umph," and then remarked that the western thieves beat the London operators all hollow.

'How so?' enquired the Englishman with surprise, 'pray, sir, have you lived much in the west?'

'Not a great deal. I undertook to set up business at Des Moines Rapids awhile ago, but the rascally people stole nearly everything I had, and finally a Welsh miner run off with my wife.'

'Gracious!' said the Englishman, 'and have you never found her?'

'Never to this day. But that was not the worst of it.'

'Worse! What could be worse than stealing a man's wife?'

'Stealing the children, I should say,' said the implacable Case.

'Children?'

'Yes. A nigger woman who had none of her own, abducted my youngest daughter and eloped and joined the Injuns.'

'Did you see her?'

'See her? Yes, she hadn't ten rods the start of me but plunged into a lake and swam off like a duck, and there wasn't a canoe to follow her with.'

The Englishman leaned back in his chair and called for another mug of 'alf-and-'alf, while Case smoked his cigar.

'I shan't go any farther west, I think,' at length observed the crestfallen John Bull.

'I should not advise anyone to go,' said Case, quietly. 'My brother once lived there, but he had to leave, although his business was the best in the country.'

'What business was he in, pray?'

'Lumbering—had a saw mill.'

'And they stole his timber?'

'Yes, and saw logs, too.'

'Saw logs?'

'Yes; whole dozens of black walnut logs were spirited off and carried away in a single night. He tried every way to prevent it; had men hired to watch his logs, but it was no use. They would whip them away as easily as if there had been nobody there. They would steal them out of the cove and even out of the railways.'

'Good gracious!'

'Just to give you an idea of how they steal out there—did you ever work in a saw mill?'

'Never.'

'Well, one day my brother bought an all-fired fine black walnut log—four feet three at the butt and not a knot in it.

He was determined to keep that log anyhow, and hired two canny Scotchmen to watch it all night. Well, they took a small demijohn of whisky with them, soaked the log up the side of the hill above the mill, built a fire and then sat down to play keerds, just to keep them awake you see. 'Twas a monstrous big log—back two inches thick. Well, I was saying, they played keerds and drank whisky all night, and as it began to grow light went asleep a-straddle of the log. About a minute after daylight George went over to the mill to see how they were getting on, and the log was gone!'

'What were the Scotchmen doin'?'

'Sitting on the bark. The thieves had drove an iron wedge into the butt-end which was pointed down hill, and hitched a yoke of oxen and pulled it right out, leaving the shell and the Scotchers sitting a-straddle of it fast asleep!'

The Englishman here arose, dropped his cigar stump into the spittoon, looked at his watch, and said he thought he'd go on deck and see how far he'd be down the river before morning.

Drunkenness and Crime in Scotland.

Mr. John Welsh, the superintendent of police, Perth, has published a careful pamphlet, full of statistics, on the inadequacy of existing Acts of Parliament against drunkenness in Scotland—"the national sin," or, as he also figuratively calls it, "the moral marsh," north of the tweed. Some of the results of Mr. Welsh's statistical tables are very striking, says the Pall Mall Gazette. The average daily number of prisoners through Scotland was, in 1868, 1,538 males and 1,019 females—total, 2,557; against a total of 1,940 (males, 1,264; females, 676) in 1751. The total number of prisoners under twenty-one years of age through Scotland in 1868 was 4 017 males, 1,761 females—total, 5,778; being about a fifth of the whole number of prisoners in the year, which is 26,843. It is astonishing to learn that of this last whole number of prisoners, 5,539 (3 288 males and 2,251 females) could not read, and 14,187 more (8,047 males and 6,140 females) could only read with difficulty; while as to writing, 11,914 (6,354 males and 5,560 females) could not write, 602 more (506 males and 96 females) could only sign their names, and 12,352 (7,909 males and 4,443 females) could write only with difficulty.—There remain among 26,843 prisoners in Scotland, 7,117 who could read well, and 1,975 who could write well. The Perth superintendent of police, who should be a good judge, attributes most of this crime and ignorance to the public-houses, and he urges further legislation—1, to prohibit publicans from selling drink to be consumed on the premises to persons under twenty-one years of age; 2, to deny to grocers licensed to sell drink the power of selling a less quantity than a quart; 3, to prevent the granting of licenses to men engaged as workmen, who entice fellow working men to their houses, and cannot properly look after them; 4, to deny licenses to females; and 5, to increase the severity of the law against unlicensed houses, or (as they are called) 'shebeens,' making owners as well as occupiers liable to penalties. The reasons for these recommendations are given at length in the pamphlet, which deserves attention. A table giving the length of the police forces and the number of vacancies in each of the eight principal towns of Scotland during the six years 1863-68, shows that inducements to the police to remain are wanting—a necessary cause of inefficiency; the force is, on an average, swept out every four years; and Mr. Welsh says that the smaller towns are not in a better position. In 1868, the total police forces of Glasgow, Edinburgh, Dundee, Aberdeen, Paisley, Greenock, Leith, and Perth was 1,593, and the number of vacancies and changes 314; in 1867, the corresponding numbers were 1,525 and 296.

HINTS ON TRAVELLING.

Don't wear your best bonnet, or people will think you have no better opportunity to display it. Plain straw is better taste. Light colored gloves are an abomination for travelling costume. Pack your jewelry in your trunk instead of hanging it about your person, and don't judge your fellow travelers by the splendor of their dress or the number of yards in their mantillas. Disagreeable mistakes have been made in this way. Don't deem it useless to be polite to the spectacled old lady, or the pale young girl. They may not belong to the butterfly ranks of fashion, but they are none the less capable of appreciating that kind of etiquette which springs from the heart. Don't talk and laugh loudly and boisterously. Your private affairs may be very engrossing to yourself, but they are hardly expected to interest the public. Don't load yourself with parasols, fans, baskets, parcels, shawls, reticules and books. The less "hand baggage" you can get along with the better. Don't discover just as the boat is on the point of starting, that you have left your shawl and send your luckless escort back to find it, unless you want to dispel him thoroughly with lady travelers. Don't begin to complain when you are a little tired. Some ladies think it interesting to behave like grown-up children on such occasions. Nobody likes to hear people fret over evils that cannot be helped. Remember that others besides yourself may be fatigued. Don't find fault with all the hotel accomodations that you meet. Don't scrutinize the napkins and turn the plates upside down and declare it impossible to eat your breakfast without a silver fork, and allude ostentatiously to "what you have been accustomed to." Those who know the world will need no more convincing proof that you are outside the pale of really good society. Just make up your mind before you start out from home that you will look on the sunniest side of everything, enjoy yourself as much as you possibly can, and use every endeavor to make the journey as pleasant to those around you, and it will be very singular if somebody isn't the better for it!

THE SOLDIER AND THE THISTLE.—The following gives the rather curious origin of the Scottish coat-of arms. Every small thing at the right moment may turn the tide of fortune and save a nation. Rome was once saved by the crackling of geese, and many a deliverance, even in our own nation's history during its three wars, has been due to causes equally trifling. One time the Danes invaded Scotland, and they prepared to make attack upon a sleeping garrison. So they crept along barefooted as still as possible, until they were almost up to the spot. Just at that moment a barefoot soldier stepped on a great thistle—the hurt made him utter a sharp, shrill cry of pain. The sound awoke the sleepers, and each man sprang to his arms. They fought with great bravery, and invaders were driven back with much loss. So you see that little saved Scotland, and ever since it has been placed on their seal as their national flower.

A common tradition attributes the black line or cross upon the shoulders of the ass to the blow inflicted by Balaam, in allusion to which a willing, who had been irreverently sneering at miracles in the presence of Dr. Parr said, triumphantly:—'Well, doctor, what say you to the story of Balaam's ass and the cross upon its shoulders?' 'Why, sir,' said the doctor, 'I say that if you had a little more of the cross and a great deal less of the ass, it would be much better for you.'

A STRAIGHT REPLY.—A bunch-backed Irishman lately arrived in England, and was asked by a fellow-countryman if he came direct from Dublin. 'I came straight from there,' replied he. 'Did you,' said the other, 'then by Saint Patrick, you must have been miserably warped by the way.'

HINTS OF THE COAST ISLANDS.

(New York Times)

A writer in the journal named, who in a letter of several columns tells the story of "Life on a Guano Island," thus speaks of the feathered population in the country of his exile:—Among the chief objects of interest on Baker's Island to a visitor are the birds, and they are well worthy of study. During the first night of my stay on this forlorn spot it seemed at times as if the house were besieged by innumerable tomcats; then the tumult resembled the suppressed bleating of goats, and I heard noises as of bats grinding their teeth in rage; again it was the querulous cooing of doves; and soon the chorus was strengthened by unearthly screams, as of ghosts and demons in mortal agony. But on going forth into the darkness to learn the cause of this infernal pandemonium, all was apparently calm and serene, and the radiant constellation of the Southern Cross, with the neighbouring clouds of Magellan, lorded me peacefully in the face, while from another quarter of the heavens the Pleiads shed their "sweet influences" over the scene. The most quiet time of night is about daybreak, when they seem to subside into "cat-naps," preparatory to the labors of the day. By day many of the birds range on tireless wing over leagues of ocean in quest of fish. But still the number of those that remain about the island is so great as to defy computation; and as you pass through their haunts, in some places they rise in such clouds as actually to darken the air above you. The eggs of some of the birds are of fine quality, and are much esteemed by the Americans, as well as the Hawaiians on the island. I have of a bird called the oo-o-ke are the most valued. This name is an imitative word, derived from the cry of this restless creature, and is applied to it by the Hawaiians, who have quick intuitions in onomatopœtic matters. In regard to moral character, the birds of Baker's Island may be divided into two classes—those which make an honest living, and those which are robbers. The gannet stands at the head of the respectable birds, and is a thrifty and honest citizen of the air. The representative of the thievish class is the frigate-pelican, or man-of-war hawk (Tachypetes aquilus). This bird has a dense plumage of gloomy black, a light, wiry body, that seems made for fleetness, and wings of even greater spread than the gannet's. Its tail is deeply forked, its bill is long, sharp and viciously hooked. Audubon regards the frigate-bird as superior, perhaps, in power of flight to any other. It never dives into the ocean after fish, but will sometimes catch them while they are leaping out of the water to escape pursuit. It is often content to glut itself with the dead fish that float on the water, but it depends mostly for a subsistence upon robbing other birds. It is interesting to watch them thus occupied. As evening comes on, these pirates may be seen lying in wait about the islands for the return of the heavily-laden fishing birds.—The smaller ones they easily overtake, and compel them to disgorge their spoils; but to waylay and levy blackmail upon these powerful gulleons, the gannets, is an achievement requiring strategy and address. As the richly-laden gannet approaches the coast of his island home, he lifts himself to a great height, and steadily rears himself along with his mighty pinions, until he sees his native sands extending to dazzling whiteness below. Now sloping downward in his flight, he descends with incredible velocity. In a moment more he will be safe with his affectionate mate, who is awaiting his return to the nest. But all this time he is watched by the keen eye of the man-of-war hawk, who has stationed himself so as to intercept the gannet in his swift course. With the quickness of thought, the hawk dart upon him, and, not daring to attack boldly in front, he pinches him by the tail and threatens to upset him, or he seizes him at the back of the neck and lashes him with his long wings. When the poor gannet, who cannot manœuvre as quickly as his opponent, finds himself pursued, he tries to buy his ransom by surrendering a portion of his fishy cargo, which the hawk, swooping down, catches before it has had time to reach the earth. If there is but one hawk this may be a sufficient toll; but if the unwieldly gannet is set upon by a number of these pirates, he utters a cry of real terror and woe, and rushing through the air with a sound like a rocket, in his rapid descent, he seeks to alight on the nearest point of land, well knowing that when once he has a footing on terra firma not even the man-of-war hawk dare come near him. The man-of-war hawk is provided about its neck and chest with a dilatable sack, of a blood-red color, which it seems to be able to inflate at pleasure. On calm days, about noon, when the trade-wind lulls, giving place to a sea breeze that gently fans the torrid island, these light, feathery birds may sometimes be seen at an immense height balancing themselves for whole hours without apparent motion on their outstretched vans. Whether they are able to increase their specific laxity by inflating their pouches with a gas lighter than the atmosphere, or whether they are sustained by the uprising column of heated air that comes in on all sides from the

The Pope's Influence.

Pope Pius IX has issued a letter to all the faithful, granting indulgence and remission of sins, to all who comply with certain specified conditions of penitence and philanthropy. The gist of the matter is contained in the following extract:

"We wish," he says, "on this occasion (the convening of the Ecumenical Council) to open with open lap the celestial treasury of Indulgences, of which the dispensation is confided to us, so that encouraged thereby by true repentance, and purified from all sin in the sacrament of penance, the faithful may approach with greater confidence the Throne of God and obtain by his opportune assistance His mercy and His grace.

With this intention we announce to the whole Catholic world an indulgence in the form of a jubilee. In the name of God great powerful and most merciful, supported by the authority of the apostles St. Peter and St. Paul, in virtue of our power in binding and loosing with which our Lord has invested us, however unworthy, we grant a Plenary indulgence and the remission of their sins as it is granted in the year of Jubilee, to all the faithful of both sexes, whether dwelling in our much loved city of Rome or having come within her wall, who shall, between the first day of June and the day closing the Ecumenical Council, convoked by us, visit the basilicas of St. John Lateran, the Prince of the apostles, and St Maria Majora, or at least visit one of them twice and devoutly pray there for some time for the conversion of sinners for the propagation of the faith, and for the peace, tranquility and triumph of the Catholic Church; who in addition to the accustomed fast of the Ember days, shall fast for three days even not consecutively, that is to say, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday, any who in the course of time shall have confessed their sins, reverentially received the holy sacrament of the Eucharist, and giving some alms to the poor according to their power. To all not living in Rome we grant the same Plenary Indulgence and the remission of their sins on condition of their visiting the churches which shall be pointed out by the ordinary of the place or the Vicars to whom the charge of souls is committed and fulfilling the conditions already spoken of. This indulgence is applicable to souls in purgatory. Travellers by land or sea may gain it by fulfilling the conditions and visiting twice the cathedral or parish church of the place where they are.

THE ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION OF THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH.—The substance of the O'Farrell papers relating to the attempted assassination of the Duke of Edinburgh in Australia, and which the Government objected to produce to the House of Commons, has been published in the Dublin papers. From replies made by O'Farrell to the Australian Colonial Secretary, and from entries made in O'Farrell's diary, it would appear that a band of nine men had been appointed under oath, by the Fenian authorities, to take three lives in retaliation for the three Fenian Manchester executions, and, in order to strike terror, one of these lives was to be that of His Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh. The balloting for these nine men took place in Sydney, but most of them appear to have returned to England, imagining that the work to be done by them lay at home chiefly. If the individual to whom the assassination of the Prince had been allotted, should falter, and decline to do it, he was himself to be made away with. A formal sealed warrant, like a special instrument had been sent out by the central Fenian authority, and its execution fell upon O'Farrell, who, though he did not shrink from its performance, was glad that his attempt had failed. In reading the replies of O'Farrell, it is hard to avoid being confirmed in the belief that Whelan was merely the vain and miserable tool of a conspiracy, that had resolved on taking the life of Mr. McGee, for his bold and frequent denunciations of Fenanism.—Montreal Witness.

AGRARIAN MURDERS IN IRELAND.—The following is a list of agrarian murders and attempts at murder that have taken place since the winter of 1867:—December 20, 1867, county Longford, John Poynton, shot at; April 15, 1868, county Westmeath, Mr. Featherstonehaugh, J. P. and D. L., shot dead; April 27, 1868, county Meath, John Donohue, shot fired into his house; July 6, 1868, Queen's County Philip Turner, murdered in a wood; August 14, 1868, county Tipperary, Constable Samuel Morrow, shot dead; August 14, 1868, county Tipperary, Jeremiah Germon, shot dead; August 14, 1868, county Tipperary, Mr. Scully, shot dead; August 14, 1868, county Tipperary, Constable Pat. Colleton, wounded; August 14, 1868, county Tipperary, Constable Richard Cahill, wounded; August 14, 1868, county Tipperary, Constable William Kelly, wounded; December 31, 1868, county Tipperary, Mr. Cole Baker, Esq., J. P., shot dead; April 24, 1869, county Tipperary, W. H. Bradshaw, Esq., J. P., shot dead; April 28, 1869, county Westmeath, Captain Tarleton, shot dead. To which we must add, as partaking of the same character, though not strictly agrarian, the murder of Mr. Ashtell, the station-master of Mullingar.

AN EXTRAORDINARY EGG.—Mr. John Serrel, of Brooklin, L. I., forwarded a monmouth egg (which was laid in the hat of the eccentric professor) with the following explanatory memorandum:

"It was produced by a hen two years old, which was a cross between a Dorking and a Game-fowl. It weighs three and a half ounces. We get, on an average, four such eggs a week. The best fowl I ever raised were a cross from a Dorking and the Indian fowl. They are first-class for the table, strong and vigorous to raise, and are good layers. A pullet which I raised produced eighty-four eggs in as many days. They were from three and a half to four ounces each. I purchase all the feed for my poultry, and find it pays me pecuniarily as well as in pleasure."

BUCKLEY.—Patrick Buckley was sent to the Lunatic Asylum yesterday, but the mid-day train, in charge of constable Frank Graham. It was hoped by his friends that liberation from gaol would lead to the restoration of his deranged faculties, but during his stay at home he has shown no signs of improvement, and it has been deemed necessary to send him where his case will have systematic medical treatment.

James Hamilton, who is well known in Mitchell, Stratford and Seaforth as a dangerous character, and another person named Neil McDermitt, have been arrested and committed to the county gaol of Perth, for trial, for robbing the house of the Rev. Mr. Renwick, Canada Presbyterian minister, Elma, of $300.

"Those about to marry" may be interested in learning that the devotees of married life contributed the sum of $36,478 to the Ontario Government last year for Licences to perpetrate matrimony. In Quebec the amount only reached to $3,575. In Nova Scotia, $3,250.

OUR BANKS.

The Government of the Dominion of Canada seem to have done all in their power to unsettle the money institutions of Canada, and to ruin the merchants of the country.—Aided by the Bank of Montreal they have now within a short period closed the Bank of Upper Canada, the Commercial and the Royal Canadian. They are reckless in their expenditure, and must have money, and in order to get it would destroy the whole country. Nothing could more emphatically declare their need of money than their late efforts to obtain it, by means of forced loans of all the gold and silver in the Provinces. We are glad to see such a bold front opposed to them, and hope it will be so maintained until out of danger of their attacks.

Their bungling legislation on Bank of Issue or legal tenders, and their new bantling—Mr. Rose's scheme—has to some degree left an uneasiness in commercial circles that is damaging to trade and progress. This, we trust, will soon cease, and with the renewal of the Bank charters, will return a more settled policy in the currency of the country. In the meantime the community may rely on the soundness of those banks that are doing business amongst us. The Ontario Bank report, published last week, is very encouraging. After paying an annual dividend of $160,000 there is $65,416.78 to the credit of profit and loss, and a reserve fund of $250,000. This is one-eighth of their capital. The Ontario Bank appears, therefore, to be in a very safe state, and is under very able and wise management. It is expected that the Bank will remove its head-quarters to Toronto as soon as it can.

The Bank of Toronto is also in a prosperous state, and well managed, its stock being in demand. These are the Banks with which this community is concerned, as all our business is done by them; and but for them the country would have been ruined since the introduction of Galt's legal tender scheme. These banks, too, should have the support of the public in the way of deposits, &c. They provide the money that pays for the farmer's wood, wheat and other produce. They have provided the money that has kept our mills at work and our lumbermen; in fact, to them we must look for money to go on, and they should receive all the moral and money aid the country can give. They are safe, and with them should farmers make their deposits. Just let them be crushed, and where will money come from to pay for the produce of the coming harvest, which at present promises to be abundant. The legal tender scheme should be repealed, and the Bank of Montreal return to the same position it occupied in past years, and there will be less liability for bank failures, as it will then cease to be the interest of a government or of a bank to effect them.

The Royal Canadian Bank.

The President and Directors of the Bank have petitioned Parliament to be allowed a further period of ninety days, within which they may resume specie payment to avoid forfeiture of their charter. They also petition to be allowed to amalgamate with any other Banking Institution, or to sell or dispose of the assets of the said Bank. In opposition to this, some of the Stock holders have sent in a petition expressing want of confidence in the President and Directors, and charging them with mismanagement, with making false statements of assets and liabilities, with having large discounts themselves, trafficking in the funds and stock of the Bank contrary to the charter, and they pray that no legislation be taken this Session until the annual meeting in July.

It is this unhappy state of contention between the directors and stock holders that worked some of the disaster to the Bank already, and the government taking advantage thereof, thought to divert public attention from their ruinous Banking scheme.

Bill holders, however, are still safe. The Bills of the Bank cannot be purchased much below their face value, so that Directors may injure the future prospects of the Bank, but they cannot injure the Bill holders.

There are considerable doubts in the mind of the public whether Mr. Rose will again bring up his scheme. Some think that he will as soon as the members begin to leave for home at the close of the Session. In the face of so much opposition they will hardly venture, as certain defeat would stare them in the face next session.

The body of Mr. George Barton, who was drowned on Thursday last in Lake Simcoe, was found on the 12th in 70 feet of water by a squaw who saw him sink. He had a large amount of money in his pocket at the time.

TOWN COUNCIL.

The Council met. Present—Messrs. Downing, English, Teale, Stevenson, Edmonson, Helm, Dickson, Claxton, Chamberlain and Rutherford.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

Petition from Catherine McNaughton, asking aid, from Geo. Allen, asking the Council to fill up a drain in the rear of his building on Hunter Street; from R. Burnham and others, asking the Council to open the street from Simcoe to King Streets, between lots 5 and 6; from Joseph Sawdye, asking a sidewalk on the north part of Water street.

The first was referred to charity committee, with instructions to act; that of George Allen, to the health Inspector; that of R. Burnham and others, to a special committee, to report next meeting; that of Joseph Sawdye, to the street Inspector.

The Committee on Finance reported, recommending $100 more for the Protestant Home for this year.

The committee recommended that a record of inmates be kept for future information

They also recommend the payment of sundries $10.67, but considering it advisable to, that that arrangements be made by the Town Clerk, with some competent to furnish coffins at fixed rates.

They also recommended that the account of W Mercer & Bros., amount $6,00, be paid, but set forth that it is contrary to rule for the Fire Company to contract debts which the Council have to pay without their consent being first obtained

The committee also recommend the payment of $21.00 to Wm, Donnelly as night watch.

The also recommended that John Howden's services as constable be dispensed with, as there was no need for two constables all the time. They did so with reluctance as Mr. Howden had proved himself a very efficient officer.

On motion of Mr. Claxton, seconded by Mr. English, the Report was adopted, the last clause refering to Mr. Howden being omitted.

The name of Mr. Claxton was added to the Committee appointed to report on damage to property on Bethune street by the Railway.

The Inspector's Report was again laid over to next meeting.

On motion of Mr. English, seconded by Mr. Doherty, it was agreed that the Street Inspector make a culvert across the embankment on Mr. Dickson's property, if Mr. Dickson provide the lumber, and make the necessary wooden piping.

The Treasurer was directed to pay Mr. Canton, the sum of $15 for expenses in accordance with the recommendations of the public meeting.

The Council appointed a special, committee to consider a memorial to the Governor in council to extend the limits of the Town, and to fix the Wards, and to report at next meeting.

Tuesday was fixed as a day for the sitting of the Court of Revision.

Mr. Toole gave notice of a motion he intended to introduce, to empower the Inspector to make certain improvements on certain streets.

The Clerk was instructed to prepare a detailed statement of expenditures on charities.

The Council adjourned for one week.

British Order of Good Templars.

Pursuant to adjournment the Quarterly Session of the Peterboro County Lodge of British Templars was held on Friday last, 11th instant, in the Temperance Hall, Hastings, at which a number of delegates and visitors from the different Lodges throughout the County were present.

The reports of the different officers shewed the Order, as a whole, throughout this County to be in a favorable standing, and from present appearances there is every prospect for its prosperity in the future.

The usual routine of business was then gone through with, during which, several of the members spoke at some length of the evils of intemperance and the object of British Templarism.

On motion the Lodge adjourned, to meet again in the Town of Peterboro, on the second Friday of September next, at one o'clock, p. m.

During the evening, the officers and members of the County Lodge were entertained at a supper got up by the ladies of Hastings Lodge, and which spoke most favorably of their catering abilities. After partaking of the good things provided, the meeting was called to order, when speeches interspersed with singing became the order of the evening. After spending a very pleasant evening, the meeting dispersed, all appearing to be well pleased with the manner in which the first session of the County Lodge held in Hastings had passed off.—Com.

MASONIC.—We are informed that the brethren in Peterboro, with visiting brethren from a distance, intend to celebrate the Festival of St. John the Baptist (Thursday the 24th) by attending St. John's Church, to hear a sermon by the Rev. W. J. Mackenzie, of Brighton. Service to commence at 7 o'clock, p. m. After the service there will be a Strawberry Festival in the Lodge Room. Upon this occasion, we understand, that the lady friends are to be invited. We suppose that they will not be put in possession of the secrets, but have no doubt they will spend a pleasant evening.

Mr. Robert Hamilton has just received extensive additions to his already large stock of heavy and shelf hardware, and electro-plated goods, to which he invites attention. Intending purchasers would do well to give him a call.

The Rev. Dr. Ormiston, of Hamilton, has declined an offer of $10,000 to go to Chicago. His Church has agreed to present him with a life policy, to be kept paid by them of $10,000.

COUNTY COUNCIL.

Tuesday, June 15

The Council met on Tuesday.

The Warden S. S. Peck, Esq., in the chair.

Present, Messrs. Reid, Young, McCarthy, McGillivray, Maher, F. Peck, Lang, Hall, Coughlin, Brown, Armstrong, Walton, Garbutt, Rogers, Probert.

Absent, Messrs. Clegg, Scott and Buck.

The minutes of the last sitting of the last session were read, and signed by the Warden. The Warden addressed the Council.

WARDEN'S ADDRESS.

To the Municipal Council of the County of Peterborough.

GENTLEMEN,—It is with much pleasure that I meet you in your representative character in this most important Session of the year.

I feel great pleasure in being able to congratulate you on the satisfactory state of our Finances, shown by the Treasurer's statement and bank account herewith submitted.

The equalising of the Assessment Rolls will require your careful consideration, so that each municipality may bear their just proportion of Assessment. In accordance with your instructions the offices have been offered to the Clerk of the Peace and the clerk of the County Court, and they have declined to accept them in consequence of their not being vaults attached. You are all aware that at the last Session of the Legislature of the Province of Ontario permission was given to County Councils to pass By-laws dispensing with the levying and collecting of the tax imposed on dogs; and as the counties adjoining this county have dispensed with the levying and collecting of the tax. I think it advisable for the Council to take the same course.

In company with the Warden of the County of Victoria, I examined the Bridges at Bobcaygeon and find that they must be replanked this season, and have since been notified that the Council of that County have instructed their warden to act jointly with this Council in making the necessary repairs; and further that they have appropriated a sum of money to be expended on the Boundary line south of Bobcaygeon, on condition that this Council grant an equal amount.

Your auditors have made their usual audit of the Treasurer's book to the first of June, and their Report will be laid before you for your information.

I herewith submit for your consideration the following communications:—

From the Registrar of the County, complaining of insufficient vault accommodations; from the Secretary of the Peterboro Protestant Home, praying for a grant in aid of the same; from Thomas Stewart, Sub treasurer of School moneys for Burleigh, resigning his office; from James Denwoodie, Esq., Reeve of the Township of Seymour in regard to the proposed Bridge over the Trent narrows; from Geo. Hilliard, Esqs., calling my attention to the unsafe state of the Nassau Bridge; from your Treasurer, submitting the estimates for the current year; also a statement showing the indebtedness of the various Municipalities for county rates, and the amount to the credit of each Township for non resident tax collected; from the County Engineer, being a report on the progress made by the contractor in the construction of the Mud Lake and Pigeon Creek Bridges.

In conclusion I would most earnestly submit for your favorable consideration the propriety of the appointment of a committee, and placing at their disposal a sum of money to be applied in relieving the actual wants of Emigrants, who may come to our County to seek homes and employment, provided the Town town take joint action.

S. S. PECK,
Warden.

He also read the several communications referred to in the address. That one from Mr. Smith, Agent of the Bank of Toronto, shows the Finances in a very satisfactory state. Mr. Smith's letter.

BANK OF TORONTO,
Peterboro, 15th June, 1869.

S. S. PECK, Esq., Warden
County of Peterboro.

DEAR SIR.—Enclosed you will find statement of your Treasurer's account from 27th Jany. to this date. Since the last statement your Treasurer's account has been credited $18.35 interest on his current balance. The amount under discount is $2,000, a very satisfactory statement for me to make when compared with last year. I had to report at this date, $14,000 to the debit of your Treasurer.

Yours, very respectfully
A. SMITH, Manager.

On motion of Mr. Rose, seconded by Mr. Young, Messrs. Lang, Brown, Armstrong, F. Peck, Rogers, and the mover and seconder, were named a committee to whom were referred the address of the Warden.

On motion of Mr. F. Peck, seconded by Mr. Millar, the communications were referred to the several committees to which they relate.

The Auditors reported as follows:—

AUDITOR'S REPORT.

To the Warden and Council of the County of Peterborough.

GENTLEMEN:—

Your Auditors, in presenting their report, beg leave to state, that they have carefully examined the cash account, and vouchers therefor, of the County Treasurer, from the 1st of Jany. 1869, to the 1st of June, inst. and have found them correct.—We also beg leave to congratulate you on the very satisfactory condition of your finances, when compared with previous years, as shown by statements submitted by your Banker.

We further beg leave to inform you that we audited the accounts rendered by the various Sub-treasurer of school moneys with the exception of the Treasurer of Burleigh, who has not yet furnished us with his account. The returns are not all satisfactory to your Auditors, and to avoid further trouble, would suggest that some other provisions be made for the payment of school moneys.

Your Auditors have examined the estimated expenses of the County, for the present year, made by your Treasurer, and believe them to be as near correct as can be at present arrived at.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

JOHN J. HALL,
CHRISTOPHER BURTON, } Auditors.

County Council Rooms,
Peterborough, June 15th, 1869.

A communication from the Warden of the County of Victoria, was read in reference to an unsettled claim remaining since the separation of the Counties, against them.

The Warden stated to the committee that a committee from the County Council of Victoria would meet a committee from this Council to-morrow, on the subject of the communication.

Moved by Mr. Walton, seconded by Mr. Garbutt,—That a By law be prepared to dispense with the levying and collecting of dog tax in this County, and to dispense with the levying and Collecting of said tax this year.

Mr. Lang objected to the By-law, as Otonabee had already paid money this year for sheep, and if the law should be passed they would have to tax the people directly to pay it.

Mr. Walton was almost certain if Otonabee Council paid money, it was out out of last years dog tax.

Mr. Lang said the money is paid, as Otonabee always paid what was due, and wanted [illegible] there pay more? Dog taxes on hand.

Mr. Walton thought that if Otonabee had [illegible] Mr. Millar thought dogs ought to be taxed, and would be glad if the tax was two or three dollars. He would willingly pay it. He would just as soon pay a tax for a dog as a cow or a horse; and the tax prevented parties keeping dogs who do not feed their dogs, and thus force them to devour sheep.

Mr. Rose addressed the [illegible] principle; too many kept dogs who did not feed them, and they went and devoured sheep for sustenance. The old law was a premium for killing sheep, but it was now changed for the better, as they only got ½ of their price.

Mr. Walton believed they put on enough to cover the one third, and still got the full price, and thus to kill their sheep was a ready market at a good price. If the present law was abolished, farmers would protect their sheep, which they did not now.—

Mr. Lang was in favour of the law continuing in force as it was a kind of farmer insurance company, and was easily paid, a dollar for a dog was nothing.

Mr. Coughlin was in favour of the tax.—

Mr. Armstrong was in favour of passing the By-law, as he found all were not taxed for their dogs; if all were taxed he would not complain. In Belmont there were no sheep, and thought it wrong to tax dogs there.

Mr. Brown thought the dog-tax right, if carried out right, but this was not the case, and the old law offered a good market for sheep. He was in favour of Mr. Walton's motion.

The Warden remarked that we had 100 miles of frontier where the tax did not exist, and we by this were forced to pay for damage done by other counties.

Mr Garbutt regretted that the dog tax could not be levied the people had their dogs, and one case was known where the party denied he had a dog, but the dog hearing the Assessors voice and barked up out of the cellar at him.

A division being called for, the motion to pass the By-law was carried.

Messrs. Lang, Walton, and Rogers, were appointed to a committee to confer with the committee referred to from Victoria County.

Mr. Maher reported on the state of Burleigh Bridges and Lakefield Bridge, declaring that Burleigh Bridge required planking and Lakefield being rebuilt. He also said that the Nassau Bridge was in a dangerous state, the report was referred to the Road & Bridge committee.

Mr. Rose moved, seconded by Mr. Brown, that the sum of $50 be granted to repair the Bridge over the Ouse, on the boundary between Dummer and Asphodel, and that this be referred to the Finance committee. Referred.

Moved by Mr Rose, seconded by Mr. Armstrong, that the sum of $50 be granted on the road between 29.30 from 4 to 12 concessions of Dummer, and 11 &12 of Belmont provided Dummer and Belmont granted a like sum. This was also referred to the committee on Finance.

Moved by Mr. Walton, seconded by Mr. Probert, that a By-law be now read for a first time to dispense with the dog tax.

Mr. Lang remonstrated with the unusual manner of hurrying a By-law through the first day before all the members were present. Mr. Walton agreed to defer it till to-morrow.

The Council adjourned to let the committees prepare reports.

WEDNESDAY.

The Council passed the greater part of the day in Committees.

In the afternoon they met in Council.

All the members present but Mr. Buck.

The minutes of previous meeting were read and signed.

On motion of Mr. Rogers, seconded by Mr. Rose, the Committee on the Warden's Address reported.

On motion of Mr. Rogers, seconded by Mr. Walton, the Committee who were appointed to confer with the Committee from the Victoria Council reported, recommending that the unsettled balance in the Treasurer's book against the County of Victoria be not enforced, but that the same be considered paid. The report was received and adopted.

On motion of Mr. F. Peck, seconded by Mr. Garbutt, a By-law to provide for certain sums for School purposes, was read a first time. It was subsequently passed and signed.

The equivalent for 1869 is:—

Asphodel, $400; Belmont, &c., $120; Burleigh, &c., $260; Douro, $460; Dummer, $250; Dysart, $60; Dunsmore, $130; Galway, $70; Harvey, $60; Monaghan, $175; Minden, $90; Otonabee, $500; Smith, $500; Snowdon, $45; Stanhope, $90;

On motion of Mr. Walton, the Council went into committee of the whole on the second reading of the By-law to dispense with dog tax.

Messrs. Scott, Garbutt, Rose, Coughlin, Lang, Millar, spoke against the By law.

Mr Lang moved that it be not passed, but that the committee rise and report on it at the Jany. session.

Messrs. Walton, Clegg, the Warden, and Mr. Armstrong, were in favor of dispensing with the tax.

Mr. S. S. Peck moved that the By-law be passed, and take effect on the 1st of Jany. this was carried.

Mr. Scott moved on the 3rd reading, that it be referred back to committee, with instruction to report at the Jany. session.

This was lost by a vote of 9 to 8.

Against it—Mr. Young, Maher, McCarthy, Brown, F. Peck, Armstrong, Walton, Probert and Clegg. 9.

For the motion—Messrs. Rose, Scott, McDonald, Lang, Millar, Coughlin, Garbutt, Rogers, 8.

The City Bank, of Montreal, has published a very elaborate report. That part of it we can review, omitting figuring exercises, we give below, and as it is drawn up by Mr. Workman, President, and Secretary of the Dominion Agricultural, it will afford another proof of what skilled hands can accomplish in Government Banks and banking schemes. The report says:—

Touching what is called the currency question and banking schemes presently under the consideration of the Dominion Parliament, the Board would respectfully offer the following considerations:—

It is admitted on all hands that in mineral resources, and other fields of enterprise, this country is rich in the extreme, and that all we require to develope these stores of wealth, is capital; that to retain capital in the country, or create more from what we have, would be a policy wise and beneficial. Hence the wisdom and excellence of our present banking system, which, in imitation of the Scottish system of banking, so successfully conducted in that country, utilizes our resources to so much advantage in a new country.

Out of banks of under three millions of gold, which in good old times, before Governments began to tamper with banks, was, by long experience discovered to be the minimum, the volume, when commercial necessities required it, can be enlarged to the extent of four or five millions more, without one dollar increase of Gold for its basis, but upon property equal to gold, say the specie in the hands of the people of the country, or any other important example, which when at market bring back the gold.

Thus the banking circulation of the country, based on gold, or the always convertible representative of gold, has for its security a foundation which during fifty years never, in the greatest money crisis, faltered or flinched By the famous Minister's measure now before Parliament, this circulation, in place of being based upon and representing the specie and property of the country, will represent nothing; yea, worse than nothing, it will represent debt, a debt, too, of the worst kind, the gold of our country departed for it, and by it; for when the Government lays their hands upon the eleven millions of our hard metal it will vanish like a snow bank in early spring, and when another emergency similar to the Trent affair arrives, or any persons threatened or real run on the neighbouring Government, where will the gold be. Where will the Government debt be, these paper promises from which alone the gold is to come to redeem our flanking circulation? In what market will they bring the gold? Not certainly here, for the Government will have already got it themselves, and no doubt spent it. Not in England, for a very ripple in the relations of this country, with the United States so frightens English Capitalists as to render our Government Bonds almost unsaleable there. We have the experience of the Trent affair for this, and more recently Mr Summer's speech, which had a marked effect upon our Government securities. On its arrival they fell five per cent in one day. Indeed it is obvious to common sense, that as a basis of safety, or reliability in time of trial, no species of obligation would as an asset be more worthless than our Government debt

Instead of being able to redeem their debt, or advance gold upon it to aid the Banks during trouble, real or threatened, which in all fairplay they should do, they would themselves be most in need of gold—they would be borrowers in place of lenders or advancers.

Their Bonds would be at large discount, while the Banks would have to redeem at par—what a chance for sharpers!

The conclusion from all this is very apparent that if ever such a project as the Finance Minister's or any project at all akin to it reaches a reality, be its advent what it may, its exit; and its end, and that soon, must be an irredeemable currency and wide spread ruin. Politically and geographically situated as we are, we are taught the lesson that Canada is the last country in the world to base upon the debt of its Government the redemption of its Banking Currency. Nor would we have to wait for the working or winding up of this scheme to suffer from it, its embarrassment to the trade of the country, at the very outset would be very great.

It is proposed by the measure that the whole banking circulation of the county shall be equal only to the gold of the country, less 20 per cent which the banks must hold in reserve to redeem Government Bills. Now the reserve of gold upon which the present bank circulation is floated averages in the Provinces of Quebec and Ontario about two and three quarter millions $3,750,000

From which are to reduct the 20 per cent. above named..... 488,333

This leaves about two and a quarter millions 2,291,667

which by Mr. Rose's plan will be the total amount of currency which the banks will be able to float upon their present reserve held against circulation proper.

But the average volume of bank currency which they now float by the same gold is about ($12,000,000) twelve millions of dollars, and, when the crop is to be moved, it sometimes reaches $15,000,000. It did so in October last.

We shall have thus a depletion from the banking accomodation of the country, as compared to our present volume of money in the country, of about nine and three quarter millions of dollars in ordinary times, and over twelve and a half millions in the crop moving season,—an actual money deficiency or with drawling of this amount from the country, and every dollar of money, put into the trade of the country to decrease this deficiency, must be in hard gold. Where did it come from? By our present system, filth in the crop or other commercial staple float the currency, which floats the crop to market, which brings the gold. By the Finance Minister's scheme the gold must be obtained first, the moving of the crop second. Where is the gold to come from? How is the crop to be moved?

Was there ever any project seriously presented to an intelligent commercial community more unreasonable, or any measure which threatens with more deadly aim, not only trade and commerce, but every interest in the country?

It is not pretended that our present system of Banking is faultless, it needs several amendments, some of the mentioned in the Finance Minister's project. These can be adopted however without any shock to the commerce of the country, without yielding up our gold into the hands of the Government and accepting as a basis of redemption of our circulation, paper promises instead of our own hard metal, a process which would speedily bring grief to every merchants' door, and flood the country with an irredeemable paper currency.

The whole, nevertheless, most respectfully submitted.

WILLIAM WORKMAN,
President.

POOR HENRY IRVINE.—Alas! and alack-a-day, that Henry J. Irvine should have come to such a sad end. Died last week, in a fit of delerium tremens. Henry J. Irvine, age —we don't know how old the poor unfortunate was, but he lived long enough to prove that if it were not for his love for strong drink, he might have occupied a high position in the land. Possessed of fine talents, of a genial disposition, having influential friends, and coming of a good old Irish stock, his future was bright if the black cloud which has hung like a pall over the pathway of so many brilliant men, had not covered him with its terrible shadow, giving not even a glimmering of that silver lining which sometimes buoys men up with hope the most despairing. Henry J. Irvine held at one time Lieutenants Commission in Her Majesty's service; one of his brothers is a Colonel of Artillery, now stationed in Malta; another brother is an eminent Barrister in Dublin, all in good circumstances, and from whom, for several years past, he received regular remittances But these remittances had far better have been retained, for they only fed the flame which was acting like a consuming fire, and which at last tormented him even as the flames of hell. Poor Irvine! how often his friends have tried to throw a cordon round his pathway to keep out the tempter, but how unavailing is known not only to those friends, but to those who stood ready to get his money and help him along the downward road. His sad history and sudden end convey an important lesson, which it were well those who have commenced to walk the same road would learn before it is too late. "Too late!" those were the last words poor Irvine spoke. Intelligencer.

A Band of disguised armed men rode up to a county jail at Manchester, Tenn., a few nights ago, called the jailer out, presented their pistols at him, and demanded the keys. These were quickly surrendered, the jail entered, and two negroes, awaiting trial on a charge of rape upon a white woman, seized, taken out to a neighboring tree and hanged. The band then rode away and have not been heard of since.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER.

A Family Medicine, well and favorably known for the past ten years, never failing in a single instance to give permanent relief when timely used, and we have never known a single case of dissatisfaction. Though the directions have been strictly followed, but on the contrary all are delighted with its operations, and speak in the highest terms of its Virtues and Magical effects.

THE CANADIAN PAIN DESTROYER has won for itself a reputation, as a blood purifier, alterative stomach tonic, unequalled in the history of medical preparations. It seldom fails to cure Dyspepsia, Liver Complaints, Indigestion, Heartburn, Sick Headache, Kidney Complaints, Acid Stomach Pyrosis, or Asthma, and restores to vital activity the system debilitated by suffering and disease.

Its magical and wonderful success in curing sudden colds, sore throat, coughs, Diptheria, pains in the side, loins and back, neuralgia, toothache, rheumatic and other pains in any part of the body and from whatever cause, has given it a place in every household and is last superseding all other preparations of the kind.

It is also an effectual and prompt remedy for scalds, burns, br ises, sprains, chilblains, cholera morbus, bilious colic, cholera infantum, dysentery, &c.

MOTHERS READ THIS.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and if administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

N. B.—Ask for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 23

SIR JAMES CLARKE'S

CELEBRATED FEMALE PILLS,

Prepared from a Prescription of Sir James Clarke, M. D., Physician Extraordinary to the Queen.

This well-known Medicine is no imposition but a sure and safe remedy, for Female Difficulties and Obstruction from any cause whatever; and although a powerful remedy, it contains nothing hurtful to the constitution. To married ladies it is peculiarly suited. It will in a short time bring on the monthly period with regularity.

In all cases of nervous and spinal affections, pain in the back and limbs, heaviness, fatigue on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, lowness of spirits, hysterics, sick headache, whites, and all the painful diseases occasioned by a disordered system, these Pills will effect a cure when all other means have failed.

☞ These Pills have never been known to fail, where the directions on the second page of the Pamphlet are well observed.

For full particulars, get a pamphlet, free, of the Agent.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind, is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

HORSES SAVED.—The lives of thousands of horses have been saved during the past year, and the credit is due to "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy." This preparation is being extensively used, and asserts from all the highest praise. Nothing of the kind has ever before been half so successful or given such universal satisfaction; it cannot be equalled. We can unhesitatingly recommend it, and would advise all who own horses to keep a supply of it on hand—it may be the means of saving your horse's life. Pillsberry's First Courtship.

The first time I ever tried to court a gal was when I was about 18 years of sidge, before my intellektooal faculties was fully developped. At that time I hankered after the gals the most kind and after the wimmen a great sight more, but I was a tremenjus bashful youth and didnot understand human nacher as well as I do now. The gal that I tride to court was a second cousin of mine, a darter of Deacon Jerubbabbel Pillsberry that fit in revolootionary war and used to smuggel goods across the Kanaday line. At the time I speak of, she was about thirty-2 years of sidge and had red hare and played onto a base viol.—(Speakin of the base viol, it has been abused more than any other musical implement on the face of the airth, exceptin the jawsharp and the tomtom.) My fare and burden dumsel that I thort was in love with me was rite on the base viol. She could rake the bestest music out of it of any man I ever heard.

The dulcimer strunes of that base viol [illegible] like the swinjus mogin of a lovesick Thomas cat in the 'witchin howers of nite,' when you're sleepy, and don't want to be serryadid.

Folks up our way used to say that Hannar Marier, (that's the gals fust 2 names,) good play the best mooseck they ever heerd but I allers noticed that it dident take but a pesky little of it to satisfy a feller.

Well I'd ben gittin a exection notion arter Hannar Marier for some 6 months previous to the time that I told my luv.—In them days I thort I was all so fired smart, but I have changed my mind considerably since then.

I used to taller my hair and chew spruce gum to sweeten my broth, and I thort I was the most fassinating yung man in the whole towen. That night I unbuzzomed myself to Hannar Marrier and told her how much I luved her, I never shall forget. It sticks on my crop even now like a long word on a stuttering man's tongue.

It was a calm, still nite in summer, just between hay and grass, and warm enuff to set in your shirtsleeves. All nature was hushed himself in repose. The gentle wind softly hushed thru leaves of the apple trees, and nothin was heerd to break the solemcholly stillness, exceptin now and then an ocasunal grunt from the hogpen. Hanner Marier sot on a three-legged stool in her father's barn-yard milkin the keows, and I sat on the ridge of a hog-pen fense a lookin at her and a wishin I was a three-legged stool so that I could hold so much lusciousness.

Sez Hanner Merrier to me, sez she:

'Juby,' (she allers called me Juby in them days,) 'Jaby,' sez she, 'what on airth are you thinkin about?'

'Hanner Marier,' says I, (putting my hand on my werskit and looking up to the heavings.) 'I was wishin I cood find sumbody to hav me; sum food hart that wud thump responsible to mine.'

'Why, you little fool,' says she, 'what do you mean by talking such stuff as that? You'd better run to your mother.

My nature being a sensitive one, that remark hurt my feelings and likewise astonished me to that extent that I lost my balance and fell off the fense right in amongst the hogs. Of course the hogs was riled at receivin such a unserrymonious call, (partikler'y as I'd never been interduced to 'em and dident bring my beerd with me,) so they pitched into me right and left.—One of 'em pulled a lock of hair out of my hed, (probably to remember me by;) and I honestly believe Hanner Marier put him up to it), and another subtracted the broadest part of my trowsers, (doubtless for the same purpose.

Well, I got out as soon as I could, and discivered to my astonishment that Hanner Marier hadent noticed my misfortin but was goin on with her milking just as though nothing had happened. Sez I to myself as I got out:

As long as she don't know nothing about the bizness I guess I won't say nothin about it, but it'll go on with my right hand on her shoulder, I bent over and whispered in her ear as follows:

Sez I,—

'Hanner Mariar, long has this big buzzom of mine yearned for thee, and long have I cherished thy bucbus imidge in the inside linen of my gizzard! Fly I oh fly with me to Squire Doolittle's front parlor, and let's get jined in the holy bonds of,—'

Just then I experyenced the most thrillin sensashun that can be imadgined. It seemed like a first-class airthquake, two tornadoes and a half a dozen rale rode smash ups together.

When I cum to my senses I fond myself on my hands an knees in the hose pond in the yard, and Hanner Mariar's father was bindin over me with the barn shovel in his hand.

'You little tarnel good-for-nothin young bantam; sez he. 'I'll larn ye to come round tryin to court my darter, a gal that's old enough to be your marm, and can play onto the base vial better than any other man in Vermont.

'How came I in here?' says I.

'Why, I nocked you in with this here shovel when you was standing over my darters shoulder a talkin your darnd nonsense to her. Now go rite home to your marm and git your britches mended an' wash your hands and don't never try to make luv to your grandmother agin.

'Cum up agin next Sunday nite, little boy,' sez Hanner Mariar, who stood there a laffin, 'and I'll play you a tune on the base vial.'

'Goll darn your base vial and too,' sez I, 'yure father's shovel has nocked all the nonsense out of me, and I'd rather hear it thunder than to hear your pesky old one-horse fiddle!'

I went home across lots, (on account of the damidged condishun of my trowsis) and I dident go a courting for nigh onto 5 years. Then I used to heart my dear Clarrisa, afterwards stepped out on me and married a Wiggins. But she repentid in sackcloth and hardwood ashes, and I'll jest say old boots agin youre crowned hat, Mister Eddytor that she'd give her best ground for one of my sweet looks, such as I used to send up to her.

In conclusion, Mister, I've about made up my mind that courtin is consarned tickelish bizness, and if aman don't understand himself and mind what he's about he'll find himself wuss off than a thieving woodchuck, with his tail ketched in a trap, or a greenhorn tryin to speculate in the ile bizness. All of which is respectably dedicated to you and your readers by

EXAMINER OFFICE.

To HENRY CHAMBERLAIN & SHAW, Cowney P.O County of Lennox, Ontario, Canada.

Kaner, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th., 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ankles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the weakness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonees Remedy; I believe it will cure you,

MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

Warden of the County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Dominion of Canada.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicine.

Perhaps no one medicine is so universally required by everybody as a cathartic, nor was ever any before so universally adopted into use, in every country and among all classes, to rout disease. The vegetable compound is mild and efficient purgative Pills. The curious result is, that it is a nearly infallible and far more effectual remedy than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it cured them; those who have not, know that it cures their neighbors and friends, and all know that what it does cure it does always do; that it never fails through any fault or neglect of its composition. We have thousands upon thousands of certificates of their remarkable cures of the following complaints, but such a catalogue fills every neighborhood, and we need not publish them. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates; containing neither calomel or any deleterious drug, they may be taken with safety by anybody. Their sugar coating preserves them ever fresh and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and correcting, wherever they exist, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, Listlessness, Lassitude and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore the healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice or Green Sickness, Bilious Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Palpitation of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continuously taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change these complaints disappear.

For Worms, in children or adults, they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppressed or Painful Menstruation, a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous where no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as this excellent remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in their estimation, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a protection against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or more than assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical, or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

As its name implies, it does Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, Mercury, Zinc, nor any other mineral or poisonous substance whatever, it in no-wise injures any patient. The number and importance of its cures in the cases described, are literally beyond account, and we believe without a parallel in the history of Ague medicines. Our pride is gratified by the acknowledgments we receive of the radical cures effected by it in obstinate cases, and where other remedies had badly failed.

Unacclimated persons, either resident in, or traveling through, miasmatic localities, will be protected by taking the AGUE CURE daily.

For Liver Complaints, arising from derangement of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the Liver into healthy activity.

For Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints, it is an excellent remedy, producing many truly remarkable cures, where other medicines had failed.

Prepared by DR. J. C. AYER & Co., Practical and Analytical Chemists, Lowell, Mass., and sold all round the world.

Poetry.

A PRAYER.

BY MATTHEW ARNOLD.

Thou, who dost dwell alone—
Thou, who dost know thine own—
Thou, to whom all are known,
From the cradle to the grave—
Save, O save!

From the world's temptations;
From tribulations;
From that fierce anguish
Wherein we languish;
From that torpor deep
Wherein we lie asleep;
Heavy as death, cold as the grave—
Save, O save!

When the soul, growing clearer,
Sees God no nearer;
When the soul, mounting higher,
To God comes no nigher;
But the arch-fiend Pride
Mounts at her side,
Foiling her high emprise,
Sealing her eagle eyes;
And when sh- fain would soar,
Makes idols to adore;
Changing the pure emotion
Of her high devotion
To a skip-deep sense
Of her own eloquence;
Strong to deceive, strong to enslave—
Save, O save!

From the ingrained fashion
Of this earthly nature
That mars thy creature;
From grief, that is but feigning;
From fear, that is but pelting;
From tears, that bring no healing;
From wild and weak complaining;
Thine old strength restoring—
Save, O save!

From doubt, where all is double,
Where wise men are not strong;
Where comfort turns to trouble;
Where just men suffer wrong;
Where sorrow treads on joy;
Where sweet things soonest cloy;
Where faiths are built on dust;
Where love is half mistrust,
Hungry, and barren, and sharp as the sea—
O set us free!

Selections.

The Lady with the Little Feet.

I.

'I was always fond of feet, you remember,' said Ranger.

But before I tell you what Ranger said next, I may as well mention who Ranger was, and the occasion of the communication in reference to his partiality for the useful extremities in question.

I can scarcely describe him, however, in the 'Who's Who' sense of his family, and had not made his acquaintance through the medium of any common friends. But I had met him from time to time in the course of my travels in most parts of the world, and had found him a well-bred, well-educated gentleman, full of what is called accomplishments, and talents that tell in society—as active as a queen's messenger, and as watchful as a 'special correspondent.'

I met Ranger in different places while I was moving about; but had I stayed in any one place I should have been equally certain to see him, for he was always on the move, and you could no more avoid meeting Ranger than you could avoid meeting the sun. I first came across him travelling in Germany, when he helped me out of a difficulty in which some frontier officials were concerned. His happy English face and pleasant savoir faire went a long way, I thought on that occasion, in persuading the hitherto impertinable Prussians that I was neither a smuggler nor a spy—though by the way he had no reason, beyond my representations, to believe that I was not both. I next met him ascending the great Pyramid in Egypt. We were both being bullied by our guides, and were enabled, by joining our forces, to escape with the payment of no more backsheesh than we had bargained for. Another encounter was at the Crown and Sceptre, Greenwich where we were both discussing whitebait; and after this we met again on Mont Blanc, during a senseless excursion of mine as far as the Grand Mulets. Among other places where he subsequently turned up was on board a steamer on the Mississippi; and after that I saw no more of him till we met in the Himalaya mountains, one morning when we had both gone out to see the snowy range in the sunrise agreed upon half ponies. That was the last I had seen of him until I met him in Paris, where he gave me the reminder recorded above.

You will suppose, perhaps, that I was as great a wanderer as he. Nothing of the kind. I had done a little travelling in my time, but he was always doing it. Wherever he was, he was sure to be going somewhere else, and regarded localities principally from a 'Bradshaw' point of view, as made for arrival and departure; though he certainly managed to make the most of them during his stay.

Nothing could be more natural, therefore, than my meeting him in Paris one day when I went to dine sous sols at the same place. We had a common taste—in summer at any rate—for taking the meal of the day in the open air, and a common taste, too, for not taking it alone if we could avoid it. So we joined our forces, as we had done on the Pyramid, and made as pleasant a party as I dare say could be made by any two men who are likely meet under such conditions.

It was when dinner was well-nigh disposed of, and we were discussing some Burgundy we both particularly liked—with British reticence in getting to our coffee—that Ranger began to be confidential, and seemed to think that I was bound to know the state of his affections at the period. It was then that he said—

'I was always fond of feet you remember. Not for vulgar purposes of progression, though I ought to be obliged to them in that particular, for people call me the Wandering Jew. But I need not tell you what I mean. I think a woman without a foot—that is to say a good foot, and of course a little foot—is not worth looking at. I like a face as well as most men.—A woman can't have too pretty a face for me'—this was a liberal confession at any rate—'but I insist that she must have a foot. And here, in Paris, at my hotel, I have found some feet that have, so to speak, carried me away with them. I have fallen in love with them, in fact.'

'What a charming closure!' I said, with the sympathy deserved by such a confidence.

'I trust that the face is worthy of the feet, and the lady worth of both.'

'Well,' he answered, with rather a fall in his enthusiasm, 'that is just what I am unable to tell you. The fact is I have not seen the lady as yet.'

'Then how the deuce have you seen her feet?' I asked, with brutal practicality. Then I added, 'Oh, I see—mysterious muffled lady, all veil—chance glimpse getting into a carriage, and so forth. Well, that is romantic at any rate, and rather creditable to your susceptibilities, considering that you have seen so much of the world.'

'No, not even that,' rejoined Ranger, who was a very good-natured fellow, and did not mind a little jesting at his expense; 'not even that: I have no idea whether the lady is tall or short, stout or thin, young or old. I have not even seen her shadow, and of course have not seen even the feet that have fixed my affections.'

'What have you seen then?' I asked, rather puzzled by this time.

'Well, I have only seen her boots,' he answered, rather artlessly, and disappointed at my want of feeling.

'Oh, I see,' said I; 'case of Cinderella and the Glass Slipper—Prince sees a brodequin in a bootmaker's shop—tree in it very likely—falls in love with it—vows he will never marry any lady whose foot cannot take the place of the tree. Why this bears the barber in the book, who fell in love with the wax lady in the shop window to say nothing of his prototype, Pygmalion.'

'Now don't be a fool,' said Ranger, losing his patience: 'I said I had seen the boots the boots at my hotel. Of course they were outside one of the doors.'

'Waiting to be cleaned,' I suggested, with a mischievous introduction of the prosaic element.

'Well, and if they were, what then?' asked Ranger almost fiercely. 'The only suggestion which such an arrangement makes to my mind is that the shoeblack ought to be a happy man. But this is the fact. Every night when I pass through the corridor—en premier at the Grand Hotel—on my way to my more elevated chamber, I see these bottines on the mat. Not always the same though. Sometimes they are of plain leather, kid or whatever it may be; sometimes they are not boots at all, but the sweetest things you ever saw in shoes.'

'You have surely not fallen in love with three ladies at once?' said I, reproachfully.

'No, no; don't, like a good fellow, talk nonsense,' said Ranger. 'Of course they belong to the same person; no other person could wear them. It is a case of the Glass Slipper as far as that fact goes, and I only wish I was in the position of the Prince. As it is I don't know what to do. What would you?'

'Well,' said I, 'if you wish me to take a practical view of the case, I should find out who occupied the room, identify her at the table d'hote, or wherever you may meet her in the hotel, and then move heaven and earth to make her acquaintance.'

'As if any man, not an idiot, didn't know that!' cried Ranger, impatiently. 'Why, I tell you, there are two of them.'

He had not told me that, but I took no notice of this little fact.

'But surely,' I further suggested, recurring to the main point, 'you would be in a fair way of finding her out if you watched the ladies at the hotel, and observed if there were any feet going about that seemed likely to fit the bottines? But what do you mean by there being two of them? Do you mean that there are two sets of boots belonging to equally small feet?'

'What I mean is this,' said Ranger, 'I have watched everybody in the hotel, and have seen feet in most of their varieties, but nothing capable of belonging to my bottines. If you were to observe the delicate rise of the instep from the toe, until it melts into the ankle—for of course my bottines are bottines, and none of your vulgar Wellingtons, Bluchers, what do you call them, with tassels—you would agree with me that there is not a foot to be seen in the whole hotel that would fit them.—But, however, I have progressed beyond the necessity for a general search. When I said there were two, I meant that there are two ladies occupying the same suite of rooms, which has only one entrance from the corridor, and that my boots are only one of the two pairs that are always on the door-mat.'

'And what are the others like?' I asked.

Ranger answered, in a tone of profound contempt, 'BEETLE CRUSHERS!'

'Perhaps you take too harsh a view of them,' said I, 'as Heinrich Heine seems to have done with regard to the feet of the ladies of Gottingen. He tells us, as you may remember, that he was earnestly engaged for years in the refutation of the too-prevalent belief that the ladies of Gottingen have not enormous feet. For this purpose he not only studied comparative anatomy, and made copious extracts from all works obtainable on the subject, but he also watched for hours the feet of the ladies as they passed him in the street. And in the erudite treatise which was the result of his labors, he made separate divisions:—'On Feet in general'—'On the feet of Antiquity'—'On Elephants' Feet'—'On Feet in connection with each other'—and so forth. I am not quite sure that he pronounced his readers in the case of the ladies of Gottingen, an it may be that you apply the severe epithet of 'Beetle-crushers' without an equally attentive study of the subject.'

Ranger laughed this time.

'At any rate,' said he, 'any ordinary feet would look like Beetle-Crushers beside my feet.'

Then returning to the practical point, I argued: 'But surely you have by this time identified the two occupants of the rooms, and after that there should be no difficulty, with a very little amount of the attention bestowed by Heine on a far wider subject, in distinguishing one from the other.'

'So you would think,' said Ranger, cynically, 'and so would all remarkably clever persons. But this is just what I have been trying to do for ten days, without success. 'There is no fashion in ladies' skirts which has gone out, 'and another fashion in ladies' skirts which has come in. In neither is any mystery made of the feet; but unfortunately my people will not adopt either one or the other. They neither wear hoops nor short dresses, but clinging drapery trailing on the ground, which defies any investigation, levelling in a common obscurity the "little mice" of the poet and such monstrous things as—Beetle-Crushers.'

Here the waiter seemed to think that coffee was imperative on us, so we went to coffee accordingly, or rather we allowed coffee to come to us, and, sparning the proffered 'Londres,' lit up such Havanas as are pearls beyond all price in Paris.

'And what is to be your next course of action?' I asked, resuming the subject; 'have you made the acquaintance of these ladies?'

'That is the only thing to be done,' replied Ranger; 'but I have not tried as yet. I have been too nervous to take the initiative, and they are not people, evidently, who are likely to talk to stray bachelors without some kind of inducement. Perhaps you might help me in the matter—if you don't mind a table d'hote dinner. My seat is exactly opposite theirs, and if we could get them to be just civilly conversational, I might, perhaps, establish something like an acquaintance. Not of course that this would necessarily gain me my information, but I should certainly seem nearer to it than now.'

Ever ready in the cause of friendship, I agreed to dine with him at the Grand Hotel on the following day.

II.

There is no need to apologise for asking a man to dinner at the table d'hote of the Grand Hotel unless the objection be to tables d'hote altogether. So I thought as I entered the gorgeous hall where the repast was served, and received such a sensation of gold ornaments and mirrors, lights, flowers, and silver plate, as was calculated to give an appetite at once by raising expectations—not, I am bound to say, likely to be disappointed—of the menu.

Ranger was waiting, and at once conducted me to a seat beside his own near the centre of the room. There were two vacant places opposite.

'Those are the places,' whispered Ranger, 'but of course there's a chance that they will not be filled.'

Just, however, as the preliminary oysters were placed on the table, two ladies threaded their way towards the chairs, and took possession of them with continental composure. A glance from Ranger was sufficient to satisfy me of their identity, and I was free to form further impressions for myself.

They were both young, but one was, I should say, several years younger than the other. I would not venture to guess the age of the elder, but that of the younger might be about eighteen. They were both pretty, more than pretty—but their styles were by no means alike. The elder was the darker of the two: her features, not more delicate; were somehow more piquante; there was more animation in her mouth, and her black beady eyes conveyed an inevitable impression of suppressed mirth. The younger and lighter, however, had at least equal attractions of her own. Her features were as delicate as those of her companion, and there was a delicious softness about her deep-blue eyes—a softness which indeed pervaded her, and gave the prevailing character to her beauty.

Other things being equal—which they never are—I should think it would be difficult to choose between the two.

Ranger had told me their names and relative positions on the previous night, for he had talked about them all the way from the Moulin Rouge, past the Madeleine, to the very door of the Varietes Theatre, where we finished the evening. The elder lady was a widow named Merridew, and the younger was a cousin of hers, named Pembroke, who lived under her protection. So, at least, Ranger had learned in the hotel, and in hotels a great deal more is known of most persons than their names, after a short residence.

Ranger, by the way, had not informed me of the fact which I now found apparent—that they were both such charming persons in appearance. Absorbed in the important question which he had set himself to solve, he made no observation upon mere matters of detail.

The dinner developed for some time in a highly satisfactory manner as far as the viands were concerned, and we paid a touching attention to widowhood by making considerable acquaintance with Cliquot. But we made no way at all in getting upon a speaking terms with our opposite neighbours. But for Ranger's sensibility in regard to them, I should have dashed into an an introductory remark—at the risk of a rebuff—which, however, one is not likely to get at a foreign table d'hote, even from English people. Apart, too, from Ranger's feelings, I was the stranger. He had been sitting opposite to them, at intervals, during ten days, and was plainly the one to take the initiative.

The two ladies in the meantime talked upon indifferent subjects as if we had no existence, though I could not help thinking that Mrs. Merridew looked occasionally at Ranger with an inquiring glance, made the more significant by the twinkle of her irrepressible eye. I fancied she must at least have met him before. Ranger, on the other hand, though acute and observant in most matters, was curiously the contrary where ladies were concerned. I knew this failing of old.

Presently an opportunity did present itself for joining in their conversation. Mrs. Merridew, in continuation of some previous discussion as to their plans for the season, said to her cousin—

'Yes, if I do not get a letter to-morrow I think we had better go on to Baden-Baden and wait for them there. But it's rather an awkward place for two ladies who are alone. I know it no more than you do, and I am very doubtful as to the hotels. Some of them may be quiet enough, but there is no knowing which, and it would be very weak to trust to the guide-books.'

'If you will allow me, madam,' said I, with a decision which Ranger regarded with looks of dismay, 'I can furnish you with the address of the best and quietest house in the place. It is not exactly an hotel, but the better suited perhaps on that account.'

And I gave her a card which I had in my pocket-book, at the risk, as it afterwards occurred to me, of being taken for a touter engaged by the concern.

I had no need to have any fears as to my reception. Mrs. Merridew was all graciousness, accepted the card, and returned thanks as if for a great favour, assuring me that she would certainly avail herself of my courtesy if she and her cousin—the reference to her cousin was encouraging—should really go to the place. But they were not sure, they expected some friends in Paris—and so forth.

Even Miss Pembroke put in a word or two expressive of pleasure at the reception of so much valuable information; upon which I ventured to say that they were wise not to stay very long in Paris just then, when even the French all ran away on account of the heat.

Both ladies responded pleasantly to this sentiment; and the ice being thus broken, Ranger—what a diffident man he was for such a traveller!—went into the conversation with a plunge. He was quite as well received as myself—rather better, I thought, as far as Mrs. Merridew was concerned.—And the result was that before dinner was over we were all upon very friendly travelling terms.

There was only one point in the conversation that need be recorded. Alluding to the many things to be seen in Paris, Mrs. Merridew said—

'We do not, however, see half so much on our way as we might; for we go everywhere in a carriage. I am a very good walker, but my cousin, I am sorry to say, is a very bad one.'

Ranger's face expressed visible satisfaction at this announcement. But he was probably not observed, for the ladies rose immediately afterwards, and we bowed them away from the table—Ranger, by the way, regarding them attentively till they passed out at the door. 'The vulture eye pursued the trip of those small glancing feet'—or would have done so had those objects been in sight.

We of course went on the Boulevards. As Ranger placed his arm in mine preparatory to our saunter among the life of the city, I felt him clutch me with what the French call emotion.

'I am not sure, of course,' said he, 'and would not hazard anything as yet; but I have a strong suspicion that Miss Pembroke's are the Mice and Mrs. Merridew's the Beetle-Brushers.'

III.

Ranger came over to me—he had not to come far, only to the Hotel des Princes—on the following day, soon after breakfast.

'Congratulate me,' he said; 'I think I have a clue.'

'Clue to what?' said I.

'To the owner of the feet,' he said, exultingly; 'and this is how I have got it—Both of the women—if they will allow me to call them so—appeared this morning at breakfast, and the train of conversation which we commenced yesterday, thanks to you, was continued to-day, thanks to them, and was made not quite unavailable, I suspect, thanks to me.'

'Well, what's your idea?' said I, bringing him to the point.

'You shall see,' he said. 'Let me tell you what happened. Mrs. Merridew talked quite unreservedly in my presence about their plans—not only prospective, but immediate; not only about Baden-Baden next week, but their little expeditions during the day. And among other things she said to Clara—why the deuce am I calling her Clara?—but that is the name by which she addresses Miss Pembroke. Among other things that she said to Miss Pembroke was this: "We must not forget to call at the bootmaker's."'

'Was that all?' I askedly, discouragingly.

'Wait,' returned Ranger. 'In the course of the conversation I actually heard the addresses of the bootmaker's at which they were to call.'

'Something may come out of that,' said I.

'Something?' cried Ranger, 'everything I should hope. They seem to have boots in preparation. They intend to call at twelve o'clock. I mean to call at one—they must surely have left by that time—and it will be hard if I do not find out something. Come with me, like a good fellow.'

So like a good fellow I went with him. It was only into the Rue de la Paix, and the bootmakers were well known. We were there ten minutes before the time, but seeing nobody in the front shop we ventured to enter and open our campaign.

Ranger had an order for some dress boots, for which he was duly measured, and while this process was being performed he took care to engage the shopman in conversation.

'Do you make ladies' boots?' he asked—the slimy villian, as if the shop was not full of feminine articles.

Yes, without doubt, the Frenchman answered; they made everything of the kind for great ladies of the world.

Were they they making many now? was the next question.

Ah, his faith, yes, certainly, for great ladies among the English living at the hotels. They were sending that afternoon to Maurice's, to the Castilione, to the Louvre, to the Grand, and elsewhere.

And the shopman pointed to a number of packets piled on a counter ready for delivering.

Ranger acknowledged the information in a careless manner, and then gave some preposterous order in reference to the making of his own boots, which sent the man away to consult his master.

'Now,' said Ranger, when the shop was clear, 'let us see if we can find out anything like a fact.'

So he overhauled the parcels on the counter with rapid assiduity, and presently raised a cry of satisfaction.

'See,' said he, 'there are two packets for the Grand Hotel, one directed to Madame Merridew, and the other to Mademoiselle Pembroke.

—There were certainly two packets so addressed, and he held them up triumphantly.

'Look,' said he, 'there seems to be a couple of pair of boots in each, and one packet is much smaller than the other.'

'There does seem a difference in the size,' I observed; 'and the next question.'

It was easy. The larger packet was addressed to Madame Merridew; the smaller one Miss Pembroke.

Ranger was quite idiotic in his demonstrations at this discovery.

'I told you so,' said he; 'I know that Clara—that Miss Pembroke—had the smallest feet. Look, look, here are the Mice, unmistakably; and here—does not the foot proclaim itself?—here are the Beetle-Crushers.'

Appearances were certainly in his favour, and I congratulated him upon the discovery.

'Now,' said I, 'you may make your court without fear of making a mistake.'

He was in ecstasies at the idea, but still seemed to require my help, and insisted that I should dine with him again that night at his hotel. I could not choose but promise.

IV.

At six o'clock—they dine early at tables d'hote in Paris—I was again among the gilding, the glass, the plate, the flowers, and the damask that distinguished the dinner at the Grand Hotel beyond all other dinners of its class.

Again we were early; again the opposite neighbours were late; and when they appeared at last they brought with them a companion upon whom we had not counted. It was a baleful being in the form of man.

Not a man that we could object to, however, upon general or particular grounds. He was a gentleman, that was evident, and one who, without any appearance of dictation, took command of the party as if by a natural right. He ordered the wine, and summoned every other function connected with the control of the feast, as if he were in his own home. He was a man, perhaps, of forty years of age—we could not object to that at any rate—a well-looking, well-mannered, conventional style of person, with an air of opulence about him, and a serene way of not seeming to care a straw about anybody, which goes a great way at a table d'hote, to say nothing of other places.

The new comer engrossed the attention of the ladies during the entire dinner. Beyond a slight salutation at the commencement, and an inane remark about the weather from Mrs. Merridew, they took no notice of us. Their conversation, too, unconcerned as it was, gave us no clue to the relation in which the gentleman stood towards them, or to one of them in particular. He was a cousin, perhaps, or an uncle, or a brother of the elder lady—he was too old, surely, to be a brother of the younger, though he might be a pretendu to either of them. The latter idea was not a pleasant one—for my friend was clearly head over ears in love with the lady who was now inseparably associated in his mind with the little feet. So the dinner passed off in as unsatisfactory a manner as could well be to us both; for a part from my sympathy with poor Ranger in his infatuation, the state of mind in which he was quite spoiled him for purposes of society.

An incident occurred towards the conclusion of dinner, however, which gave him relief. Mrs. Merridew's French maid entered the room, and brought a message from the manager of the hotel, in answer, as it appeared to a previous application.—'Oh yes,' said that young person, 'Mademoiselle could have a chamber adjoining the apartment of Monsieur and Madame; it was quite ready for her reception.'

I thought Ranger was about to express his surprise at this announcement in an audible manner, so visibly impressed was he at the fact disclosed. Mrs Merridew was not a widow, then, after all, and, what was more important, her husband could not be a pretendu of Miss Pembroke.

We were in doubt when dinner was over whether to begin our evening prowl at once, or to look in for a few minutes upon the party in the salon assigned to the residents of the hotel. It was lucky that we decided upon the latter course; for an incident took place immediately on our entering the room, which brought the adventure to a crisis, and was of immense importance—as the event proved—to the future of my friend.

Ranger was looking about him with an object that may be guessed, when an elderly gentleman—whose erect, bold bearing, said 'old soldier,' as unmistakably as his jovial red face, shaded by the whitest of moustache and whisker, said bon vivant—tapped him on the shoulder to attract his attention.

Ranger turned round in some surprise, and immediately fell to shaking the elderly gentleman cordially by the hand.

'My dear uncle,' said he, 'I am delighted to see you.'

'And I you, my boy,' returned the uncle, beaming with pleasure. 'It is very seldom that you are caught, thanks—or rather no thanks—to that way of yours of being here there, and everywhere at once. You are staying at this hotel? So am I. Very fortunate, isn't it, that we should meet?'

Ranger said it was, and evidently meant what he meant. He introduced me presently to his jovial relative, who seemed almost as delighted to see a friend of his nephew's as his nephew himself. My new acquaintance proved to be General Holsterler, an old dragoon, who, I afterwards learned, was a very rich bachelor, and has made Ranger his heir.

'After a little talk, the General said to Ranger—

'I must leave you for a few minutes. I vote for going together afterwards, but I must go and speak to some people I see at the end of the room. I promised to meet them here, to do a little Paris with them. But stay, why should I leave you? Come with me, and I will introduce you to a group of as charming women as you could wish to meet in a day's march—and that's not saying enough for them, by-the-by.—And, I tell you what, if you played your cards well, you would have a very great chance with the only one of the two who has a chance left open. Come on my boy—and your friend too,' he added, seeing that Ranger was doubtful what to do with me.

So we were both marched up to the end

Peck, Walton, Lang and Rogers, and that the corporation seal of this Council be attached to this resolution. Referred.

But that only so much be levied as shall be necessary to pay the interest accruing due.—Carried.

The Council adjourned till to-morrow at 10 o'clock.

SATURDAY.

The Council met. The Warden in the chair. All the members present but Messrs Scott, Buck and Young.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read over and confirmed.

The Warden read a report from the Engineer on the state of the Mud Lake and Pigeon Creek Bridges.

The report set forth that the Pigeon Creek Bridge was far advanced toward completion; that the estimated amount due the contractor was about $5,000, and that there was nothing in the way of the completion of the contract by the 1st of August.

He also read a letter from Mr. S. Dickson in relation to a sewer from the jail, injuring Mr. Dickson's property.

This was left in the hands of the Warden to do what he considered necessary in the matter.

On motion of Mr. Armstrong, seconded by Mr. Brown, a By-law was read and passed to confirm By-law, No. 29, of the Municipality of Belmont, to dispose of a certain allowance of road in said municipality.

It was moved by Mr. Millar, seconded by Mr. Armstrong,—That a memorial be sent to the Minister of Public Works, in order to have the Locks and Dam at Whitla's rapids (below the town) improved so as that steamboats could come to the Town.

Mr. Millar remarked that in 1865 the Government had been memorialized and appropriation made but nothing more was done.

Mr. Rogers considered it would be an injury to the town, to Ashburnham and to several private parties, and would destroy his mill.

Mr. Millar remarked that Mr. Z. Burnham had got damages long ago, which Mr. Rogers denied.

Mr. Armstrong seconded the motion, because he thought it salt was obtained it would be of great service in shipping it.

Mr. Lang thought salt could be as easily shipped at the Locks.

Mr. Walton said there was no boat on the river, to which Mr. Millar answered there was one at the Locks just now getting repaired.

The Warden remarked that the Town of Peterboro should first move in the matter, if they wanted the Locks fixed.

It was agreed, however, after considerable crossfiring, to withdraw the motion.

On motion of Mr. Rogers, the committee on Finance brought in a second report, recommending $50 to the Band, and $500 of bonus to aid to develope salt works in this county.

A petition of Mr. Romaine for aid towards getting a map of the Town Lithographed, was not recommended.

On motion of Mr. Clegg, seconded by Mr. Probert, a memorial to the Government for aid to repair the Burleigh Road, was read a first time. It was afterwards read a second and third time and passed.

A little discussion was held on the Burleigh Bridge, but the Warden told them it was in the hands of Messrs. Garbutt and Moher, to do what they thought right.

The Council adjourned.

EMIGRANTS.—Daily enquiries are made for farm hands, but few of those who have come here are suited for farm labour. They are generally Mechanics, from London and vicinity, unaccustomed to farm work.—All who have come, we believe, have got employment, and there is room for 300 or 400 more farm hands, and 50 to 100 good house servants would have no difficulty in getting places at good wages. It would be much better for Canada if the London Societies for promoting emigration would send out parties from the rural districts, and leave room at home for the surplus of the towns to move into the country for a year or two before sent here. However, there is room enough in Canada for all that come prepared to work. Those who will not work will soon find their true position.

CORRECTION.—In our report of the County Council last week the Reeve of Belmont assures us that he did not say there were no sheep in Belmont, we willingly make the correction.

The Synod of the Episcopal Church met on the 15th instant. There was a large attendance of both Clergy and lay delegates. The subject of a new constitution occupied a considerable portion of their time, and also the subject of appointments to rectories. There appears a strong disposition on the part of the laity to obtain a voice in the appointment of Ministers, and there are not a few of the Clergy who go with them, believing that if the people support the Minister, they should have a voice in his selection. There can be no doubt but this would have been carried but for a motion of J. H. Cameron, who dexterously staved it off another year.

Mr. A. H. Campbell (Peterboro') moved, seconded by Mr. G. T. Denison, another amendment: That when a vacancy shall occur in any rectory, by death, or removal of the incumbent, a vestry meeting shall be called, when the names of two or more clergymen shall be agreed upon by vote of the pewholders and male communicants and presented to the Bishop, who shall appoint one of the clergymen named to this vacancy, or that the vestry meeting may delegate to the Bishop the entire choice.

Rev. Mr. Hilton said it had been told him by a layman this morning, that unless the clergy voted with the laity on this matter of patronage, they would dearly regret it before long. This was a kind of threat which it was very regretful to hear.

Mr. R. Baldwin said, in the diocese of Fredericton the people were allowed to choose their own pastors, and this at the request of the bishop of that diocese himself. Mr. Darling had said that he could not imagine a bishop insane enough to send a clergyman to a congregation who was unacceptable to them. Why, he knew such a man and had seen him. What about the diocese of Ontario? What about St. George's and St. James', Kingston? He did not desire to speak, but he left bound to do so, as these facts had been challenged, and would say no more. (Cheers)

Mr. Grover spoke strongly against delegates being elected for outside parishes from the city of Toronto and said the constitution must be amended so as to completely alter this. The representatives must be residents of the parish which they pretended to come from, or they would in the end be able to elect the parson as well as act for him.

Mr. Cumberland was afraid that there might be a dead lock in the principal diocese of Ontario, supposing the Archdeacon's resolution was carried. He said the laity were not the proper persons to decide upon the guardianship of themselves in spiritual things. Schoolboys were not allowed to canvass for their teacher nor to say who he ought to be, (laughter) and it seemed to him that it was the same restless and mistrustful spirit the members of the Synod were exhibiting this day.

Canon Baldwin was in favor of giving the entire election of the clergymen to the parishes. He was in favor of Mr. Campbell's amendment, and would vote for it.

Mr. G. T. Denison felt that the time had at last arrived when the feelings of the lay element ought to be powerfully enlisted on behalf of the church. For the last few years nothing had been done to concentrate this: all the action had been the other way, and in every shape militated against the interest of the church. This state of things ought to be altered, and he thought Mr. Campbell's motion, which he had seconded, would be first step to bring back the laymen to their duty. The people were the church, and wherever it was practicable, they ought to be consulted. He had gone into a church last Sunday, which, had he not worshipped in it 20 years before, he would have believed to have been a Roman Catholic Chapel. Services of the kind there conducted were driving people to Rome, while the fact of the people having no voice in the management of their parish churches was driving them to dissent. It was time that these things would be remedied, and especially that services of the kind he referred to should be put down.

Rev. Mr. Darling.—Do you refer to the services in my church, sir, or to myself.—(Order.)

Mr. Denison.—I mentioned no names and you have no right to demand them.

Rev. Mr. Darling (excitedly.)—I know you referred to me, for I saw you in my church on Sunday of last week. (Order.)—

Mr. Denison.—I am prepared to vote for the motion which I have seconded, and I think, as I have said, it will be the best means of bringing back the laity to the church and driving from it those pernicious doctrines which ought neither to be taught nor tolerated. (Great uproar.)

Rev. Mr. Darling ascended the platform and again demanded if the last speaker, he would not call him a gentleman, had reference to him or his church in the remarks he had made? (Great applause.) He would draw back the offensive words he had used; he begged to be allowed to recall them; but if the remarks did not apply to him or his church he denied their truth, and declared them to be as silly as they were uncalled for. This was no place to bring forward such accusations; as had already been said this morning in another case; if any charges were to be preferred against him or his teachings let them be sent into his bishop. (Cheers.) He denied that there was any justification for them, and he said in rebuttal that he had more services, a larger congregation, and larger free contributions than any church in Toronto.

Mr. Denison made some observation which was not heard when,

Mr. Darling said—If you did not mean my church, I am willing to take your disclaimer.

Rev. Mr. Baldwin contended that Mr Darling had no right to put such questions, nor to assume what might be very wide of the fact.

The Bishop said the discussion was not upon the Holy Trinity Church and must be dropped.

During the fourth day, the question of the Rectory Patronage again came forward, by Archdeacon Fuller urging the adoption of the amendment he had proposed.

Mr. Holgate, of Milton, approved of the amendment, and urged its acceptance. He thought liberal legislation in church matters was highly beneficial.

Mr. J. H. Cameron, gave notice of another amendment, with a view of leaving the patronage in the hands of the Bishop for another year, and that a committee be appointed to consider the matter during the year, and to report at next meeting of Synod.

Rev. J. Davidson urged the settlement of he question at the present Synod.

Mr S. H. Blake thought there was no chance of arriving at a satisfactory conclusion at this Synod. He was not disposed to resign his right into the hands of the Bishop, or any other man, and he thought that no plan would be satisfactory which did not give the people some voice in the election of their clergy.

Rev. H. O'Meara opposed the amendment of Mr. Fuller, as likely to place both the Bishop and clergy in a false position.

Mr. Campell, of Peterborough, spoke in favor of the parishes nominating to the Bishop.

Upon the vote being taken, Archdeacon Fuller's amendment was lost by a large majority; as also was the amendment of Mr. Campbell.

The second reading of the disestablishment Bill passed the House of Lords by a majority of 24. They propose some amendments, but it is altogether likely that it will pass in nearly the shape it went up to them. The Lords are manifesting a desire to bow to public opinion, and in this they show their wisdom. A contest between aristocracy and democracy is not desirable at a time when the commons is so strong: Indeed not at any time.

DUMMER COUNCIL.

Dummer, June 12, 1869.

Council met at 10 a. m. all the members present.

Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed.

A communication from Ivan O'Beirne Esq., requesting emigration, was read before Council and discussed; when, on motion it was laid over till after the meeting of the County Council.

The petition of Messrs. William McIntosh and William Snelgrove, for aid to erect an Agricultural Building at Warsaw, was laid over until the Council received assurance that Mr. Rogers will grant a lease of the ground for a sufficient time, and to find out what amount the Society will expend on the Building.

Ordered to be paid: To James Robb, to purchase road scraper, $8; W. Darling, part salary as Clerk for 1869, $20. James Welsh, for keeping Mrs. Jackson, $7.50.—

An appropriation of $80, for each of the five road divisions, was made.

Moved by Mr. Wason, seconded by Mr. Payne,—That each road contract be fully completed before any order issue on the Treasurer for pay for the same. Carried.

The Council threw off the statute labor of James McIntosh for the present year, and substituted Wm. Mathews instead of John Hunter, as Overseer of Highways.

A By-law to provide for the payment of money, and a By-law to appoint Road Commissioners, and make an appropriation for Roads and Bridges, were passed.

Clerk instructed to write to Robt. Sloane Esq., Trustee of U. S. S. No. 7, Dummer, and request him to furnish a statement of how the Debentures and Coupons for raising the money to build the School House in said section were to be paid, and if the Trustees ever paid any of said Debentures, Clerk also to furnish a statement to Robt. Morrison Esq.

Council adjourned to the 14th of August next.—Com.

The following letter from Mr. James Finley, formerly of Dummer, but now of New Zealand, will be read with interest by his numerous friends and acquaintances.—The first is to M. Sanderson, Esq., Smith, in which, after the usual introduction, it says:—

"You can tell all our friends that we are well, in good health and spirits, fourteen in number still. The children get a great deal better health here (New Zealand) than they did in Canada.

Your first question in reference to the laws of this country: I may tell you that all the good lands are allowed to be taken up by speculators, nor are they asked to pay taxes, do statute labor, or make any improvement or settlement duty: The Superintendent and Land Agents are all combined, and so is the Government, to keep up this dishonest work. They and their connections are so largely in the land speculation that they make laws to suit themselves. This Province is in their own hands, and their laws are so arranged as to suit their own interest and keep the poor man down. They are making every effort to establish the landlord and tenant system, if possible.

The people here are mostly from the British Islands, and they are not fully alive to their own interest, not near so much as are the people in America. If they were we would soon have a good government with equal rights to all. If the Government here would sell the land to none but actual settlers, and compel them to improve, by a general tax on the absentee lands as well as on the settled lands, and if not paid every three years, as in Canada, sell the lands, this country would soon improve, as more land would then be cultivated in one year than is now done in ten years as things are. If these things were so, then I would say to Canadians come, but I will not till this takes place.

The Government induces all they can to come by false promises, but when here there is a very cold reception indeed, in the "Waste Land Office" to look for lands for their Orders, if they have not plenty of money. When I came here and got my Orders signed, and went to see the Victoria Valley, after travelling 18 or 20 miles over mountains and rivers, I came to a few Canadian settlers, in great poverty, who would be very glad to leave it if they had the means. This Valley was represented in Canada as 100 miles long by 40 miles wide, containing land of the very best quality.—It is, however, about 30 miles long and one mile wide, subject to heavy floods in the rainy seasons; no roads! no markets! and a lot of Maories to live amongst. It is as bad as transportation to go to live there as a family. Dr. Stratford has deceived Dr. Riddell for which and his false statements he may well feel ashamed. There is some good lands at the Bay of Islands and there are a few settlers doing well there, but it can never rise to be much of a place as there is so much bad land about it. The Thames is a mountainous, barren place about 50 miles from Auckland; it is not fit for cultivation. There is a good deal of splendid land at the Wikatao, but speculators have it nearly all blocked up. There is also a considerable tract of good land from Poverty Bay to Taranaki by the head of the Wikatao. I am informed there is abundant good lands there, but that is the place for which the natives are fighting. When the war is over, if Government will place it in the market to actual settlers, and keep out speculators, then I would say to Canadians, come. Although there is a good deal of poor land, the good climate and abundant supplies of good spring water and rapid growth make it just the place for Canadians; as they would soon have large barns, extensive fields, good roads, free schools and railways traversing the country.

There is very little good farming here at present. In this Province the people do not cultivate and summer fallow as they do in Canada, and yet I have seen wheat growing here that would produce 40 bushels to the acre, free from rust, chess, smut, weevil or any kind of blight. Barley, oats, peas and potatoes do well, and so do all kinds of vegetables—a great deal better than in Canada, as there is no frost, while there are constant showers. As to yield I need not write hearsays, I must wait till I have more experience. Apples, peaches and all kinds of fruit do well here, They are ripe just now, and are most delicious.

Give my best respects to Dr. Riddell. He is an honorable gentleman, on whom reliance may be placed, and would do all in his power for Canadians. I have seen a letter of his in the Auckland papers. His intentions are good, and he is straight-forward in all he does. I have not yet written to him, but will, and lay before him what information lies in my power.

Yours very truly,"

The second is to his brother, Mr. John Finley, and is dated Manku, Auckland, February 15, 1869, and is as follows:—

"DEAR JOHN,—It is now twelve months since we saw you, and have not received a letter yet. We wrote to you from Liverpool, when in the English Channel and when we landed at Nelson, N. Z., and two or three times since; we also sent you some papers. John got a letter from Andrew McMillan. We also got a letter from Greenbank, and one from John McKee, and some papers containing Whalen's trials, but we are in daily expectation of one from you.

About 5 months ago, I bought 41 acres of land for £50. It is 35 miles south of Auckland. It is in a good state and of the very best quality; has a snug house on it and in a good neighborhood, close to a school house, post office and church. We moved on it on the 1st of November. We planted 2 acres of potatoes, 2 acres of Indian corn and a lot of vegetables that look splendid. Last week I bought 200 acres of land for £50, and is in close by us. It was sold by auction, in Auckland, at a mortgage sale. There were few bidders, and consequently it fell to me. About 20 acres of it are bush, the rest in fern, and there are several beautiful creeks running through it. We consider it worth £250.

The houses here are light, temporary frames, shingled. Some of the poorer class cover their houses with leaves of the Neeho, a kind of tree. To clear the land they throw the trees at full length, and do not cut them up, what looks like slashing. In the month of March they let the fire through it; they do not log it up, but sow grass seed among the logs, and fence it in for paddock. The fence is three rails mortised in posts. There hedge is used a good deal for fencing. If they cleared the land the same as in Canada and sowed wheat, I believe it would do well. The bush here is not as nice as the Canadian bush, the trees being all limbs and roots, very hard to split. It is so woven with runners that it is impossible to pass through it. The heavy fern burns off in March without mowing, and must be fallowed and bone dust applied, as the fern takes all strength out of the soil, and leaves it in a poor, sour state, and hence the necessity for bone dust. It costs £9 a ton. The stone here is melted lava, but there is very little of any kind of stone. A large part of the land is hard as burnt brick, on which nothing will grow. I did not understand that there was so much bad land in New Zealand, but of course there is large tracts of good land. I wish to give you as faithful an account as I can without praising too much or running the country down.

The Thames gold field has proved a failure, although there are some rich claims.

The County Council closed its sitting on Saturday. The business of the session was gone through very quietly and harmoniously. Owing to arrangements made at the January sessions nothing was granted for roads or bridges, except where it was absolutely necessary. To the Burleigh road $50 were granted; to the bridge over the Ouse on the Dummer and Asphodel boundary, $50; and to the Nassau bridge $100, on the condition that this $100 would complete it.

On motion of Mr. Millar the Council agreed to offer a bonus of $500 for the developement of salt in this County. It was proposed to make the bonus $1000, but Messrs. Millar and Walton opposed this strongly.

The County rate is somewhat less than last year, but so little that it will not be much felt. The tendency downwards, however, is in the right direction.

The Mud Lake and Pigeon Creek Bridges are progressing favorably according to report. The Pigeon Creek part being nearly completed and the Mud Lake part pretty well on. The sum already paid the contractor and which was due him on the work is about $5,000. The engineer considers that there is nothing in the way of completing the work by 1st of August.

THE CROPS.—We receive from all parts of the County the pleasing intelligence that the crops are looking well, and promising. the industrious farmer an abundant reward for his toil and care. The weather that has been cold and wet hitherto has taken a sudden change, and its continuance is desirable. The hay crops will be unusually heavy. The harvest may perhaps be a week or two later than in past years, but our farmers have become able to provide the best machinery to assist in taking it off, so that on the whole it will not be later being settled.

Prof. Mc Gregor the Horse Tamer has returned to Peterboro, and will open a School at this place under a large Pavilion on Hunter St. near the Creek, at 2 o'clock this day the 24th inst, and remain three days, for the purpose of teaching his new system of educating the Horse. He challenges competition.

Prof. McGregor will be in Omemee Monday and Tuesday the 28th and 29th of June, and in Lindsay, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday the 30th of June, and the 1st, 2nd and 3rd of July, on all of these occasions he will exhibit a highly trained horse, and teach his system.

THE CANADA FARMER.—The June number of the Farmer has come to hand and contains an immense quantity of reading matter, and practical hints on agriculture and kindred topics. Every family should have a number, the practical hints of one single number is often ten times the value of the subscription for the year.

AMERICAN GEOGRAPHY AS UNDERSTOOD IN EDINBURGH.—The Vancouver Colonist says an invoice of goods shipped from Edinburgh to a firm in Victoria, came to hand on the 7th may, viseé by the American consul at Edinburgh. The consul and shippers believing Victoria to be an American Colony.

FRANK LESLIE'S LADY'S MAGAZINE for July has been received, and the number maintains the good name of this excellent Gazette of fashion. The plates and descriptive matter will be found equal to past numbers, and quite as interesting to the ladies.

The Rev. Donald Fraser, of Inverness, addressed a large congregation in the Canada Presbyterian Church, here, on Wednesday evening. He took the Book of Ruth as the basis of his remarks. Mr. Fraser is a pointed speaker and must be an effective preacher. He appears to delight in setting forth "Christ and him crucified."

Wool, here, sold as high as 30 cents and 33 cents for fine parcels on Saturday and Monday Tuesday and Wednesday 27 cents to 28 cents was the average price. Very fine wool might bring a little more.

Hunt's Empire Hair Clean is the nortest preparation for the Hair in the market.

The Parliament was prorogued on Tuesday, having sat 69 day. The Governor reserved two Bills for the signification of the Royal pleasure; one in reference to the Governor's Salary, and one on private matters. The important business of the Session was the obtaining and arranging for the Government of the North West Territory. A large sum has been voted for opening up communication to it, and for internal management, and Mr. McDougall promised in the House that he would visit it this summer and report. From appearances they will have to borrow about $8,000,000, on account of the territory; hence, by the end of the year our debt will be over $100,000,000. If, however, they set to work to improve and settle the territory all will be well, but if not it is just throwing away money to have anything to do with it.—Britain has millions of a surplus population, let them be induced to go to these western regions, and let our young Canadians be also be induced by liberal grants of land, and soon the buffalo grounds of the northwest will be alive with industrous settlers. But if the insane Canadian policy be exported to Rupert's land, the wild beasts will not soon be disturbed. We trust that wiser counsels will there prevail.

Important meeting of New York Ladies.

WOMAN'S EDUCATION.

On Monday, the 31st of May, a large number of influential ladies gathered at Dr Taylor's cor. Sixth Ave. and Thirty-eight Street, in response to the call of the secretary of "THE AMERICAN WOMAN'S EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION." A meeting was organized, Mrs. Marshall O. Roberts presiding and after a long and interesting discussion, the following resolutions were unanimously passed. It is proper to state that the Society has been an organized and efficient power in woman's education for over twenty years. The object of its present action is to forward a movement to secure endowed institutions for the training of women to their special duties and professions as men are trained for theirs, particularly the science and duties of home life. The resolutions will sufficiently explain the rest:

Resolved, That one cause of the depressed condition of women is the fact that the Distinctive profession of her sex, as the nurse of infancy and of the sick, as educator of child-hood, and as the chief minister of the family state, has not been duly honored, nor such provision been made for its scientific and practical training as is accorded to the other sex for their professions; and, that it is owing to this neglect that women are driven to seek honor and independence in the institutions and the professions of men.

Resolved, That the science of Domestic Economy, in its various branches, involves more important interests than any other human science; and, that the evils suffered by women would be extensively remedied by establishing institutions for training women for her profession, which shall be as generously endowed as are the institutions of men, many of which have been largely endowed by women.

Resolved, That the science of Domestic Economy should be made a study in all institutions for girls; and, that certain practical employments of the family state should be made a part of common school education, especially the art of sewing, which is so needful for the poor; and that we will use our influence to secure these important measures.

Resolved. That every young woman should be trained to some business by which she can earn an independent livelihood in case of poverty.

Resolved, That in addition to the various indoor employments, suitable for woman, there are other out-door employments especially favorable to health and equally suitable, such as raising fruits and flowers, the culture of silk and cotton, the raising of bees and the superintendence of dairy farms and manufactures. All of these offer avenues to wealth and independence for women as properly as men, and schools for imparting to women the science and practice of these employments should be provided and as liberally endowed as are the Agricultural schools for men.

Resolved, That organization is a most powerful agency to secure these objects; and that the American Woman's Educational Association is an organization which aims to secure to woman these advantages enumerated, that its managers have our confidence, and that we will co-operate in its plan as far as we have opportunity.

Resolved, That the Protestant clergy would greatly aid in these efforts by preaching on the honor and duties of the family state. In order to this, we request their attention to a work just published by Miss Beecher and Mrs. Stowe entitled, "The American Woman's Home," which largely discusses many important topics of this general subject, while the authors have devoted most of their profits from this work to promote the plans of the American Woman's Educational Association.

Resolved, That the editors of the religious and secular press will contribute important aid to an effort they must all approve by inserting these resolutions in their columns.

The Confession of O'Farrell.

The substance of O'Farrell's confession has recently been published in England.—The following is about all of his additional statements.

As to the matter of fear, I do not care a fig. There were ten of us; we swore to effect the Duke's death, and if the person to whom it was allotted to do it did not do it he should die. We were very much exasperated at the time about certain things at home. The ballot took place in Sydney; where I will not tell. The other nine men have gone home. Out here they could not see much to do; the work is to be done at home—chiefly in London. The work I mean is the Fenian organization. All the artizan and mechanical class and a portion of the middle class, we look on as sure to join. Of course the foundation is a republic for three kingdoms—a confederation of fifteen States, three for Ireland, two for Wales, three for Scotland, and seven for England. They were going on the basis of population, but that would not do for Scotland on account of its manufactures and enormous shipping.

Mr. Gladstone's advocacy of the cause of Ireland is to be attributed to fear, and is a result of the Fenian organization. The Presbyterians of Scotland would never have got their church only they fought for it; they were rebels, and they fought and won; whereas the Catholic clergy—of course the Fenians are against them—the Catholic clergy have been opposed to every movement that would benefit Ireland. The Scotch clergy, to a man, are for their own people. The Pope, in the first instance, prefers England to Ireland. The execution of the Duke was resolved on as the lex talionis for the execution in Manchester.

ADMITTED TO BAIL.—The notorious Dr. Davis, against whom a true Bill was found at the last Assizes, for abortion, and who has since been enjoying his freedom in the neighboring republic, was yesterday admitted to bail, in the sum of $1,200. It will be remembered that he was captured while passing through in the Great Western Railway, a few days since. He was brought up yesterday morning, and the case having been proved against him, he was committed to stand his trial at the next Assizes. He likewise owes a fine of $100. Spectator.

Educational Convention of the County of Peterborough.

To the Trustees, Teachers, and Friends of Education.

Having been appointed a committee to organize the first annual Convention of the friends of Education in the County, we hereby invite all Teachers, Trustees, and others interested in the cause to meet in the town of Peterboro', on Thursday and Friday, July 29th and 30th. At no time for the last twenty years were so many and so great changes likely to take place in our School system; and at no time in our history could the friends of Education in this Province do so much to shape the course of School Legislation. We deem it important that you should meet and organize this summer, for the following reasons:—

1. The Associations already in existence have steadily influenced the formation of the School law.

2. The Provincial Association should become, as soon as possible, a strictly representative body, deriving all its strength and membership from Local Associations.

3. The benefits to be derived from such Organizations are very numerous.

4. Meetings to exchange thought on such important questions will infuse zeal and energy into our Teachers, and wake up others to a deeper interest in this mighty engine of modern civilization, the education of every youth in our land.

It might be well to have three sessions per day:

1st. A morning session, from 9 to 12, for the transaction of business.

2nd. From 2 to 6, for Discussion on various topics connected with Education.

3rd. An evening session, from 8 to 10, for public lectures, essays, &c., &c.

Amongst the subjects to which the Association might direct its attention are the following:—

1. Framing a constitution and adopting By-laws.

2. The best mode of teaching Reading, Writing, Spelling, Grammar, Arithmetic, &c.

3. School organization and Discipline.

4. Constitution of the Council of Public Instruction.

5. The suitability of the text-books now in use.

6. The preparation of new books.

7. The immediate and provisional adoption of some suitable works on Natural Philosophy, and Mensuration.

8. The most effectual means of governing School, whether by Moral Suasion or Physical force.

9. The proposed School Bills.

10. Miscellaneous Subjects suggested at the time by any member.

These and such topics might profitably engage your attention during some part of the Session. It is hoped that we may be able to procure the services of two good Lecturers for the evening meetings, with special reference to the wants of an audience which will no doubt be largely made up of those who are only indirectly identified with the great work of Education. If several essays were prepared the reading of which would not occupy more than 20 minutes each, they would add materially to the interest of the occasion. Especially do we urge upon Teachers and friends of education the duty of careful preparation, some little sacrifice, punctual attendance, and hearty co-operation, so that our first County Convention may be a great success—a brilliant point of departure in our future educational history.

JAMES STRATTON.
JAMES B. DIXON.

Peterboro, June 14th, 1869.

For the Examiner.

The Anniversary of the Bible Christian Sabbath School, Peterboro, was celebrated on Sunday and Monday, the 13th and 14th inst. Bros. Wm. Hooper, from Exeter, preached the three anniversary sermons. His subjects, we consider, were well selected. In the morning: Psalms cxxvi. 6,—"He that goeth forth and weepeth bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing bringing his sheaves with him." In the afternoon, from the words—"Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it," Prov. xxii. 6. In the evening, from Isaiah liii. 11,—"He shall see of the travail of his soul and shall be satisfied. We think our brother's efforts on this occasion were most happy, and trust that the words preached may be as bread cast upon the waters to be seen after many days. The congregations were large and attentive. Many of our friends from the surrounding country, came to greet their much esteemed brother, with whom in past years they had held sweet counsel. The tea meeting on Monday was a decided succes. About three o'clock the children began to gather, and their smiling countenance indicated glad hearts full of prospective happiness, which we think was fully realized. From 100 to 120 children took tea, after which a large number of persons from town and country partook of the good things provided.

The amount realised after meeting expenses was about $40.00. In the evening a public meeting was held—Pastor in the chair. After the opening exercises and a few remarks from the chairman, a short extract from the report of the Sunday School was submitted by Bro. Weir, the features of which were encouraging. Bro. Chapple next addressed the meeting, speaking of his mission to Prince Edward Island, and his success, and was listened to attentively. Next Mr. Rutherford, Supt. of Wesleyan S. School was called on, who made a few very practical remarks. Then Bro. Hooper spoke whose remarks were both appropriate and pleasing. The interest of the meeting was kept up to a late hour, the choir discoursing sweet music, which added much to the interest of the evenings exercises.

UNION SCHOOL.—The examinations of the Grammar and Union Schools are now being held. Yesterday the principal's room was examined. Very few parents or visitors were present. To-day Miss Hutton's room, Miss Beatty's, Mr. McFaul's, and Mr. Taylor's will be examined. On Friday Miss Borrowman's, the primary department, and Mr. Smith's. Examination times are very interesting to the pupils at least, who should be encouraged by parents and others who take an interest in the education of youth. A day spent at the examination of a child is doubly repaid in the progress during the term.

AN ATTEMPT AT ARSON.—On Tuesday night about—o'clock, a light was discovered in an old uninhabited house north of the Union School, and near the residence of Mr. Fl

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms:

Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, acquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams; and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and safe administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

N. B.—Ask for Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by medicine Dealers everywhere. 23

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

HORSES SAVED.—The lives of thousands of horses have been saved during the past year, and the credit is due to "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy." This preparation is being extensively used, and exacts from all the highest praise. Nothing of the kind has ever before been half as successful or given such universal satisfaction; it cannot be equalled. We can confidently recommend it, and would advise all who own horses to keep a supply of it on hand—it may be the means of saving your horse's life. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co., is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., Proprietors for Canada. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

blue eyes and soft happy beauty had fairly completed the impression which they had made upon him from the first.

Colonel Merridew—the new comer turned out to be an old comrade of the General's—left us at the door of the theatre, and took the ladies home, while the rest of us went somewhere to supper. The latter arrangement was Habberley's doing, for Ranger was disposed to make himself as generally disagreeable as persons in a similar condition usually do.

When we in our turn arrived at the hotel the General went off to bed—it was quite too—and then Ranger, who evidently wanted to talk about himself, insisted upon taking me up to his room. On our way we passed the apartments occupied by our friends, and then Ranger, who dared not speak for fear of being overheard, pointed triumphantly to some objects lying on the door-mats.

At one entrance there were two pairs of boots, belonging to a lady and gentleman respectively. At the other was a single pair, particularly small, and to an amateur in feet, I should say, justifying all the praise that had been bestowed on them.

I dragged Ranger from the spot, where he seemed absurdly disposed to linger.—When we reached his room he became guilty of raptures conduct to a ridiculous degree, and then asked me, in a lucid, interval, if I did not think him the happiest of men.

I declared my very high opinion of his state of bliss, and got away from him as soon as I could.

He must have been pleasant sleep that night—if he slept at all.

(To be Continued.)

OMAHA.

The following description of the city of Omaha appears in a portion of a private letter published in the Montreal Witness:—"I have been here for the last four days and must say that it is not what it is represented to be. While in Chicago, all the people I met advised me not to go to Omaha but having started for that place, I was determined to go there and see for myself. Business is carried on very differently here from what it is in Canada. Shops, theatres, play-houses, &c., open to-day (Sunday) the same as any other day in the week. Trade is slack, and they do not require any more help. Even mechanics have not such easy times getting work as it is generally supposed. I met a mechanic who had been looking for work for two weeks. The fact is this place is crowded out, and the only people making money are land speculators, hotel keepers and saloon keepers. Of the latter they will count two to one with the stores. It is of no use for a young fellow to come here, unless he has money to start for himself. Salaries are lower here in proportion than in Montreal and there are very few first-class clerks required, and the others do not get much. Scores have left this place disgusted. Beside's, if a young man takes a situation two chances to one he would have to work on Sunday. With regard to the climate, not having been here long, I cannot say much, but what I can is emphatic. There is a strong wind blowing all the time, which raises the dust in clouds, and at times to an extent that you cannot see across the roads. You can form no idea what it was like. And again, when it rains, the mud makes the road almost impassible. From an elevated spot the sand can be seen on the river banks and plains rising with the wind just like a cloud. In fact, I think it would beat Africa for sand and dust. It is colder than in Montreal only there is no snow."

CARRYING THE WAR INTO AFRICA.—The ladies of Clyde, Ohio formed a temperance organization and proceeded to business in a novel manner. They visited the bar-rooms and billard-saloons, took their knitting with them, and sat down for a siege. Many were the revelations that were made during these calls, some of which sadly proved the "deceitfulness and desperate wickedness" of the human heart. In a few instances wives met their own husbands, mothers their sons, and young ladies their lovers. This state of things caused an agitation, seldom if ever known, and the result was that after two weeks' visitation the billard-room keepers gave up and left the town. Then the ladies petitioned the City Council to prohibit the sale of liquors, which was done, and dram drinking at public resort has been stopped.

A needy dead-beat performed a novel operation to procure his liquor the other day in Hamilton. He ordered a pint of the best gin in a grocery, and after he had pieced the refilled bottle in an inside coat pocket, he suddenly found he had left his money at home. He replaced the bottle on the counter, saying he would leave it until he returned with the cash. He never came back. The grocer was about pouring back the gin into the cask, when he was astonished to find it was nothing but a pint of rain water. The bottle tricker carried two bottles of like appearance.

Rev. Henry Ward Beecher last Sunday preached against the schemes of Church union, whether planned by Pope, Protestant or Pagan, Christian religious bes in the number of the existing denominations. He hopes to see the sects increase in number rather than combine, and prefers to have the Gospel preached by wicked men rather than to have it not preached at all. He did and claim originality for these novel ideas but showed that they were in consonance with those of that acute lawyer, Saint Paul.

THERE is an old tale, of which, though idle in itself, the use may be good. A certain man would never go to church but when he heard the saint's bell, would say to his wife, "Go thou to his church and pray for me and thee." One night he dreamed that both he and his wife were dead, and they knocked together at Heaven's gate for entrance. St. Peter, who acted as the porter, suffered the wife to enter in, but kept the husband out, answering him, "She is gone in both for herself and thee. As thy wife went to church for thee, so she must go to Heaven for thee.

By way of proof that property is not depreciated in value in Tipperary, it is mentioned that a nobleman has just purchased a demesne on the Suir for £40,000 which had been bought 14 ye rsago for £17,000, and had been resolved in the interval for £24,000."

A sneaking, dirty fellow being in fear of bailiffs, wished to disguise himself. A wag gave him the following advice:—"Wash yourself, and hold up your head and I assure you nobody will suspect who you are."

An editor was attacked by a man for some personal grievance. The editor says: "To avoid injury him, and prevent his injuring us, we got out of the way.

How to "cure people's heads,"—Go late to church.

THE YOUNG WIDOW.

Who is running—somewhat wary,
Free and easy, but not bold;
Like an apple, ripe and mellow,
Not too young, and not too old;
Half inviting, half repellant,
Now advancing, now shy,
There is mischief in her laughter,
There is danger in her eye.

She has studied human nature,
She is schooled in every art;
She has taken her diploma
As the mistress of the heart!
She can tell the very moment
When to sigh and when to smile;
Oh a maid is sometimes charming,
But a widow all the while!

Are you mad? Oh, then how restless
Will her pretty face become!
Are you angry, she is wretched,
Saddened friendless, tearful, dumb;
Are you mirthful? How her laughter,
Silver-sounding, will ring out!
How can lure, and catch, and play you,
As an angler does a trout,

Ah, "old fogellis," nearly fifty,
Who are plotting deep and wise;
Ye "Adonises" of twenty,
With the love-light in your eyes—
You may practice all the lessons
Taught by Cupid since the fall,
But I know a little widow
Who can win and fool you all.

Effects of Kindness to Animals.

"I have great faith," says a correspondent of the Practical Farmer, "in the education of animals:"—"I believed in the efficacy of the gentle touch long before I knew of Rarey's method. His success has been but a confirmation of my theory. It may be set down as a fixed fact that whenever a horse or a cow or an ox is timid and shy—will not allow a person to approach or handle, unless it is so situated that it cannot escape—a wrong system of treatment has been pursued. The animals of the farmer are naturally disposed to be docile and affectionate. They recognize the kind voice of a friend almost as soon as a human being would, and manifest their affection in a variety of ways, which none but the kind master or keeper will observe. Have you not seen teamsters who could manage their teams by a soft word far better than others could do by blobs and harsh words? I have. Have you not seen a milkmaid approach a cow with a bucket without the slightest evidence of a step across on the part of the animal to evade her? Ant have you not seen the cow make every effort to escape from the next milkmaid who approaches her? I have, and the reason was that the first had always treated her kindly and gently, while the latter had pursued the opposite method. Animals almost invariably partake of the character of their masters. The kind, gentle, and considerate master will generally have kind, gentle animals; while the rude, impetuous, and cruel master will rarely fail to have animals whose dispositions will mate with his own. Is not gentleness the true method? I think so. God has given those poor brutes for our use; they minister to our wants, are patient and uncomplaining, and certainly deserve such treatment at our hands as will show that we properly appreciate the kindness of the Almighty in giving them to us for the purpose of adding to our comfort."

HOW TO TEST FLOUR.—The writer of the following, which we quote from a provincial paper, speaks as one with authority, and we give it the advantage of our circulation for the good of whomsoever it may concern:—"Place a thimbleful in the palm of the hand and rub it gently with the finger. If the flour smooths down, feeling gentle and suppery, it is of inferior quality though of fancy brand, high priced, and white as the virgin snow drift, and will never make good, light, wholesome bread. But if the flour rubs rough in the palm, feeling like fine sand, and has an orange tint, purchase confidently. It will not disappoint you. Such flour, whatever may be its branded reputation, though its price be at the lowest figure, will make good, light, nutritious bread."

OYSTER SOUP.—Slice some onions, fry them a light brown in a quarter of a pound of butter, then put them on the fire to stew in some stock, as much as required for your soup. About half an hour is sufficient before you serve, add two or three dozen of oysters, with their liquor strained. Thicken with the yolks of six eggs, and season it with white pepper, mace and salt; it must not boil after the eggs are put in, but thicken like custard. Any kind of good broth or stock makes the foundation.—Some add to this, before the eggs are put in, a glass of white wine.

APPLE DUMPLINGS.—With a narrow knife or apple corer take out the core of pared tart mellow apples, and fill the place of the core with sugar; roll out some plain light pie crust about two-thirds of an inch thick, and cut it into pieces of just sufficient size to roll the apple in. Enclose an apple in each piece, tying each in a thick piece of cloth, well floured. Boil one hour without intermission. A better way is to cover each cloth with soft boiled rice, enclose the apple in this, and tie the cloth around snugly, and boil until the apple is tender.

ROAST MEATS.—In every case where meat is washed before roasting, it should be well dried before it is put down to the fire. As soon as the fat begins to fall from the meat put down a clean dish, and then baste with the dripping as it falls; the meat should not be sprinkled with salt until nearly cooked, or too much gravy will be produced. Preserve the dripping; pour it from the dish into some boiling water; leave it to cool. When cold it will be hard and white; and all the impurities will be deposited at the bottom.

TO KEEP PICKLES.—Keep pickles only in wood or stone ware; anything that has held grease will spoil pickles. Stir them occasionally, and if there are soft ones, take them out and stir the vinegar, and pour it hot over the pickles that are in a solid state. Always keep enough vinegar on them to cover them well. If it is weak, take fresh vinegar and pour it on hot. Do not boil vinegar and spice over five minutes.

BUCKWHEAT CAKES.—To every three bushels of buckwheat, add one of good heavy oats; grind them together as if there was only buckwheat; thus will you have cakes always light and always brown, to say nothing of the greater digestibility and the lightening of spirits, which are equally certain.

SUGAR CANDY.—Six cups of sugar, one cup of vinegar, half a cup of water. Boil about half an hour without stirring. Try a little cold water, and add any essence you choose when done. Stirring turns it back to sugar. Pull it until white, and cut in sticks.

Cows and sheep should not be pastured together. Horses and sheep form a more suitable partnership, as their gaanian habits are similar.

Sixteen pounds of grease, and the ley from one barrel of ashes will make a barrel of soap.

GO TO THE EXAMINER OFFICE.

To Messrs. CHAMBERLAIN & SOLS, Conway P.O' County of Lennox, Ontario, Canada.

Tamworth, County of Hastings, Province of Ontario, Feb. 9th, 1869.

This is to certify that during the winter of 1866 I was taken with a weakness of the ancles, which gradually during the spring of 1867, extended to my knees, and on up to my hips, and I became so weak that I could not walk, but was confined to my chair. For about two years, while this weakness was coming on me, and afterwards, I sought medical advice, employing, at different times, three doctors, and medicines of different kinds, prescribed by friends, but of no avail. I continued to get worse and worse, until the summer of 1868, when I was induced to try the great Shoshonees Remedy by reading the cures performed, in a pamphlet. At this time I had begun to feel the Pearlessness in my hands; in fact I was getting almost helpless. I have taken two bottles of the Shoshonees Remedy and two boxes of the pills and I am entirely restored to health. I never expected to get better, but simply tried the medicine as a sort of forlorn hope. This case of mine was not a private one, but known to all my neighbors and friends; and to any one afflicted as I was, I have only to say try the Shoshonees Remedy; I believe it will cure you,

MARY ANN DOUGHTY.

Sworn to before me at Madoc, County of Hastings, this ninth day of February, 1869.

A. F. WOOD, J. P. &c.

I hereby certify that I have known Mrs. Mary Ann Doughty for the last fifteen years; she is a woman of probity and truth. I have known her before, during, and since her illness. I believe her certificate to be true in every particular. I know that while ill her case was declared hopeless; and I know that she has, since her recovery, always attributed her recovery to the Shoshonees Remedy. Whatever may be the peculiar properties of this medicine, one thing is certain, that in her case, it has acted almost like the performance of a miracle.

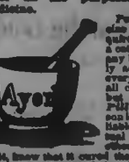
Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Laxative Medicine.



Perhaps no one medicine is so universally required by everybody as a cathartic, nor was ever any before so universally adopted into use, in every country and among all classes, as this mild but efficient purgative Pill. The obvious reason is, that it is a more reliable and far more effectual remedy than any other. Those who have tried it, know that it cures them; those who have not, know that it cures their neighbors and friends, and all know that when it does cure it always—that it never fails through any fault or neglect of its compounder. We have thousands upon thousands of certificates of the remarkable cures of the following complaints, but space will not here allow them to be published. Those complaints are known in every neighborhood, and we need not publish them. Adapted to all ages and conditions in all climates; containing neither calomel or any deleterious drug, they may be taken with safety by anybody. Their sugar coating preserves them ever fresh, and makes them pleasant to take, while being purely vegetable no harm can arise from their use in any quantity.

They operate by their powerful influence on the internal viscera to purify the blood and stimulate it into healthy action—to remove the obstructions of the stomach, bowels, liver, and other organs of the body, restoring their irregular action to health, and by correcting, wherever they are found, such derangements as are the first origin of disease.

Minute directions are given in the wrapper on the box, for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Languor and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Biliousness, Jaundice or Green Sickness, Bilious Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Palpitation of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back and Loins, they should be continuously taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change those complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression a large dose should be taken as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels into healthy action, restoring the appetite, and invigorating the system. Hence it is often advantageous when no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

For Diseases of the Throat and Lungs, such as Coughs, Colds, Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Consumption.

Probably never before in the whole history of medicine, has anything won so widely and so deeply upon the confidence of mankind, as the wonderful remedy for pulmonary complaints. Through a long series of years, and among most of the races of men it has risen higher and higher in reputation, as it has become better known. Its uniform character and power to cure the various affections of the lungs and throat, have made it known as a reliable protector against them. While adapted to milder forms of disease and to young children, it is at the same time the most effectual remedy that can be given for incipient consumption, and the dangerous affections of the throat and lungs. As a provision against sudden attacks of Croup, it should be kept on hand in every family, and indeed as all are sometimes subject to colds and coughs, all should be provided with this antidote for them.

Although settled Consumption is thought incurable, still great numbers of cases where the disease seemed settled, have been completely cured, and the patient restored to sound health by the Cherry Pectoral. So complete is its mastery over the disorders of the Lungs and Throat, that the most obstinate of them yield to it. When nothing else could reach them, under the Cherry Pectoral they subside and disappear.

Singers and Public Speakers find great protection from it.

Asthma is always relieved and often wholly cured by it.

Bronchitis is generally cured by taking the Cherry Pectoral in small and frequent doses.

So generally are its virtues known that we need not publish the certificates of them here, or do more than assure the public that its qualities are fully maintained.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

For Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

As its name implies, it does Cure, and does not fail. Containing neither Arsenic, Quinine, Bismuth, Zinc, nor any other mineral or poisonous substance whatever, it is entirely harmless. The [illegible] of it is in the ague districts, are literally [illegible] and we believe without a parallel in the history of Ague medicines. Our pride is gratified by the acknowledgments we receive of the radical cures effected in obstinate cases, and where other remedies had wholly failed. Unacclimated persons, either residents in, or travelling through miasmatic localities, will be protected by taking the AGUE CURE daily.

For Liver Complaint, arising from a torpidity of the Liver, it is an excellent remedy, stimulating the Liver into healthy activity.

For Bilious Disorders and Liver Complaints, it is an excellent remedy, producing many truly remarkable cures, where other medicines had failed.
